Unlike many overdresses, which are wired into the lampshade effect, this overdress is drawn in at the bottom with shirring thread. It slopes down to a point at the middle of the back and is finished with a narrow band of satin ribbon tied in a simple bow at the front with ends finished with pendents like those on the bodice.

The undersleeve of the bodice is finished with a band of lace like that in the neck, and it is put on without fullness. There is a crushed turn-back cuff above the band of lace, made of the chiffon.

A novel feature in the bodice is the introduction of a narrow casing in the maline ruff which holds a tiny supporting wire. This is for the purpose of holding the ruff in an upstanding position away from the neck.

There is nothing intricate or difficult in the shaping of this dinner gown. The materials are not unusual, and altogether it is one of the most practical and graceful models which Paris has furnished for the present season. In spite of the curious and sometimes freakish departures from the conventional which one sees so often pictured, it is the practical gowns of this character which have pleased discriminating women of fashion. There is plenty of distinction in the wonderful materials and in the use of color, not to mention tassels and bead work, without resorting to bizarre designs to get chic effects.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

NEAT AND DURABLE SERVING APRON IS NOT HARD TO MAKE

A SERVING apron must be made to stand weekly tubbing at least, and substantial materials are the only kind worth making up. A good and not very sheer India linen is used in the apron which appears in the illustration, and the lace is a strong cotton weave with square mesh and figure.

The bib and apron are cut in one piece, with the shoulder pieces cut long enough to reach to the belt in the back. The ties are long enough to make a bow with short ends.

After the apron has been cut out the insertion is basted to the right side. Then the fabric underneath it is split and turned back. Over the raw edges bias tape is basted and then machine-stitched down. This covers the raw edges and strengthens the apron. The tape, showing through the material, and the even rows of machine stitching which fasten it to place make an additional ornamentation to the apron.

Hems at the bottom and at the ends of the ties look best when sewed by hand, but few people feel like giving so much time to a detail that is not important. Careful, even machine stitching is decorative and quite good enough.

A wide binding of the fabric is placed on the apron at each side and starts at the rows of insertion. The ties, which are made separately, are sewed to this binding. All these details of construction are planned to add strength to the apron, because its freshness is its best feature and that means soap and water and rubbing and ironing many a time before the apron begins to go to pieces.

There are quite a number of designs for serving aprons. It is best to select one and stick to it. The example here is large enough for any maid, and is as easy to launder as a handkerchief. Four such aprons ought to insure freshness in the maid's appearance at all times.

For ladies who serve their guests, smaller, more lacy and much more elaborate aprons, ribbon-trimmed, in fact much fussed up with bows and furbelows, are made. Friends make them for one another, and they are dainty bits of finery. Such aprons are usually made by hand. Cross-barred muslins and other sheer materials are used for them, with val or cluny laces in trimming. Little pockets are introduced and many sprightly bows and rosettes of gay ribbon. Pretty figured voiles, white ground, covered with scattered flowers, and figured lawns, are fine for such aprons.

Fashion's Fickleness.

In the present day there are many things needed to make the wardrobe complete, and as fashions in these items change with such rapidity it means there must be a constant renewal of veils, collars and such like if the appearance is to be kept entirely up to date.

There have been many novelties introduced this season, some of which are both practical and pretty, others again merely eccentric.

Floral Garnitures.

Flowers continue to play a most conspicuous part both in day and evening dress. There is scarcely a coat and skirt to be seen lacking its imitation buttonhole. The small, tight Victorian posies are no more, having given place to a single bloom, such as a gardenia, carnation, a cluster of ash berries, together with the waxlike camellia.

For the Busy Mother.

When making pants for little boys, instead of making holes in the waistbands sew on loops of narrow hat elastic large enough to slip over the waist button and you will find it a labor saver.

A half-yard of ten-cent curtain scrim soaked in kerosene and then dried makes a cheap and good dustless duster.

New Hanky.

For the shiny nose or the powdered one there is a brand new hanky coma to hand. It has a wide hem either an inch or an inch and a half and a touch of delicate color. Either the hem is a dainty tone of pink, lavender or blue, or the center is tinted and the hem is white.

BREEDING PLACE OF MICROBE

French Bacteriologist Gives Salt the First Place as an Infection Ground.

Salt has always been regarded as a pretty safe thing, but M. Andouard, a French bacteriologist, has been making a study of it, and has come to the conclusion that it is a veritable hotbed of microbes of all kinds, and a possible source of more or less severe infections.

Sea water near the shore, and consequently in the immediate vicinity of the saltbeds, contains, we are told by the Paris correspondent of the Lancet, considerable quantities of bacteria, of which the preliminary clarification beds favor the multiplication. This naturally is augmented by the raking of the beds with unclean instruments and the feet of the waders.

The gray salt used for cooking and [illegible] is less rich in harmful germs, though not entirely exempt. In spite of the redissolving and clarification of the fresh liquid and the action of heat to induce a recrystallization, there still remain about 2,400 microbic colonies to the grain of white salt. On a ham cured in salt liquor, M. VanErmengem found the very poisonous bacillus botulinus.

M. Andouard concludes from his observations that salt is a substance more or less impure from both the chemical and bacteriological point of view, and that serious measures are called for refining, sterilization and clean packing—to put an end to the disorders that may be caused by this product.

Interesting Legal Opinion.

A decision by the supreme court of Minnesota is not supported by many authorities but is regarded by the New York Law Journal as "of much interest and essentially just." It is the case of the city of Minneapolis versus Canterbury, in which it not only applies to an officer of a municipal corporation the obligation of absolute faith in dealing on behalf of the city, but similarly, as with an agent in behalf of a private principal, holds him liable in a direct action to recovar the proceeds of the breach of his public trust inuring to his public benefit. The court laid down the rule that "where a city officer, while acting in an advisory capacity to a committee of the council charged with the selection of a site for a building to be used in connection with his department, purchased certain land with the view of selling it to the city for such purpose, and conveyed it to a third person, who, pursuant to the plan, sold it to the city at an advanced price, the officer became a trustee for and liable to the city to the extent of the difference between the price paid by him and that paid by the city."

Lights of London.

London will be one of the best lighted cities in the world when the installation of a new system of centrally suspended lamps using high pressure gas with inverted burners has been completed. Although the amount of illumination will be increased by 6,000 candle power, it is estimated that a saving of about $34,000 a year will be made over the old syatem.

EASILY FOUND A LOOPHOLE

Once More Corporation Lawyer Made Himself Entitled to Admiration of Mankind.

They were swapping tariff yarns.

"You know Simonpure Spring water—that Canadian water," a drummer said.

"Sure, sure, Mike," they chorused.

"Well, just before the Dingley tariff bill passed, a bunch of Boston boys bought the Simonpure spring. They thought to get rich by importing the water under the new tariff law.

"But Dingley, bless his heart—Dingley put a duty of 25 cents a gallon on spring water and the Boston boys were in a pretty fix."

"What did they do? What did they do, eh?

"Why, they sought out a corporation lawyer, of course, as you or I'd have done."

"'Lawyer,' they said, 'we want to break the law.'

"The corporation lawyer thought hard. Then he winked.

"'Freeze your water,' he said. 'Import it in cakes and bottle it on this side of the border. There ain't no duty on ice.'

"Aren't these corporation lawyers wonders? The scheme worked and it's still working. Simonpure spring water is drunk all over the Union today and on every gallon of it thanks to that corporation lawyer the government is robbed of 25 cents."

Good in Buttermilk.

In his examinations Dr. Elie Metchnikoff, the Russian author of the theory of phagocytosis, has observed that the germs which curdle the Bulgarian milk are larger and more powerful than the ordinary germs. This germ has the effect of stimulating other germs in the body, tending to increase the life of a person. The white corpuscles of the blood, or leucocytes, which Dr. Metchnikoff terms phagocytes (cells which devour), are nothing more nor less than the defensive army of the corporeal system. They especially struggle against the microbes of putrefaction. This germ bacillus Bulgaricus is being extensively introduced in this country.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY. JANUARY 1,. 1914.

A HAPPY New Year to all our readers.

A BRIGHT and happy New Year. May it be the best and most successful business year of our advertisers.

MOST of us have not accomplished all that was hoped in 1913, but there is the incontrovertible fact that big thihgs will be done in 1914.

IN accordance with the provisions contained in Article III, Section 14, of the State Constitution, the General Assembly of Maryland will convene at Annapolis on Wednesday, January 7, 1914, at 12 o'clock noon.

GARRETT county made an advance in all lines during the year 1913. We expect greater prosperity during the year beginning today, for the merchants, for the farmers, for the miners, for the lumbermen, consequently for the bankers. Let us all pull together to accomplish this end.

THESE words of Mr. James Ellis are very appropriate for this first day of the new year: "Let us try to be good humored for a single day; if we let the sunlight into our souls, it will generate in our hearts every good motive, and we shall find life strengthened and ourselves armed to fight."

THE year just closed dealt kindly with The Republican, in an increase in its subscription list, in its advertising patronage and in an enlarged, well printed and newsy paper. We also enjoyed a liberal patronage in our printery and have a large amount of work booked for the year just entered.

HERE is hoping that Rev. Dr. W. D. Reed may succeed in reorganizing the Mountain Lake Park Association and under his administration, see the Park filled with people; many new cottages erected and every cottage in the Park occupied; a great sale of lots, and the Park regain its former prestage.

HERE is to the Civic Club! May the New Year bring to them greater triumphs than any of the years gone by. May they see the iron cemetery fence and gates an accomplished fact; their cook book issued and having a great sale and Oakland, "the City Beautiful." May they have the most earnest cooperation of the community in their good work for they deserve everything good.

ONE good thing Garrett county received from the year 1913 was the inauguration of the Garrett County Agricultural Association and the successful fair it held. The Republican wishes the officers of the Association a ten-fold increase over the past year at the fair next fall, and the farmers and other exhibitors the pleasure of winning many blue ribbons. May we suggest that the everybody begin to plan for the fair of next October.

AN official count shows that 475 banks have applied to the Treasury Department for incorporation under the new Federal reserve system authorized by the Glass-Owen law. Of these, 422 are national banks and 33 are state banks or saving and trust companies.

There are about 7500 members of the existing national banking association, which the Federal reserve system will supersede, and less than 6 per cent of these have signified their acceptance of the new law.

PRESIDENT WILSON and his administration leaders have decided that right of way for special legislation at this session of Congress shall be given to consideration and enactment of rural farm credit laws as an adjunct to the currency law. Trust legislation, subordinate to the demands of the farmers of the county for better banking facilites is to come later in the session, but it is not to interfere with plans to establish agricultural banks to help out the farmers.

ALL past records in crop values in the United States have been exceeded by 1913, according to the annual crop report of the department of agriculture today.

The gross commodity production value of American farms is set at $9,750,000,000. This is nearly half a billion dollars more than the crop value of 1912, itself a record year. Of this huge sum products of the soil amounted to $6,100,000,000, while the total farm values of live stock amounted to $3,650,000,000.

Deducting for crops allowed to remain in lands and for consumption, the department places the cash sales of crops at $2,929,000,000 and the cash sales of live stock at $2,219,000,000.

It is estimated that this production was divided among approximately 6,000,000 farms. This makes the cash income per farm figure $900, according to department experts who have employed 144,564 farmers in all parts of the country in tabulating these estimates.

1913 HAS PASSED AWAY.

The old year has stepped aside to make room for the New Year. The old year was good to Oakland in very many ways. We escaped destructive fires; we were free from epidemics of all kinds; no financial crisis was experienced, and no calamity of any kind was permitted to afflict us. As we look back and review the 365 days through which we have passed we cannot help being thankful to the Giver of all good gifts for His blessings and mercies which have been ours to enjoy. Truly our lines have fallen in pleasant places and we have been greatly favored as a community.

As a city we are delightfully located; we are well provided with the necessities of life; we are surrounded by peace and plenty. Oakland is a city of beautiful homes, with the conveniences which add to the comfort and pleasures of life. Oakland has good churches and faithful pastors, successful physicians who care for its health, well equipped school buildings and capable teachers in the recitation room, merchants who provide well and liberally for our every day's needs as was proven by last year's record.

Our local market throughout the past year provided well for the wants of the inner man, with the best to be had and in great variety, and more than that, shipped to other markets large quantities of "food stuff." We had plenty for ourselves and to spare.

During the year which has just expired the spirit of improvement prevailed. New houses were built; other houses were remodeled and enlarged; unsightly places were made presentible, and all through the year the thought of a cleaner and more sanitary Oakland was in evidence.

During the year the suburban homes around Oakland were multiplied attractive comfortable homes. The financial statements of our banks show an increase in the wealth of the community.

What is true of Oakland is true all over Garrett county. There has been a steady advance throughout the year. New house, new barns and silos are seen in what ever direction you travel. Neatly painted houses, vines and flowers in the grassy front yards have increased as the year passed away. Signs of thrift and enterprise are noticed everywhere. All through the year, all over the county, the spirit of progress and development has been manifest. Our people are better housed, better dressed, better able to live than they were one year ago.

Here and there beautiful church edifices have been dedicated to the Almighty, another fevidence of the prosperity of our citizenship.

The year 1913 certainly treated the inhabitants of this mountain region with a generous hand. Because of its kindness may we catch an inspiration to more earnest work, for greater success in all lines and for more noble and useful lives, and when the New Year of today shall become the Old Year of tomorrow and we review its past, may the record be brighter, more hopeful and more satisfactory.

WHAT THE REPUBLICAN WOULD LIKE TO SEE

What the Republican would like to see accomplished during the present year:

1. The National pike completed to the State line; the State road completed to Accident; work at least begun on a State road from Accident to Friendsville and Grantsville, and several sections of road built under the Shoemaker law.

2. The Board of County School Commissioners receive the money they so much need to put the school system of the county in a more efficient condition, to build a model school house such as is badly needed and deserved at Accident, which is a splendid location for a county high school, to build a new and enlarged school building at Swanton, which is an absolute necessary; also new buildings at other points; the school term increased to eight months and a better salary for the teachers.

3. The adoption of a county-wide local option law.

4. The acreage of land in cultivation largely increased, producing such crops as oats, buckwheat and potatoes, for which this county is noted. Garrett county should furnish the eastern shore of Maryland with all the seed potatoes they require, instead of sending to the State of Maine for them. We came far short of raising enough buckwheat to meet the demands of our millers. Oats are shipped into the county in car load lots. Garrett county should be shippers instead of importers.

5. The farmers raising more horses, cattle, sheep and hogs, as well as increase the number of chickens, eggs and butter

Could we have wish our granted as above there would be more money in the county, consequently more business for the merchants, more work for the mechanics, homes improved, more machinery on the farm, and instead of 65 per cent. of the county being in the woods, there would be beautiful meadows, rich pasture fields, well-filled barns and graineries, and a happy and well contented people.

Business Conditions Unsatisfactory.

The Bel Air Times says: As the year 1913 draws to a close, the business of the country is in a most unsatisfactory condition and the benefits promised by the Democratic party to follow the enactment of the new tariff, have not been realized. In the leading industrial centres factories are running on shorter time and this cuts down the wage workers earning capacity, Railroads are hauling less merchandise and this cuts down the number of employees needed to operate them and restricts construction and equipment purchases. Money has been scarce in the great banking centres and at high rates of interest and borrowers have found it prudent to keep close to shore. The high cost of living continues but with the disadvantage to the wage earners reduced earning capacity, and with many skilled workmen out of a job, the leaders of the Democratic party have speeded the passage of the new currency legislation in the hope that by this means disaster may be averted by widening the basis for credit. All patriotic citizens are hoping for the best but there is serious unrest and anxiety throughout the country over conditions and a growing feeling that the new policies now being put into operation are producing results entirely different from what was promised.

A FABLE.

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY

JASON KEP

Once upon a time a man who had waxed rich on special privileges decided that as old age was coming on, it was about time to do a little good. So he built a big hospital and supplied it with doctors, nurses, saws and carving knives, in a valley below a precipice around which ran a narrow dangerous road that the people of the community had to travel daily, to take care of and patch up the poor victims who didn't happen to be dead after their fall.

And the good people rose up and called him blessed; voted him a gold meda and the ladies sent him boquetsa nd wanted to kiss the dear philanthropist, and all the people were pleased and the politicians were content.

About that time along came a hard headed individual who used his thinker, who took a look and said: "Why didn't that old fossil take part of that money and build a good, safe road around that precipice and do away with all those cripples and dead ones. Don't you know that good roads pay?"

All at once the public saw a light They appointed a good road day and all the people went out and worked on that day, and it was election day, and they built a good, safe road for their little ones to travel from childhood to manhood and womanhood. Yea, even to a ripe old age, and all the people were glad.

Then the hospital was out of a job, the carving knives were turned into pruning hooks and with the pruning they judiciously pruned the gratting politicians in the region of their Adam's apple, which was a good place as the effect was all that could be desired.

But the philanthropist felt peeved when he saw he had expended so much money foolishly.

The good people of New York are figuring on building some big hospitals or sanitariums to take care of and patch up the alcoholic. Will they never see a light?

What a foolishness, why not remove the cause and the hospitals will not be needed, neither will the insane asylums or jails have to be enlarged.

Say! Will you ever see a light?

How about the saloons in your town?

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Mormonism.

To the Editor of The Republican:

It may not be uninteresting or unprofitable to call the attention of your readers to the great social and political sore on our body pohtic, that abomination of iniquity that has been, and is yet a curse to our community and one of its worst and most treacherous enemies. As to its origin.

In the early part of the century there were great spiritual awakenings. There were few preachers, so young men who were ignorant, yet gifted with speech, took it up and began to preach. Sidney Rigdon, of Western Pennsylvania, was one of these. He was a member of the Baptist church. He aspired to membership, but failing in his ambition, went to what was then called the Campbelite church, when his cunning and hyprocitical pretensions so offended the good men of the church that he was expelled. He then formed an independent church in Pittsburgh.

Here in the Book Rooms he found Spaldings book. Spalding was a superannated minister who wrote this book hoping to realize some money out of it. Rigdon saw his opportunity so he changed the book so as to make it appear to be a revelation from the Lord to him.

He soon thereafter went to Mentor, Ohio.

Joe Smith was born Dec. 23, 1805, at Sharon, Vt. At the age of 10 he moved to Palmyra, N. Y. His parents were ignorant, untruthful and dishonest.

In 1819 during a revival at Palmyra, Joe was greatly impressed by and wrought up over the subject of religion. He went to the woods to pray and as he says, asked the Lord what church to join. He was told that all sects were wrong. This was his first vision at about 16 years old. For several years he seems to have been in this state of mind. During four of these years he was absent from Palmyra, and worked for Wm. H. Sabin, of Washington county, Pa., at whose home was the widow of Solomon Spalding. In a trunk in the garret was found the manuscript which Mrs. Spaulding had received from the publishers at Pittsburgh after the death of Mr. Spalding. After Joe went back home, Rigdon visited him in 1827. Soon after this Joe said the Lord told him he was to be a prophet and restore the gospel which had been taken from the world centuries before.

The angel Moroin, son of Mormon, an ancient prophet told him this, and took him to the hill Cumorah, now owned, it is said, by Admiral Samson, where he found golden plates with the records of the original inhabitants of America. These he translated into English. These golden plates were prepared, so it is claimed, by Mormon, who gave them to Moroin his son, who in the year 420 buried them in the hill of Cumorah, four miles from Palmyra.

Joe hid behind a curtain in the kitchen and translated the engravings on those plates to a scribe outside the blanket, who wrote what he read. Eleven men testified that they had seen the plates, but not one of them could read a word, so the world had to take Joe's word for it. This translation of Joe's proved to be the Book of Mormon and the church was at once organized with five of these eleven witnesses.

Joe was ordained and baptized by Oliver Cowdery; then Joe returned the compliment and fixed Oliver, and thus the long lost gospel was restored thro' the later day prophet. Oliver however in a few years was cast off from the church and given over to the buffetings of Satan, for lying, theft and open adultery with a servant girl. He died a drunkard. Martin Harris, a scribe, was cut off for wickedness. As Joe said, he was not fit for decent people to notice.

Two others of the witnesses, were finally sent to jail for immorality and crime and then shot by a mob, who broke into the jail.

The church made no headway in New York because those who new him would not believe him as he was a lazy, dishonest liar. All he gained in New York were those associated with him in the fraud, whom he got to do the work, while he prophesied. This was the origin of the Latter Day Saints or Mormonism, organized April 6th, 1830.

They never called themselves Mormons when on a mission for the church better styled a proselyting expedition. Pratt, a strolling preacher, was one of the first converts. He visited Kirtland at Mentor and became an enthusiastic convert. Pratt went to Kirtland, Ohio, where he baptized 130 in four weeks and soon he had 1000 followers. Then a temple was erected at a cost of $40,000. Joe Smith and his followers joined forces with Rigdon at Mentor and their headquarters were established at Kirtland, but the establishment of a fraudulent bank by them at this place led to their expulsion, for Joe Smith admitted that he and Rigdon had to fly from justice at midnight. These charges followed Joe and being over him until death, viz. (1) Immortality, to cover which the doctrine of spiritul marriages and polygamy began to be justified in 1836.

(2) Dishonesty in money matters.

(3.) To justify himself he said, Mormons were God's peculiar people to whom He would give the world, as they were the only meek people. It was not stealing to "take what belongs to ones self."

In the last few years you could hear this justification urged from Mormon pulpits, as well as in private life. Joe came into possession of Spalding's book, which was a story of the ancient American, written in his old days in hope of making some money on which to live, but it has no merit. Joe's imagination could use it, so he changed it to suit his purpose. He found he could make money out of it, so he invented the story of the golden plates with Urim and Thumnum, and St. John's rod, to account for the origin of the book as divine.

In 1832 Brigham Young, a painter by trade, from Boston, was converted to the faith. He was the first to use the gabble called "the gift of tongues." It became rather uncomfortable for them in Ohio, so we next find them at Independence, Mo., which Joe Smith said was the centre of the earth, the site of "the Garden of Eden."

But sturdy settlers there were not ready to surrender their God given rights even at the command of a Mormon prophet. Trouble soon followed, the Mormons were worsted and departed for Nauvou, Ill. There they built a city, intending to remain. They increased in numbers; sent out missionaries who went abroad heralding their persecutions and winning converts.

Joe Smith got reckless the old nature will crop out—and took property and wives for spiritual purposes. He was arrested, but the hope of the church was at this time still in him, so his followers had to get him free at any cost.

In 1844 the editor of a paper accused Joe of taking the wife of the editor as a spiritual wife. Joe had the authorities of the city in his power, so they punished the editors and destroyed their presses. Joe resisted arrest.

Gov. Ford persuaded him and his counsel to yield and put themselves under military protection. Joe was in jail at Carthage; 5000 Mormons were in arms there. A company of 200 Missourians assaulted the jail and killed the prophet and two others. This act however aroused sympathy for the saints and it won them friends.

Joe however died at the right time. Sidney Rigdon wanted to be the prophet but Brigham Young now appeared on the stage and took the reins of government. He told them that God had called him but his strong will had more to do with it than the call. Rigdon left the church.

But lest I occupy too much of your space, Mr. Editor, let me pause here and I will continue next week.

Yours truly,
HAM.

Sudden Death.

Charles Bill, Sr., died suddenly Sunday at his home in Grantsville, in the 83rd year of his age. Death was due to heart failure. He was Grantsville's oldest citizen. Leaves many relatives some of whom live along George's Creek.

CHRISTMAS AS IT WAS OBSERVED IN OAKLAND

The Day Was Generally Observed And A Happy Day Was Spent.

Christmas day out doors was as disagreeable as could be. Raining or sleeting most all day. Only those who had to ventured out doors.

The day was generally observed and enjoyed. Business was suspended and the exchange of gifts was universal. By the liberality of our citizens, under the direction of the ladies of the civic club, the less fortunate ones were provided for, and as far as known, no one was left without a Christmas present. For the children, toys and candies; for the older ones, vegetables, groceries, coal, clothmg, etc., which brought to the homes of the poor a day of joy and good will.

As announced in the Republican public services were held in St. Matthew's Episcopal church and St. Peters' Catholic church. In the evening the Presbyterian Sabbath school had their annual Christmas entertainment and gifts.

Many happy amily reunions occurred and the Christmas dinner was an occasion of great enjoyment. The homes were decorated with evergreens and filled with the spirit of the Yule time season. The holiday was made more joyful to many because they had not forgotten their less fortunate neighbor and townsmen.

Miss Eva Welch went to Cumberland Monday to spend several days.

Misses Lula Friend and Lucile Echard are visiting Dr. Gore's family in Clarksburg, W. Va.

A friend of U. G. Ford, residing at Thomaston, Alabama, sent him a lemon measuring 14 inches in circumference.

W. A. Kelley, of Stanton, Va., and Miss Artie E. Kelley, of Morefield, W Va., were married in Cumberland on Christmas eve, by Rev. Mr. Brown Christmas morning they came to the Park and ate their wedding dinner with Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Hardesty, going to Keyser in the evening, where they will make their home. Mr. Kelley belongs to Capt. Hardesty's crew.

The Christmas entertainment held in the Methodist church filled the church with a delighted audience. The program was one of the best ever given in the church. A cantata. "Around the Throne," was greatly enjoyed and well rendered.

Mr. and Mrs. Alderson White arrived here Friday last. Mr. White will return to Pennsylvania next Monday and resume his work with the Rumford Baking Powder Co.

Michael Glen, of Westernport, is a guest of Captain and Mrs. B. L. Hardesty.

BITTINGER.

All officers and members of the Mutual Telephone Company are requested and urged to attend the annual meeting of stockholders to be held in Bittinger on Saturday, Jan. 3d, 1914, at 10:00 o'clock a. m.

The pupils of the Lutheran Sunday school received their Christmas treat immediately after exercises last Suncay afternoon.

John Walburn, of Jennings, was the guest of Miss Myrtle Wiley, at her home on Christmas day.

Lester and Oscar Hetrick spent Christmas with their gradmother at Mountain Lake Park.

Charles F. Broadwater, of the Backwoods settlement, was a business caller in this village last Saturday afternoon.

Miss Myrtle Wiley who resided at Mountain Lake Park during the past summer, returned to her home at this place last week.

Dr. R. C. Bowen, of Grantsville, was called to this village last Sunday by the illness of an infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Platter.

Clyde Broadwater, who is a student at Blue Ridge college, New Windsor, Md., is spending the holidays with his parents here.

The Naval Observatory has arranged to send a time signal to mark the death of the old year and the birth of the new. It will be spread broadcast over the Atlantic Ocean and the American continent by the navy's great radio station at Arlington. All ships and shore stations equipped with radio receiving apparatus and even amateurs are asked to listen for this signal and to inform the observatory if it was received by them.

The signal will begin at 11.55 p. m., seventy-fifth meridian time, December 31.

The KITCHEN CABINET

IT IS not in a man's creed but in his deeds, not in his knowledge but in his wisdom, not in his power but in his sympathy that there lies the essence of what is good and what will last in a human life.

HELPFUL HINTS.

A small rubber mat in the kitchen where one stands is a great rest to the feet. A few folds of carpet will answer as well if the rubber mat is not a possession.

To make sauces, fillings or any dressings which require flour or cornstarch, mix the dry ingredients together well before adding the liquid, and a smooth sauce will always result. Flour or cornstarch will be smooth if added to melted fat and well mixed before adding the liquid.

To clean and toughen a broom, dip it in hot salt water a few times, shake out and hang up. Letting a broom stand on the straws will ruin its shape.

To keep sparrows from roosting or nesting, stuff the places with rags dipped in kerosene. In a day or two they will give up the places.

A small bottle of chloroform in a fur chest is a fine germ killer. An ordinary cork will allow evaporation, or a few punctures may be made in it.

Put a pad of oil cloth or any cloth over the corners of the table before placing a new cloth on, and the corners will not wear off. The best covering for a kitchen table is zinc, and when one has once had it done it will last for years. Just simply wiping it after every day's use will keep it clean.

When making a present to a friend, if the box is an attractive one which holds it, the gift is more keenly appreciated. Cover soiled boxes with pretty wall paper and use the one which harmonizes with the gift to be inclosed.

How many housekeepers know the value of the little scrub brush which may be bought for two cents? It may be used to scrub the potatoes, clean the grater, in fact it is indispensable for this, for cleaning greasy pans, and the drip pan of the gas stove. In fact, there is no limit to its usefulness.

If the closet has a cassomine which rubs off, tack cheese cloth all around. It will save the clothing and may be kept fresh and clean.

Lace curtains may be mended very neatly by putting a piece of net dipped in starch and applying them to the torn or worn places. After it is dry trim the edges carefully.

A piece of gum camphor in the silver chest will keep it from tarnishing.

We must be as courteous to a man as to a picture, which we are willing to give the advantage of a good light.

SANDWICHES IN SOCIETY.

Now that the afternoon tea is such a cosy event of affair even among the "simple livers," it will not be amiss to dig up a few sandwiches appropriate to such and other occasions. A dainty sandwich is indeed a tasty tid bit, and it needs care to prepare and combine mixtures.

If the bread is buttered on the loaf before cutting it may be cut thinner, as the spreading of even softened and creamed butter often crushes them.

Sandwiches will keep moist and fresh for hours if wrapped in a dampened napkin with a dry one over it.

Ripe Olive Sandwiches.—Stone half a cupful of ripe olives; add one sweet green pepper, remove the seeds and chop all together until very fine. Combine with cream cheese and have a filling which is especially delicious. Season the cream cheese with French dressing before mixing with the olives. Ripe olives are especially nice alone, chopped and mixed with French dressing.

Fig Sandwiches.—Chop fine one cup of figs. Cook to a paste with a half cupful of boiling water. Add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and set away until cold. Spread on buttered bread and sprinkle with chopped nuts.

Sweet Nut Sandwiches.—Chop together one-half cup of seeded raisins and a cupful of walnut meats; add a quarter of a grated cocoanut and a tablespoonful of grated chocolate. Mix well together and moisten with cream.

Date Sandwiches.—Use whole wheat bread for these. Chop a cupful of dates that have been stoned; add a tablespoonful of orange juice and sprinkle with cinnamon.

Chives chopped or cut fine with the scissors and added to cream cheese well seasoned with salt and paprika makes a most appetizing filling for sandwiches.

Do not grasp at the stars, but plain, common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.

There are many people who balk at the thought of eating left-over food. Their idea of hash is the limit of their culinary knowledge on the subject. Now, hash is a homely old dish of our grandmothers', and is not to be despised. There is hash and hash "out of all whooping," as Shakespeare says, but well made hash is both palatable and attractive.

The careless, improvident person is wasteful of small bits of food and vegetables, which, if carefully combined, make attractive dishes.

Even a dish for one is better saved than wasted. In one family where nothing is wasted and there are small dishes of food left, they are combined in tasty small dishes and placed on a tray where each member of the family may choose which he likes best, or they may take turns in having the first choice. Even a stalk of celery with an apple and a few pieces of nuts and a tablespoonful of salad dressing will make a nice dish of salad for one.

A tablespoonful of chicken in a dish of rice will flavor the whole dish and make a pleasant change.

The coarser stalks of celery, which are not nice enough to use on the table, may be cooked until tender and served in a white sauce on toast or used as a flavor for soup stock.

Knowing how to utilize left-overs is a science in itself, and will help out many a housewife when unexpected company arrives. Left-over mashed potato may be made into potato puffs or croquettes, or simply saute in a little butter after making them into flat cakes. A delicious cream of potato soup may be prepared with a cupful of mashed potato. Boiled potatoes may be hashed brown or creamed.

Every bone left from the steaks or other cuts of meat may be utilized in soup stock. Sauces and many dishes are so much better flavored if made form stock, rather than water.

A most appetizing dish may be made of a little left-over steak. Cut it in bits to serve, and place it with a layer of potatoes sprinkled with onion and a little stock in a casserole. Cover with tomatoes and bake until the potatoes are tender. Season every layer before adding the tomatoes. Chicken or any kind of meat may be served this way, and the addition of a few peas sprinkled over the top makes a most tasty and also pretty dish.

A bit of chicken combined with cold boiled potato, an apple or two, a little celery and salad dressing makes a most appetizing salad.

Friendship is love boiled down and flavored with kind thoughts, kind words and helpful deeds.

Failure is often that early morning hour of darkness which precedes the day of success. —L. M. Hodges.

A SYMPOSIUM OF SOUPS.

This is the time of all others when a hot, nourishing soup is most acceptable. It warms the very cockles of the heart on a cold winter night, and is one of the best of dishes to send one out into the cold, cosy and warm.

Turkish Soup.—Cook one-fourth of a cup of rice in a quart of boiling water until nearly tender, then pour off the water and pour over a quart of soup stock, and cook until the rice is tender. Put two cupfuls of strained and stewed tomatoes in a saucepan, add a slice of onion, eight peppercorns, one stalk of celery, a little salt and a small bay leaf. Cook half an hour; add this to the rice and stock. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two of flour, stir until smooth, add a little of the soup to thin it, then stir it into the boiling hot soup. Boil for three minutes, then strain.

Cream of Celery Soup. Cut a quart of celery into pieces, add two quarts of water, and cook ten minutes. Pour off the water and add three cupfuls of white stock and cook until the celery is soft; rub through a strainer, put a cup and a half of milk to scald with a slice of onion. Remove the onion and add the milk to the soup. Put as much of the celery pulp through the sieve as possible. Bind with two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked until smooth. Add to the soup and stir until thickened; add salt and pepper to season and one cup of whipped cream.

Barley Soup.—Take two pounds of the shin of beef, a quarter of a pound of pearl barley, a bunch of parsley, four onions, six potatoes, salt and pepper and four quarts of water. Put in all the ingredients and simmer gently for three hours.

Parrot Buys the Paper.

A parrot that purchases the newspaper every morning is owned by Patrolman Jerry O'Brien of Allston street, Charlestown, a retired patrolman. Each night Mr. O'Brien leaves a penny outside the window sill, and when a newsboy passes in the morning Polly shrieks, "Say, boy, bring in a paper!" The boy brings in the paper and takes the penny.—Boston Traveler.

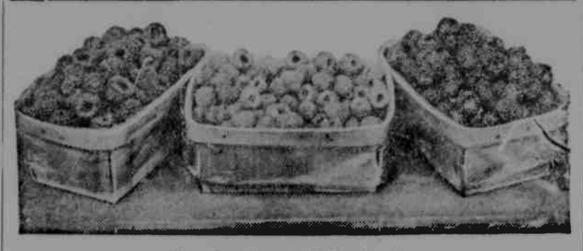
Warning to Mothers

Trying to make a left-handed child use his right hand often turns him into a stutterer.

Thrift at Any Cost.

"Holy mackerel!" roared Crabshaw up the dumbwaiter shaft. "Why do you play that one record over and over again without a change?"

"Recense," Pennypincher angrily shouted down. "I hate the darn thing, and I want to wear it out, so I can throw it away."



Apparently Ripe for School.

Sylmer Lytton must have been something of an enfant terrible if we may accept the testimony of his grandson, Lord Lytton, who has just delivered a lecture in London. Lord Lytton said: "At the age of nine this precocious reader of books startled his mother by saying: 'Pray, mamma, are you not sometimes overcome with the sense of your own identity?' His mother replied: 'It is high time you went to school, Teddy.'"

USING INSECTICIDE IN DORMANT SEASON

Fine Assortment of Raspberries.

The discovery or invention of the cheapest and most easily prepared of all the insecticides and fungicides and the one which can be used to greatest advantage during the period of vegetative dormancy, the lime-sulphur spray, was one of the happiest of recent years.

It has proved by far the most dependable agent in keeping under control that most destructive and excessively multiplying of all orchard pests, the San Jose scale and likewise all the other fruit tree scales and was soon ascertained to be equal to and in some instances superior to the famous Bordeaux mixture for the extirpation or rendering inert the over wintering germs of blights, rusts, fruit-rots and other fungous diseases, says a Missouri writer in the Farm Progress.

Bacterial blights, crown galls on various trees and berry bushes and a few other rather rare tree diseases do not however yield to this or any other chemical application, and can only be kept in check by frequent use of the knife, pruning shears and by digging out and burning. But for the insects and diseases above enumerated, when made according to the stanard formula and applied at the proper time and in the proper way, it has no superior as an insecticide and fungicide. It may be adapted to other purposes also, as, for example, to the spraying of poultry houses, pigeon lofts and inclosures for the larger animals.

One very successful poultry grower uses it in the place of the common lime wash in his poultry houses and claims that it is an absolute remedy for and preventive of mites and other parasites when applied to the walls as a spray and of scaly leg and other skin diseases when well diluted on the legs and other parts of the fowls affected and, in fuller strength, to the perches and nest boxes.

When a large number of trees and shrubs are to be treated the spraying solution can be more economically made at home than purchased in concentrated form. The directions for making the winter spray are as follows: Slake 30 pounds of best lime in iron kettle in just enough water to do it thoroughly, and while it is slaking add 30 pounds of flour or commercial sulphur by dusting it on the bubbling lime, and stir it vigorously to thoroughly mix the two ingredients, adding enough hot water to make the stirring easy.

Let it boil for one hour and when partially cooled strain through sacking into a large barrel. When ready to use, add enough hot water to make 100 gallons and apply while still quite hot.

For the small family orchard it saves much trouble to buy the concentrated lime sulphur solution—prepared with chemical accuracy at a number of manufactories—by the barrel and dilute each gallon with 11 gallons of hot water. A barrel of the concentrate sold last year for eight dollars, with one dollar rebate if the barrel was returned. This is by no means an expensive preparation, as a single gallon of the concentrate, reduced according to directions, will spray a quite large tree.

The spraying should be done as early in the winter as possible, choosing a still day, when the mercury is above the frost point. Have every part of the spraying apparatus in order before turning the hot solution into the pump tank. The face of the operator should be protected with a wide-brimmed, old felt hat, pulled well down, and old leather or buckskin gloves should be worn, with warm but not valuable clothing. Always throw the spray with the breeze when there is any of the latter.

Under the best conditions the task is a disagreeable one, but if every part of every tree is thoroughly dampened it will not need to be repeated for a year.

When the treatment is concluded the pump and nozzles and tubing must be thoroughly washed with clear water and dried as soon as possible to prevent corrosion of all the metal parts and injury to the rubber.

MUCH LOSS FROM USING POOR SEED

One Must Continually Select Good and Persistently Destroy Bad to Succeed.

(By A. F. WOODS.)

The importance of natural variation and differences in climate in relation to agricultural production, has never been fully realized. Under natural conditions only those survive which can modify their habits of growth so as to make a successful resistance to destructive influences and propogate their kind.

When man enters in as a factor he may, and usually does in a considerable measure, interfere with these natural adjustments. He selects individuals and cultivates them for some natural peculiarity, and as a result intensifies these features; but unless he follows nature's methods and destroys the plants that are not best adapted to his conditions and requirements he soon gets a mixture of individuals, good, bad and indifferent, and cultivates them all together.

On the other hand, if he selects the individuals that give the best results under his peculiar conditions and prevents their crossing with the less desirable sorts, he soon develops a strain of high efficiency and productiveness for those particular conditions; but, like nature, he must continually select the good and persistently destroy the bad, or eventually lose all and see the variety "run out."

The great importance of selecting and growing seed under the conditions under which the future crop must be grown is now apparent.

Dairying Is Supreme.

The fertility which live stock makes on the farm is one of the advantages to be derived from this class of farming and in all live-stock farming dairying is supreme.

Whitewash Benefits.

A fresh coat of whitewash on the inside of the sleeping quarters always looks good to the prospective hog buyer, and will also tend to check vermin.

ADVANTAGE OF A SEPARATE ROOT CELLAR

While every barn should have a frost-proof cellar, or other room for the storage of perishable green feeds, a separate root cellar is an advantage.

In general feeding we too often forget that the animal body is about three-fourths water, and that any animal requires a large proportion of water in the feed ration.

Green feeds of some kinds should be given at all times of the year for animals to do their best. If one has a silo, then silage will fill the bill.

Pumpkins can be fed from early fall till the middle of winter, and roots—carrots, turnips or sugar beets—should be grown and stored to carry the stock till grass comes.

As evidence of the value of water in feeds and green feeds, we refer to the rapid growth and good health of animals on good pasture.

Animals of all kinds will gain flesh and fatten on good grass pasture, and green grass is from 75 per cent. to 90 per cent. water.

Now, if we will remember this in feeding, and supply some green feeds at all seasons, our farm animals will make greater proportionate gains and turn all the feed to greater account.

Every barn should have a frost-proof cellar, or other room, where roots and other perishable green feeds could be kept through the winter.

E. V. B.

Bribing the Idols.

From J. L. Keeler comes an interesting account of the missionary hospital work at Ch'angli, in the province of Chihli, North China, in its ninth year. One case mentioned is that of a young magistrate who was recently brought in a chair to the hospital with a badly swollen face. The left half of the lower jawbone had been destroyed by an abscess and his whole system poisoned. His arms and legs were dropsical, and for three months his only relief from pain had been afforded by opium. After consulting native doctors in vain, he had burned incense and made offerings at various temples and shrines. To one idol he vainly offered as inducement to cure him the erection of a tablet extolling his healing powers. At another temple he hired a theatrical company to perform religious acts. At last he went to Ch'angli, where a cure was affected. Thoroughly convinced of the uselessness of idols and priests, he turned away from paganism and joined the church.—Christian Herald.

INDUSTRY and MECHANICS

DUST BLOWER FOR HANDSAW

Enables Carpenter to Keep Line He Is Following Clear of Sawdust—Worked by Thumb.

Carpenters will welcome the handsaw blower and hanger designed by a California man. With it they will be able to keep the line they are following always clear of sawdust so that they can cut along it accurately. The blower is removably attached to the upper part of the saw handle, where it can be operated by the workman by the pressure of his thumb. It consists of a rubber bulb with a metal tube depending from it and bent inwardly below the handle of the saw so that it lies close along the saw blade and the exhaust from it is directly in the path of the tool. Anyone who has used a saw to any extent knows how the wood dust collects in front of it, often so obstructing the mark to be followed that it cannot be seen. Instead of the carpenter having to stop and blow the sawdust away, as here tofore, he can now keep the track clear by an occasional pressure of his thumb on the blower bulb, the outrushing air sweeping the powdered wood out of the way.

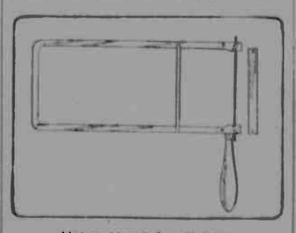
DUSTING BY COMPRESSED AIR

Problem of Removing Fine Rock Dust From Workmen's Clothing Solved by New York Employes.

Compressed air has superseded steam as the motive power for driving rock drills on many of the large excavating jobs in New York city. The men who direct the operations of the air drillers and the men who work in the trenches have discovered a new use for the compressed air after the day's work is done.

The powerful drills pulverize a large amount of rock and the dust is wafted all over the vicinity in which the drilling is being done. The men's clothes become covered with a layer of the pulverized rock, which is extremely difficult to remove by ordinary methods.



The problem of removing this fine rock dust perplexed the men until one of them found the solution by removing the end of the hose which carries the compressed air to a drill and directing the powerful air current on his dust-covered clothes. With a hissing sound the air rushed out and swept away the rock dust instantly. In five minutes the man had cleaned his clothes to perfection.

Now all the men working on jobs where compressed air is used are using the up to date method of cleaning their apparel.

SAWING COPPER AND BRASS

Saw Frame Is Made More Rigid So as to Keep Blade From Breaking—Tension Can Be Varied.

Desiring to do some sawing on copper and brass with a hand scroll saw, I stiffened the frame in the manner shown so that it would keep the saws from breaking. A notch was cut in each end of a strip of wood, just long enough to fit tightly in the saw frame, writes L. L. Llewellyn of Hayward, Cal., in the Popular Mechanics. The tension of the saw blade can be varied by changing the location of the strip of wood.

Tanbark as a Fuel.

Perhaps the most important of waste fuels in the United States has been spent tanbark. A rough estimate would indicate that this material generated a few years ago an amount of steam that would have otherwise required the yearly consumption of about 2,000,000 tons of high grade coal. Yet this valuable fuel was at one time considered a mere detriment and an expense to the leather industry. It was disposed of by dumping it into rivers, filling in waste ground and by making roads with it, often necessitating the paying out of large sums for its disposition.

Russian Pig Iron.

Pig iron production in Russia in 1912 was the largest on record, being 4,118,000 metric tons, or 593,000 tons greater than in 1911. The steel ingot output for 1912 exceeded that for 1911 by 400,000 tons, being 4,418,000 tons.

Cement Output.

The Portland cement output in this country between 1870 and 1879 was only 82,000 barrels. In 1912 the output was 80,000,000 barrels.

MAKE POLES OUT OF GLASS

German Manufacturing Concern Puts Wire in Them to Secure Proper Solidity and Strength.

Near Frankfort, in Germany, there is a manufacturing plant which turns out glass poles for telephone and telegraph wires, says an exchange. In order to give them solidity and strength there is a thick framework of woven wire in the glass. These poles are taking the place of the wooden ones in many sections of Germany.

It may be that in time all such telegraph and telephone poles throughout the world will be made of glass because there are so many advantages in them. In the first place, they will last practically for all time, except in cases of unusual accident, where they may be broken, as in railroad wrecks. They will last even longer than iron or steel, as weather has practically no effect upon them, nor can insects get into them and destroy them.

And in these days when wood is becoming more and more valuable it will be quite a saving of the precious wood to make such things of glass. Experiments are also under way for the manufacture of railroad ties of glass in which wire netting is imbedded in the glass.

Paving blocks are made of glass and have proved to be a most valuable material for street surfaces, being fitted together in such a manner as to be water tight, no water running down between the blocks. There are, in Lyons, France, a number of streets paved with glass, and they have a better resistance than stone, and also are not such great conductors of heat as stone. These glass paving blocks are now said to be actually cheaper than the granite blocks.

MACHINE FOR MIXING PAINT

Excellent Device Constructed of Medium Sized Oil Barrel and Rear Wheel of Brake Bicycle.

As a considerable amount of painting had to be done on our farm, I devised the following paint mixing machine, which greatly reduced the work of mixing and also mixed the paint far better than it would have been possible to do by hand, writes Wilson S. Sutfin in the Popular Electricity.

A medium sized oil barrel was procured and also the rear wheel of an old coaster brake bicycle. The head of the barrel should be removed and the entire coaster brake taken off the bicycle wheel. A board about six inches wide and long enough to project over the end of the barrel so as to hold a small motor, was then obtained. In the center of this board a hole was bored large enough for the shaft, upon which the paddles are located, to revolve freely. This bearing must be kept oiled. The shaft was then fastened on the hub of the bicycle wheel.

Any small motor of one-fifth horsepower or over will furnish sufficient power. In our case we used the washing machine motor. The pulley, if possible, should be removed and reversed on the shaft. The small projecting end must then be tightly wound with adhesive tape. If the pulley has no projecting end, the pulley itself may be wound with tape. The rest of the drawing is self-explanatory.

When the lead and oil are first placed in the barrel, they must be stirred for about ten minutes. Then the stirring outfit can be lowered into the barrel, the rim of the wheel resting on the pulley of the motor.

KITCHEN HATH CHARM

CONTAINS POWERFUL APPEAL TO HUMAN NATURE.

Writer Insists That Protest of Housemaids' Union Is Misdirected—There Can Be No Better Place for Courting.

The housemaids of Cleveland, O., have formed a union, and they are greatly excited over the question, "Shall we or shall we not consent to receive our gentlemen friends in the kitchen?"

Good for the Housemaids' union—I believe in it. Better hours, better pay, better sleeping rooms—I hope the housemaids will get all these things. Why not?

But about this kitchen business. Pause a moment, dear Madame President of the Housemaids' union. What is the matter with the kitchen? Is there something disgraceful about it? Pray tell! And if so, when did its disgraceful dishonor begin?

Ugly? A good, wholesome, clean, bright, cheerful kitchen? Why, to my mind, it's the prettiest room in the house, declares Winifred Black in the New York American. What's ugly about a shining floor, and clean curtains, and a bright range, and rows of good cooking dishes?

I've seen dozens of stiff little reception rooms, with stiff little gilt chairs in them, and a stiff, berosied carpet on the floor, and a stiff gilt mirror on the solemn walls, that weren't half so pretty as a kitchen to my eyes.

I don't see anything disgraceful about a kitchen, unless it is dirty. Seems to me, if I could cook well enough to hold a good place, I'd be proud of it, not ashamed, and, whisper, gentle maidens of the Housemaids' union, I never noticed any aversion to the kitchen on the part of any man I ever met.

The average woman has to argue with her husband by day and by night to keep him from making some excuse to get out into the kitchen.

Don't send your young men away from the kitchen, gentle Hilda, or sweet Eileen. Lead him right in and see how mild and tamable the sight of that shiny range and those rows of delectable spices will make him.

If I had a young man who was a little slow in coming to the point of talking about the flat I'd never see him anywhere but in my kitchen, and I'd wear a good, big, clean, serviceable kitchen apron, when I saw him, too.

Oh, yes, the tube skirts and the elaborate hair are well enough to catch his vagrant eye, but when you want to really enchain him give him a doughnut of your cooking, or a dozen cakes or so with raisins in them, and watch the caution and the reserve melt from his manner like snow in the spring sunshine.

Ole isn't all for moonlight picnics and moving picture shows, Hil just acts that way to please. What Ole really takes an interest in is a good fire on a cool evening, a comfy seat by it, and something good to eat. By this necromancy shall you hold him captive, no matter what yellow-haired siren tries to steal his heart from you.—Exchange.

Cider for Sufferers From Gout.

The unfortunate individual, loving the good things of the table, yet afflicted with the gout, may now take heart of grace, for there is one refreshing beverage which will not be denied him. Cider, it has been discovered, is excellent for gout, and is a splendid tonic for everybody, because of the amount of tannin it contains.

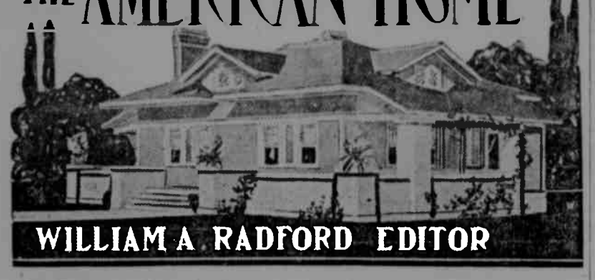
Here is a recipe, handed down in a New England family, for old fashioned mulled cider:

Beat two eggs with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, and pour over the mixture a quart of freshly boiled cider, stirring constantly. Put the mixture on the stove and boil it again. Add some mint leaves, some thin slices of lemon and serve immediately in tall glasses, thick enough to stand the steaming beverage without cracking.

Cider jelly is a delicious dessert for autumn days.

Dissolve two ounces of gelatine in a little water, and when thoroughly dissolved add two and a half pints of cider and a pound of granulated sugar. Boil until it begins to thicken; then strain through cloth and pour into a jelly mold. Serve with whipped cream.

Custom of "Suttee" Survives.



An Indian "suttee" victim case, exemplifying the slowness of Indian customs in dying has been decided in the Allahabad high court. The widow of a Brahmin committed "suttee" on her husband's death, i. e., was burnt alive on the funeral pyre in the presence of the whole village. Five of the relatives were arrested for abetting her suicide, and were sentenced to imprisonment. They appealed to the high court, the defense being that the fire was lighted by supernatural means, the flames descending from heaven. The high court has now rejected the appeal, and has increased the sentences in two of the cases. The present case is only the fourth recorded in the United Provinces and Bengal since 1829, when "suttee" was prohibited.

Oil Against Steam.

Two new fuel ships, the Kanawha and the Maumee, are now under construction for the United States navy. The former will have two three-cylinder, triple-expansion engines of 2,600 horse-power each, and is being constructed at a private yard. The latter, however, will be propelled by two Nurnberg Diesel engines of approximately the same power as the steam engines in the sister ship. Although the hull of the Maumee will be constructed at the Mare Island navy yard, the engines will be built at the Brooklyn navy yard from plans purchased abroad, and will be shipped to the Pacific coast.

The two ships will afford an excellent opportunity for determining the relative merits of oil and steam engines under like conditions.—Power.

WILLIAM A RADFORD EDITOR

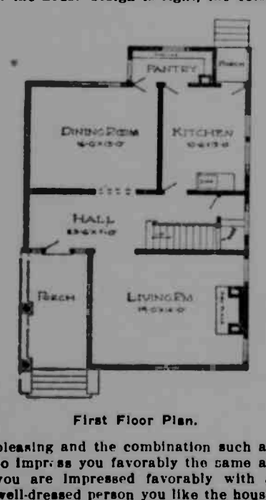
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

This is a good sized house according to modern ideas, being 28 feet by 40 feet six inches on the ground; and the roof is high enough to make room for three bedrooms and a bathroom on the second floor, besides all the closet room any one wants—which is making a strong statement, because some women want two closets for each bedroom and an extra one in the hall for house linen.

The roof on this house is different from the ordinary house roof in that it has an extra wide projection without having the cornice boxed in. We are liable to get into the habit of doing things in one certain way until we think nothing else will do, but the fact is the extra lumber nailed into the cornice adds very little to the comfort of the house.

Generally speaking, it is a good policy not to add anything to the expense of a house that is not necessary either for health, comfort or looks. A heavy boxed cornice is not necessary for either health or comfort and there is a good chance for an argument when it comes to looks. By extending the roof boards in this manner you get a valuable protection to the building and that is the main object of a roof. The shape and design give it an artistic effect. A strong argument in its favor is its cheapness.

Second Floor Plan.



Sash in such windows never interfere with the curtains and you can open the sash an inch or a foot without fear of having the wind do damage to the glass. There is no objection to a sensible two-sash window, but there are many objections to casement windows when placed where you need something better.

A projection of this kind can be made much easier than any style of boxed in cornice, and while it looks lighter it certainly looks neat and attractive.

This design may be built of any kind of material, but it probably looks the best just as the drawing shows with clap-boards up to the gable ends and the gables covered with cement on metal lath; and as for color, a drab with pure white trimmings looks especially well. White trimmings on a house gives a suggestion of cleanliness inside, just as a clean white collar and cuffs seem to say that the individual wearing them is particular about personal cleanliness. The white trimmings have the effect of showing the clean lining turned outward just as collar and cuffs suggest a clean shirt.

First impressions go a long way. If the house design is right, the color pleasing and the combination such as to impress you favorably the same as you are impressed favorably with a well-dressed person you like the house and you are prepared to like the people that live there. A great deal of character is shown in the manner the house is finished up and the condition in which it is kept. Sometimes a dilapidated old house may have a pleasant interior, but generally speaking the outside and inside are in keeping. If you do not like the one you are not very likely to feel like getting acquainted with the other.

There are several casement windows in this house, but they are placed where you do not want to look out. Casement windows are all right in their proper places, but unfortunately they happen to be a fad just now and some people want them in good positions where large, sensible windows are needed. Windows that are wide enough to let in plenty of light and air and that are big enough and low enough to look out from when sitting in a chair are sensible and will last as long as a window

Sash divided into two parts and balanced with springs or weights so as to run easily either up or down is the window for general satisfaction.

Newsboys Deliver Papers in Outskirts of Montevideo From the Backs of Horses.

Most American newsboys think themselves well off if they own a good suit of clothes; but in the Uruguayan capital of Montevideo there are over 50 newsboys who own horses, and peddle their papers on horseback.

Montevideo has 300,000 inhabitants but it spreads over more territory than an American city of the same population; there are almost no tenement houses, and there are several large parks.

Like Americans, the Uruguayans want their evening paper as soon as possible after it comes from the press. The horseback boys supply this demand with astonishing rapidity. La Razon, one of the leading evening journals, is issued at five o'clock. About 20 minutes before that hour the newsboys, mostly young men from eighteen to twenty-five years of age, gather in the street in front of the newspaper office. When the papers are brought out, a clerk hands a bundle to each, and away he starts at a full gallop. All the business in the center of the town is done by ordinary "foot newsboys;" the horsemen race away to their "beats' in the suburbs, shouting with all their might:

"La Razon! La Razon!"

A customer who wishes to buy a paper steps to the sidewalk and holds out his arm. The horse knows the signal, and pulls up so short that it is a wonder the rider is not catapulted over his head.

So efficient is this system of equestrian newsboys that a dweller in the outskirts of Montevideo gets his evening paper almost as soon as the man who lives in the very heart of the city. —Youth's Companion.

Devil Driving In India.

In spite of the reformed councils, it is a mistake to imagine that India has entirely shed the old Adam. Especially in the field of medicine, old beliefs and superstitions still cling to the people, and "devil driving" is still a flourishing trade. Interesting instances of devil driving are given in the Indian Medical Gazette. One of these is "from an old village of some importance mostly inhabited by merchants and tradesmen about a mile and a half off the Chaudanga subdivision, in Nadia." The village during and after the rains, is a hotbed of malaria. The villagers decided to drive away the devil of malaria. They did not take advantage of the medical aid provided them, but bought instead a pair of donkeys at a very high price with the superstitious belief that the neighing of these animals would do away with the evil spirits of malaria. The donkeys are held as sacred and are allowed to roam at large through and around the village. Needless to say, malaria still prevails in the village in as virulent a form as ever. Who will say after this that the task of those who wish to popularize quinine as a prophylactic is easy?—Calcutta Englishman.

PUTS QUESTIONS TO RAILROADS

Interstate Commission Has Not Sufficient Data.

SOME POINTED SUGGESTIONS

The Queries Framed By Louis D. Brandeis Intimate That the Trouble May Be Due To Conflicting Interests.

Washington. — Eastern railroads must show conclusively to the Interstate Commerce Commission that shrinking profits are due to the decreasing value of the dollar, rather than to the evils of stock manipulation, interlocking directorates and frenzied financing. Otherwise there will be no grant of increases. This condition was emphasized by the commission's public announcement that it has sent to all lines a set of 78 questions, divided in seven groups, which go straight to the heart of the railroad-finance problem.

It is the understanding of the commission that some of the railroads are in position to make full responses to the questions submitted without substantial delay, while others will require some time to compile the data ordered.

These questions, bearing in every line the impress of the views of Louis D. Brandeis, the "people's lawyer" engaged by the Interstate Commerce Commission, may be summarized in the question: "Are you paying proper attention to economics, and are your earnings shrunken because of interlocking directorates, because of Wall Street 'milkings,' because of too much attention to finance and too little to railroading?"

One group of questions was aimed at "the possibility of increasing revenues otherwise than through a general increase of freight rates" in such savings as might be effected through standardization of supplies and in the consumption of coal.

Under the head of "financial," the commission queries the roads as to their holdings in industrial or mining corporations or other railroads. The question as to "conflicting interests," the commission says, "is designed to secure data to determine the extent to which the directors and officials of railroads have other financial interests in the transactions of the carriers."

"Among other things it is desired to determine to what extent conflicting and intertwining interests commonly described as interlocking directorates prevail," the announcement said, "and what influence if any this practice has had in increasing railroad costs."

Other angles of the commission's inquiry involve the possibility of increasing revenues through more favorable contracts on Pullman sleeping car service and on the possibility of inadequacy of passenger rates.

The commission will renew its hearings January 7, giving shippers an opportunity to present their testimony in opposition to the railroads' unchallenged financial statements already submitted. Already the shippers have made arrangements to present a mass of testimony to contest the railroads' claim for recognition.

$738,320,766 IN FAVOR OF U. S.

Trade Balance For the Past Twelve Months Is Heavy.

Washington. — November's foreign trade brought the balance of trade in favor of the United States against foreign nations $642,100,403 for the 11 months of the calendar year, while for the 12 months ending with November the excess of exports over imports was $738,320,766. The exports for November totaled $245,647,895, the second largest for that month in the last six years, being exceeded only by November, 1912. The imports were $148,594,741, also the second largest for November in the last six years. November last year exceeding it by $4,500,000.

Housework is a Burden

The daily cares of keeping house and bringing up a family are hard enough for a healthy woman. The tired, weak mother who struggles from morn to night with a lame, aching back is carrying a heavy burden.

Many women believe that urinary disorders and backache are "female troubles" and must be endured. But men suffer the same aches and troubles when the kidneys are sick.

Women are especially subject to kidney disease. Tight clothing, indoor work, the ordeals of childbirth, the worry, and the stooping, straining and striving of housework all help to bring it on. At first the trouble may be only backache, sick headache, dizziness and a drowsy, dull languid feeling, but this condition is dangerous to neglect, for dropsy, gravel and deadly Bright's disease start in some such small way.

Don't be discouraged. When backache, nervousness and irregular or painful passages of the kidney secretions begin to bother you, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that has brought new life and strength to thousands of suffering women. There are no poisonous nor narcotic drugs in Doan's Kidney Pills—nothing to injure nor cause a habit. Delicate women can use them with perfect safety.

"Oh! What a pain."

The following case is typical of the cures effected by Doan's Kidney Pills. Grateful testimony is the best evidence:

A PHYSICAL WRECK

Confined to Bed For Six Weeks

Mrs. J. Lenane, Monroe St., Archbald, Pa., says: "I had awful lameness across my back and it kept me from resting at night. I suffered from terrible headaches and dizzy spells and they affected my sight. The kidney secretions were irregular in passage, and my health was going down day by day. Finally my feet and ankles began swelling and I wasn't able to tie my shoes. I got so bad I couldn't stay up any longer and for six weeks, I was sick abed, unable to move hand or foot. I was a physical wreck. At this critical time, a neighbor sent me a few Doan's Kidney Pills and told me to try them. To my delight, they helped me from the first and I kept on using them until I was completely cured. I have been free from kidney trouble ever since and I am now enjoying good health. If Doan's Kidney Pills had only come to my attention sooner, I would certainly have been spared a good deal of expense and suffering. My recovery has surprised everyone."

ITCHING, BURNING ERUPTION

Thomasville, Ala.—"I suffered with eczema on my hands and feet two or three years. About eleven years ago I became troubled with an itching, burning eruption which came on my hands and feet in little water blisters and in about a day or two when I would let the water out or wash it out, using my hands, then the places would fester and itch to beat the band. I could not do any work that was rough on my hands at all. It caused me great suffering and inconvenience.

"I tried everything that I knew of or was told and never was really relieved until I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I would wash the parts in water with the Cuticura Soap and then when I dried them I would apply the Cuticura Ointment on the surface in the daytime, and at night I would get a soft piece of cloth and apply the Cuticura Ointment on my hands and let it stay that way all night. Her Shopping Husband.

Here is something new, a widow's "shopping husband," and it comes from a London court. A widow had sued to recover £30, the value of a pair of diamond earrings.

She stated that on June 23 she went to the shop and bought the earrings. Afterward she was not satisfied, went back to the shop, and after a heated discussion called at a pawnbroker's, who valued the stones at £20.

Counsel read a letter from the plaintiff, in which she said that her husband was not satisfied with the stones. "But you are a widow?" he added.

Plaintiff—Yes; I sometimes when shopping use the term "my husband," because I have been "done" so often.

Was Back at the Back.

During study hour the youngest of four boys was poring over his primer lesson while the others were playing marbles.

"Mother," the youngster said, "if I had as many lessons to get as those boys I would study all the time. If they don't mind they will be sent back."

The mother immediately called the boys in to observe study hour and related to them what their youngest brother had said.

Walter answered his baby brother by saying: "You'd better study yourself. If you don't you'll be sent back."

"Why, I'm already in the 'caboose,'" was the reply.

Pass It Along.

Senator La Follette, during his recent visit to Philadelphia, said apropos of a flagrant piece of hypocrisy:

"Why, the man's as bad as a Newport groom I heard of.

"This groom stood beside his master while a veterinary examined a costly cob. The veterinary, at the end of his examination, pronounced the cob incurable and took leave. Then the master, sighing heavily, turned to the groom saying:

"'Well, James, what am I to do with the poor beast now?'

"'Conscientiously speaking, sir,' the groom replied, 'I think you'd better part with him now to another gentleman, sir.'"

Business to Blame.

"That fellow uses shocking language."

"You must excuse him; he's a telephone lineman."

Jew Outwitted Russian Guard by Imitation That Must Have Been Remarkable.

Aaron Seidentaft is a clever fellow, as you may understand when you learn how his quick wit recently brought him safely out of a situation of the utmost peril. Aaron desired to visit Russia, but he had no passport. He said to his friend Mendel:

"You have a passport; I'll get into a big bag and you shall carry me across the border. If the frontier guard asks you to put the bag down, you'll say you can't because there's glass in it and it will break."

Mendel was obliging. He shouldered the bag with Seidentaft in it and approached the boundary. The frontier guard asked what was in the bag and Mendel answered, "Glass." Thereupon the soldier drew his sword and ran it through the bag. It might easily have gone very hard with Steidentaft if he had forgotten his role and cried out. But he didn't. Instead he made a noise like this: "Kling, klang." And so he got alive into Russia.

He often relates his adventure and he always adds: "When one is labeled glass, one must behave like glass."—New York Evening Post.

EVERY KNEE SHALL BOW AT JESUS' NAME

Jesus the Center of God's Favors For Church and World.

The Foundation of All Blessings Was Laid at Calvary—God's Favor to the Elect Began at Pentecost—It Will Culminate at Jesus' Second Coming. Then Will Begin the Blessing of the Non-Elect—Christ and the Church Will Reign a Thousand Years—A Royal Priesthood For the Restoration of the World to Human Perfection. Wilfully Wicked Be Destroyed.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 28.—Pastor Russell spoke twice here today. We report his discourse from the text, "Unto Me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear"—Isaiah 45:23.

Our careless reading of this passage, said the Pastor, has led some to assume that the bowing of the knee and the confession of the tongue will be a mere formality, while hearts are still in rebellion. A careful reading, however, notes that these acts will be to the glory of God. This insures a genuine adoration; for the Master declared that the Father seeketh only such as worship in spirit and in truth. St. Paul quotes this text, and adds that it includes things in Heaven as well as on earth. In other words, the great work which Jesus, as the Father's Representative, will yet accomplish, will bring Him fame, glory and homage amongst angels and men.

Sufferings First and Glory Afterward.

The Pastor then reminded his audience that comparatively few knees bow and tongues yet confess on earth, although Jesus has been highly exalted in Heaven. He declared that it seems necessary for God's people to realize that much confusion and error exist, and to feel heartily ashamed of our unreasonable conclusions—human creeds. The central teaching of the Bible is that Jesus' death was necessary as man's Redemption-price. This is clearly set forth by the Apostles, as well as by the types of the Law.

The worldly-wise scoff at the thought that the shedding of blood is necessary to man's forgiveness and the rolling away of the curse. Shedding of blood is merely another way of saying sacrificial death. The Bible assures us that the sentence, "Dying, thou shalt die," was placed upon Father Adam because of disobedience, and that by heredity it has come down to us—his legacy of evil, sorrow, weakness, alienation from God, death.

The Pastor demonstrated that the Supreme Judge of the Universe could not set aside the death sentence of His own Court, and yet be just. There can be no forgiveness of Original Sin, and no opportunity for life everlasting except by a redemption—a payment of the original penalty. Here we see Divine Wisdom and Mercy. God provided that Adam alone should be on trial and only he should be sentenced. Thus He prepared the way for redemption—that as by a man came death, by a Man also should come the resurrection from the dead.

Not the Father, but the Son, Died.

Then the Pastor showed conclusively from Scripture that the Heavenly Father did not compel the Son to die for us; but that He presented His Plan to the Son, and the Son voluntarily carried out the work. Nor was this contract without reward. St. Paul assures us that for the joy set before Him, Jesus endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at God's right hand.

The speaker next showed that the Logos, the Son, a spirit being, could become man's Redeemer only by becoming a man—"the Man Christ Jesus, who gave Himself a Ransom for all." The Greek word antilutron, ransom, signifies a corresponding price. Bulls and goats could not be a corresponding price; neither could angels, nor even the Logos Himself; for they were not on the same plane of being. Thus the Scriptures explain that it was necessary for the Logos to become a Man, in order to effect a Ransom for Adam.

The Pastor then pointed out the folly of Christians who delude themselves into thinking that the whole world has had a blessing through Christ ever since He died, and that the millions that died before He tasted death for every man have also been blessed. None but the Church class thus far have received a blessing from Jesus, and so the Scriptures point out.

"The Election Hath Obtained It."

Next the Pastor declared that the key to the matter is found in Romans 11. There St. Paul draws attention to the fact that in rejecting Jesus, Israel rejected God's choicest blessing, but are "still beloved for the fathers' sake." He says "The Election hath obtained it, and the rest were blinded."

This elect class are to constitute the Messianic Kingdom class. That Kingdom, invisible to men, yet all powerful in their midst, will bring to pass all the glorious promises of the Bible. The Times of Restitution will turn the earth into a paradise, and bring mankind back into the image and likeness of God, lost in Eden, restored by Calvary.

COUGH LASTED EIGHT YEARS

But Bear's Emulsion Finally Cured It.

Read the Testimony of Mr. H. B. C. Gentry, the Well Known Postmaster at Elkton, Va.

Dr. John D. Bear,
Elkton, Va.

Sir:—About eight years ago I contracted a bad case of pneumonia which left me with a cough. At first I paid but little attention to it, being elated over my recovery, which had been regarded unfavorably by my physician.

The cough continued to annoy me up to four years ago, when my physician advised me to use Petroleum Emulsion prepared by you. I did so, using three bottles when I had been so much benefited that I discontinued the use of it. Since that time I have used several bottles during the winter, and at such times as when affected by colds. I have been completely cured of the cough.

Very respectfully,
H. B. C. Gentry.

W. D. FORTNEY
OPTOMETRIST

Is Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 30 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 20 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientific accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

Be Sure You Get These Two Points:

¶ FIRST.—A building must have 253 12 foot stories to secure enough weight to cause these brick to crush under their own weight.

¶ SECOND.—This is the practical way in which any competent architect would figure the load these brick will carry. He would allow a factor of safety of four; consequently he would specify these brick for a building SIXTY-THREE (63) Stories high. Do they build that high in your locality?

DRIVER AND THREE HORSE TEAM HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Sled Parted on Railway Crossing Friday and Train Ran Into It.

Last Friday afternoon, just before the east bound accomodation train was due at Oakland, W. J. Sowers was driving three horses hitched to a sled loaded with cross ties. The horses and front part of the sled had crossed the B. & O. railroad track at Shaffer's crossing, when the train struck the rear end of the sled scattering the cross ties in every direction, and throwing the sled off from the road bed and breaking the tongue on the sled. The horses had started to run, but before getting very far one of the horses fell to the ground. Fortunately the only damage was the wrecking of the sled.

High School Honor Roll.

Last week we overlooked the following item, which was handed us for publication:

For the month of December, the following students have made not less than 80 per cent in each subject studied and not less than 95 per cent in department:

Freshmen—Marie Finzel, Ada Glotfelty, Winifred Weimer, Otis Harris.

Sophmore—Blanche Clark, Louise Harned, Margaret Slabach, Carrie Thrasher, Mildred Thrasher.

Juniors—Dottie Doman, Lulu Friend, Delbert Davis, Russell Cuppett, Harold Dawson, Robert Garrett, Ross Isenberg, George Queer.

Senior—Guy Ashby, Edward Chance, Bernard Faherty, Percy Thayer, Robert White, Rhoda Welch.

The Appearance Of Prosperity.

One of the reasons why advertising has grown so enormously of recent years is that merchants realize that a business to succeed must carry an atmosphere of prosperity.

The man who enters a business office with soiled clothes, and face unshorn, and muddy boots, is not apt to get a job. This may be due to superficial judgments, but people have to make the best use they can of exterior indications.

Similary the public judges of a merchants' success by exterior signs, A business man who does not advertise conveys an impression of passiveness and indifference, o slow going, old fashioned methods.

The public values enterprise in retail trade higher than almost any other one quality. Liberal advertising is to a merchant what good clothes and clean cut appearance are to a salesman. It suggests that a merchant is prosperous, that he has in the past succeeded in pleasing the public, that he is alert among to get good bargains for his customers. It shows that he has such confidence in his goods that he is willing to spend money to tell people about them.

COAL PRODUCTION DECREASES.

There Were 175 accidents, 15 Fatal In Maryland Mines.

The annual report of Willian Waiters, State mining inspector, has been submitted to Governor Goldsborough. The total output of coal the past year was 4,085,817 gross tons, a decrease of 80,919 tons from the preceding year. The report shows a total of 4,945 men employed in the industry in Allegany county, of whom 3,582 are mmers.

Garrett county produced 647,515 tons. A total of 756 men are employed in is county.

During the fiscal year ending April 30, 1913, there were 175 accidents in the region, of which 15 were fatal, an increase of 1 fatal and 23 non-fatal. There were six local strikes during the year.

In practically every mine in the two counties there is a ventilation equipment which is sufficient to furnish more than the lawful amount of air if properly and constantly operated. We call the attention of the miners of Garrett county to the following extract taken from the report "there are difficulties in the way of the inspector's performance of his duties which would not exist if the mine foreman of the various mines would not seem to resent the visits of the inspector and the miners themselves would be more frank and open in their discussion with the inspector of conditions under which they work."

With the hospital lately completed and equipped at Frostburg, ready at all times to receive miners, there is a possibility of a decrease in the number of fatal accidents.

WHAT DR. MILLER SAYS.

Prescribes Bear's Emulsion With Fine Results.

John D. Bear, Elkton, Va.

Dear Sir: It gives me pleasure to recommend your Emulsion and hope the recommendation will not only help you but will be the means of some one seeking a remedy to rid them of the long lingering coughs and colds. I have prescribed your Emulsion and have received very gratifying results. It is a fine tissue builder; tones up the stomach and gives the patient a good appetite.

I have seen the remedy made and know all its constituents and thoroughly recommend it.

Yours Very Respt.,
Dr. H. H. Miller.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS NOW HAVE NEW PRESIDENT

Mr. A. Clyde Smith Chosen For This Position By His Fellow Members

As announced in The Republican the county commissioners met in their office, in the court house, Monday. The board is as follows: Messrs. D. M. Dixon, of Oakland, Otho J. Fike, of Avilton, and A. Clyde Smith, of near McHenry. The board organized by electing Mr. Smith president. The only change in the board was Mr. Smith in place of Mr. Walter M. Lowdermilk, whose time had expired. In his retirement the county lost a faithful official.

The principal business before the commissioners was the appointment of road supervisors, yet much other business was transacted. Garrett county was largely represented at the meeting. People enquired, "What has brought so many people to Oakland?" A delegation of seven substantial citizens of Bloomington district were before the commissioners in the interest of a concrete bridge across the North Branch at Bloomington.

Ex-sheriff Oester, Jacob Brennemen Dennis Brennemen and County Treasurer Emory, of Bittinger, had business before the commissioners Tuesday.

It speaks well for Garrett county that its public spirited and well-to-do citizens take so much interest in public affairs. This is just what the county needs and and just what the county commissioners desire. After hearing these representative citizens tell of the needs of their respective communities and make their recommendation they, the commissioners, can act intelligently for the greatest good of the entire county.

The names of the supervisors and the amounts appropriated for the several county roads will be published in The Republican as soon as Clerk A. G. Ross can prepare the copy.

Mr. James Frazee and Mr. Bush of Friendsville, F. R. Sharples, of Swanton and Fred Broadwater, Philip R. Tichtner and William Titchner, of Bloomington represented their sections of the county.

Tuesday evening the Commissioners awarded the publishing and printing for the county as follows:

Publishing official matter: THE REPUBLICAN and the Democrat $300 each; the Journal, $120.

Printing blanks, stationery, etc., THE REPUBLICAN bid $100; the Journal bid $124.95. The contract was awarded to THE REPUBLICAN, it being the lowest bidder.

Married.

MCFARLAND—PIERCE—The marriage of Miss Edna Pierce, daughter of Mrs. Virginia Pierce of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Mr. John McFarland, son of Mr. and Mrs. James McFarland, of Grafton, was solomnized on Thursday morning at the parsonage of the First M. E. church by Rev. S. K. Arbuthnot and was witnessed by a few relatives. The bride was attired in a gown of blue novelty cloth with hat and other accessories to match. She is a charming and accomplished young lady with many attractive qualities.

The groom is a young man of superior characteristices. After a wedding trip to Washington, D. C., and other eastern cities the young couple will return to Grafton, where they will reside. The bride formerly resided at Mountain Lake Park.

Oakland Wins And Loses.

The Oakland Collegian basket ball team played two games last night on the local floor, the first game being with the Clarksburg Scholastics, who won the West Virginia State Championship last year, and the second with the Grafton Y. M. C. A. Owing to some misunderstanding as to dates, the Grafton team came to Oakland on train No. 16 as well as the Scholastics, but the local team agreed to play them after the regularly scheduled game with Clarksburg was played.

The first game was fast and exciting throughout and both teams played exceptionally well, the final score being 33 to 20 in favor of the Scholastics.

The Collegians outclassed their opponents in the second game and won the contest by a score of 30 to 15.

A Plea to Santa Claus

FOR THE REPUBLICAN

Say, my dear Mr. Santa Claus,
I wish you'd come back again
And bring a great big pot of glue
With which my toys to mend?

I just love my Christmas things,
And I thank you, just the same,
But can't you make them last
'Til Christmas comes again?

Poor Mary Jane, I broke her head,
Now she's dead as she can be,
And Billy's not half so beautiful
As when you gave him to me.

My dishes and my horn are broke,
My blocks are 'most all gone:
I can't find the lids to my stove—
Even my candy didn't last long.

And won't you mend my tummy?
It hurts most dreadful, too:
I ate such lots of candy—
It's busted, I think, don't you?

But if you'll bring your glue
And mend us all up good,
I'll take good care of my things,
Say, don't you think I would?

Postmaster at Bloemington.

There will be an examination at Bloomington on the 24th inst, to fill a contemplated vacancy in the post office at that place. The office pays about $296 a year. The postmaster must furnish the post office room, fuel and light, and outfit the office out of this handsome salary. The examination is open to males 21 years of age and over and females 18 years and over. Applicants must reside within the territory supplied by the post office.

The Old And The New.

The Old Year passed quietly out and the New Year made its appearance in Oakland without the ringing of bells, blowing of whistles or the shooting of fire arms. There were no demonstrations of any kind. Some of the young folks danced until the old year expired and then quietly entered the New Year.

New Year's day was a delightful day, a day one could not help but enjoy. It was a pleasure to be out doars inhaling the pure air. The post office force enjoyed holiday hours, but every body else followed the regular details of life, cheerful, thankful, hopeful for a year of progress, peace and happiness. May it so prove to the citizins of Oakland and of Garrett county.

HOYES.

We are enjoying the finest sledding and sleighing snow we have had this winter. The show having fallen to the depth of two feet and accompanied by a very mild temperature is all that heart can wish for.

Christmas and New Year passed very quietly, at this place, and a number of families enjoyed the home coming of relatives.

Freeman Dewitt left here Tuesday, before Christmas, to spend the holidays with his sons and other relatives in Dayton and Akron Ohio.

Miss Della Savage, teacher of Dry Run scnool, visited her sister Mrs. Smith, during Christmas week.

Prof. Rausch, wife and two little daughters, of Duquesne, came to Hoyes New Year's day, and remained until Monday, with Mrs. Rausch's mother and sister.

D. Earle Smith returned to St. John's College Sunday, after spending two weeks under the parental roof.

Miss Edith Shrock, of Crellin, was a guest of Miss Grace Friend and Mrs. Hallie Custer during the holidays.

Miss Irene Mattingly has gone to Duquesne, Pa., to spend a few weeks with her aunt.

Miss Viola Enlow, another of Hoyes teachers, was home for Christmas.

Charles Callis, of Kitzmiller, and Burton Callis, of Bloomington, were home with their parents the past week.

Albert and Clifford Enlow spent the past two weeks at Connellsville, Pa., the guest of their sister, Mrs. Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. S. K. Welch were delighted to have the majority of their family with them on Christmas day.

Roland Schoch was a pleasant guest at the home of A. P. Enlow for several days last week.

Whitfield Dewitt visited his sister, Mrs. John Brenneman, at Thaverville recently.

The remains of Mr. Samuel Ferguson were brought to the Methodist cemetery, at this place for interment Monday, and were accompanied by a number of his family and near relatives. Mr. Ferguson was held in high esteem in this community, and had been a resident here for a number of years. He was a consistent member of the Methodist church and seldom ever missed a Sunday at Sunday school or church, but was always and ever ready to perform his duty. The relatives have our heartfelt sympathy.

PRICE AGAIN HEADS THE SENATE; TRIPPE IN HOUSE

Democrats Overwhelmingly Control Both Branches of Assembly

The Maryland Legislature convened at noon yesterday for its biennial 90-day session.

The Democrats in overwhelming control of both branches put through their caucus slates, re-electing Jesse D. Price of Wicomico as President of the Senate and James McC. Trippe of Baltimore city, Speaker of the House.

The interesting incidents of the first day's session included an atempt to exclude from his seat Senator Frank L. Williams of Cecil county, Republican; the filing of a protest against the seating of Quince Ashburn, fusionist, of Worcester county and the arrival of a delegation of Woman Suffrage hikers.

The Democratic caucus last night picked Jesse D. Price of Wicomico for President of the Senate and the Republicans named Senator Zihlman as their candidate. Mr. Zihlman recieved the Republican vote and becomes the floor leader of that party.

A memorial was presented against the seating of Quince Ashburn of Worcester, in which a count of the ballots was requested and the oath of office was not administered to him, and until the other Senators had sworn in and Senator Milbourne of Somerset was named as the temporary presiding officer of the Senate. New Senators against whose qualifications for office no question was raised took the oath of office in grouns of four. They swore to uphold the Constitution of State and nation, to perform their duties with the interest of the State as the object in view, and to accept no emoluments and rewards other than their pay.

In the House the proceedings were long drawn out, due to the time consumed in swearing in the members. Delegate Dawkins of Baltimore city was made temporary presiding officer and Speaker Trippe was placed in nomination by Delegate McQuade. The Republicans named F. Stone Posey of Charles county.

Mr. Trippe was sworn in by Noble L. Mitchell of Harford, a former Speaker. Mr. Trippe made an address in which he urged economy, the holding down of the tax rate, penal reform and the prompt adoption of a policy as to the engrossing of bills.

President Price's speech in the Senate was interesting not only from its outline of promises in the party platform but also for several suggestions for extending the election machinery of the State, mentioning the Public Utilities Commissioners as among the officials whose credentials the people should directly pass on. He also takes a stand for damages in Legislative procedure and for economy in the Legislature itself.

He concluded by pledging his best efforts to a workman's compensation bill and to the agricultural, school and oyster interests of the State.

The Senate took up much time with the Williams light.

At 2.30 p. m. the House took a recess for an hour. The Senate adjourned at 2.50 o'clock until noon Tuesday.

Having no offices to parcel out and only empty honors to confer, the Republican Senate and House caucuses Tuesday night were of short duration.

Members of both houses met together at first and elected Senator Frank L. Williams, of Cecil county, general chairman. He will act as such during the session. Later Senator Harvey J. Speicher, of Garrett county, was made chairman of the Senate caucus. It was decided by the Senators to make no nomination, except for President, the honor carrying with it the floor leadership of the minority. By unanimous vote Senator Frederick N. Zihlman, of Allegany county, was selected for the place. He was promised hearty and united support upon the floor by his colleagues.

The House caucus was presided over by John S. Jones, of St. Mary's, with H. H. Nuttle, of Caroline, as Secretary. The caucus decided to place in nomination the following list:

For Speaker, F. Stone Posey, of Charles, who will thereby become the leader of his party; for chief clerk, Harry Phoebus, of Somerset; journal clerk, H. L. Pelzer, Allegany; reading clerk, John A. Long, Garrett, and sergeant-at-arms, R. R. Walker, Talbott.

Millions for Liquor.

"It is hard to realize that in many large cities in this country over $2,000,000 are spent annualy for liquor," said George T. Carson, of Chicago, Ill., at the Hotel Kernan yesterday. "There are very few people who realize just how much $2,000,000 is, or how many drinks it purchased. If it were changed into $20 bills there would be 100,000 of them. Each bill being seven and a half inches long, there would be 8,000 in a mile if placed end to end. At this rate $2,000,000 in $20 bills would cover nearly 12 miles.

"If these bills were compressed so tightly that there were 250 to an inch they would make a cube package 21 inches to an edge and would weigh 500 pounds. If this money was changed into silver dollars and stacked in a cube the $2,000,000 would form a cube 75 inches—6 feet three inchee to an edge—and would weigh over 55 tons. If the money was used to build homes it would build 1,000 homes at $2,000 each year. It is really a problem for people to think over."—Baltimore American.

Mount Savage Rector Resigns.

KNOCKED SENSELESS BOUND AND ROBBED

Young "Danny" Miller Had a Thrilling Experience.

Monday evening about 5:30 o'clock a man entered the old Felty mill, at this place, and knocked Daniel Miller, a young man of about 18 years senseless, tied his legs and hands, and stuffed paper in his mouth. An hour or so afterwards, the young man was missed, not coming to supper, search was made for him, and he was found in the mill unconscious and in condition above described. When restored to consciousness the young man found that he had been robbed of $9.81, all the money he had on his person. The robber escaped and left no clue behind. Mr. Miller was able to attend to his duties about the mill the next day.

Oakland High School Notes.

The High School opened Monday after a vacation of two weeks.

OPTOMETRIST

Is Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 50 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 70 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientific accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

Henry Burlin, 72 years old, a farmer, attempted suicide at his home, at Rock Hall, by cutting his throat with a razor. A wound two inches in length was inflicted, and the sight of blood caused him to cry for help.

Blood-poisoning developing from the prick of a twig of holly while she was engaged in making wreaths caused Mrs. William M. Wright, of Federalsburg, to lose the middle finger and a portion of her right hand.

Michael Nusbaum, a 70-year-old farmer, near Frederick, joined the list of wife hunters by advertising in a local paper for a helpmate. He is a widower and has five children, four of whom are married. His only requirements is for a good housekeeper.

A pulpit light of brass has been placed in Trinity Church, Elkton, in memory of the late Alfred Wetherill, who for a quarter of a century was senior warden of Trinity parish. The light is the gift of his nieces, the Misses Marian and Julia Young, of Elkton.

Otis Brown, a young man of Pocomoke, accidentally shot himself in Stevenson's woods. He went out alone to shoot rabbits and while creeping through the underbrush the hammer of his gun caught in a bush and the piece was discharged. The entire load struck his shoulder.

Wilmer C. Bouchells, a farmer of Mechanics' Valley, while driving a team of four horses near Pleasant Hill, suffered a stroke of apoplexy and fell to the road. He was found shortly afterward and died while being carried into a nearby farmhouse. He was about 62 years of age, and is survived by a widow and three sons.

Michael Dunnigan was arrested by Game Warden Heller on a warrant sworn out by Walter Roby on the charge of hunting on the property of the Woodmont Rod and Gun Club, owned by Baltimoreans and situated in the mountains west of Hancock. Dunnigan was fined $50 by Justice Remsburg.

The tracks of the Western Maryland and Cumberland Valley Railroads at North Junction were torn up by the wrecking of a double-header westbound freight train on the former road. The wreck was caused by the lead engine leaving the tracks. Passengers on trains of both roads were transferred. No one was injured.

To eat home-grown watermelons on New Year's Day is unusual in Caroline county, but John W. Stowell, of Federalsburg, had one which he declared was fine. The melon, with five others, was carefully wrapped in paper last September and placed in an unheated room. One of the other melons, cut a few days ago, proved equally as good.

Given a hearing before Magistrate Cameron, Elkton, on the charge of killing two foxhounds owned by Cornelius Davis, an adjoining farmer, Charles Crawford, of near Cecilton, was fined $25 and costs. The hounds when shot were on Crawford's farm, and he alleged that he suspected they were the dogs which had been killing his sheep.

The will of Frank P. Brewer, the cashier of the First National Bank of Mercersburg, who recently committed suicide, was probated. He left his entire estate to his mother for life. At her death each of the daughters of his deceased sister, Miss Nettie Bishop, is to be paid $500, the residue of the estate going to his only sister, Mrs. Jennie Byron, wife of Lewis T. Byron, of Hagerstown.

The Mayor and Common Council of Hyattsville, adopted the much-discussed segregation ordinance, and it immediately became effective. There was not a dissenting vote. The ordinance was prepared by Corporation Counsel Vincent A. Sheehy, and follows closely the text of the Baltimore ordinance recently adopted on the subject. It requires the use of separate blocks for residences by white and colored people, and its object is declared to be for the purpose of preserving the public peace and to promote the general welfare.

AT ANNAPOLIS

HAS NEW STATE HEALTH BILL.

William P. Whyte Would Reform Present Regulations.

A bill has been prepared for submission to the next Legislature which greatly increases the power of the State Board of Health and provides new machinery for the conduct of health laws and regulations in this State. William Pinkney Whyte, counsel to the board, is the author of the bill. It will be considered at the meeting of the board to be held at Annapolis on January 8. The bill provides that the secretary of the board shall be the State Health Officer, and that the salary of the office shall be increased from $2,500 to $3,000. The State shall be divided into 10 sanitary districts, for which the board may appoint deputies at salaries not less than $1,200 a year or more than $2,500. Authority is given the State Health Officer and his deputies by the bill to make investigations and to enter property in searching for disease and to swear witnesses.

COL. McLANE TILTON DEAD.

Was a Retired Officer Of the U. S. Marine Corps.

Following a paralytic stroke several weeks ago, Col. McLane Tilton, retired, United States Marine Corps, died at his home on Maryland avenue, Annapolis. Colonel Tilton had attained an advanced age, and for several years had been in ill health, although not confined to his bed at all times.

Colonel Tilton was a relative of Francis Scott Key, his mother, the late Josephine, Nicholson Harwood Tilton, being a niece of the composer of the national anthem. His father was Commodore Edward Gibson Tilton, of the Navy, who died many years ago. Colonel Tilton was born in the old Chase mansion, where his mother and father were married, and was connected on both sides of the family with prominent old Maryland families.

SCHOOL FUND DIVIDED.

Baltimore Gets $133,763 In the Quarterly Distribution By State.

Emerson C. Harrington, State Comptroller, announced a quarterly distribution of State funds for educational purposes amounting to $368,575. The amount represents $300,000 of the regular quarterly school tax, $37,500 of the free book fund and $31,075 for approved high schools in the several counties and Baltimore city. Of the apportionment Baltimore city gets $133,763.80, divided as follows: School tax, $118,170.53; school books, $13,093.27; approved high schools, $2,500.

Governor Sets Two Free.

Governor Goldsborough ordered the following prisoners released from the House of Correction: Moses Siegel, of St. Mary's county, convicted February 25, 1913, of assault and battery and sentenced to two years; and Charles Radtke, serving a sentence of one year for a similar offense, upon conviction by the Prince George's County Circuit Court. A pardon for the restoration of citizenship was granted in the case of William F. Williams, who recently completed a term of five years for larceny.

Eight Bells At Annapolis.

One of the important social events of the Naval Academy season was the New Year's Eve dance. By the choice of the members of the graduating class, Miss Katherine G. Knight, daughter of Rear Admiral Austin M. Knight, United States Navy, tapped eight bells" at midnight, ushering in the new year. The guests were received by Mrs. Bulmer, wife of Commander Roscoe C. Bulmer, United States Navy, and Midshipman J. H. Brown, guard of the football team.

Armory Opened With Ball.

The opening of the new armory of Company M, the local organization of the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard, took place with a big military ball given by the company. A feature was the presentation of medals won by members of the company for marksmanship during the summer's work at Saunders Range. The awards were made by Col. Charles D. Gaither. The new building was erected out of an appropriation of $40,000 made by the last Legislature.

Lieut. Williams Is Re-Elected.

At a regular meeting of the Navy Athletic Association, Lieutenant Commander Roger Williams was re-elected representative of the association for football. Naval Constructor E. S. Land and Commander M. E. Trench were re-elected as members of the executive committee stationed at Washington, and Lieutenant Commander N. L. Jones was elected a new member of the committee at the same place.

Games For Navy Basketballers.

The following additional games have been arranged for the Naval Academy basketball team: January 10, Catholic University; January 24, Virginia Polytechnic Institute; January 31, Swarthmore; February 7, St. John's College (Brooklyn); February 18, Washington and Lee; February 22, Georgetown. All the games will be played at Annapolis

Succeeds Henry Irving.

The Governor has appointed A. Taylor Smith school commissioner of Allegany county, in place of Henry Irving, who was elected sheriff.

G. C. Crilley, formerly engaged in the hotel business in Washington, has just returned to his home, in Hagerstown, after a business trip through Cuba and the Southern and Western States. He is secretary of the Securities Company of Hagerstown.

The sale of Red Cross seals in Annapolis during the Christmas holidays netted $500.

The Centreville Grammar School, formerly the Female Academy, has been sold to J. H. C. Legg for $2,155

THE PRESIDENT VERY SECRETIVE

Still Considerable Mystery About Lind's Visit.

NO SHORE LEAVE FOR ENVOY

The President Declares Nothing Specific Developed At the Conference On the Cruiser Chester.

Pass Christian, Miss.—With the departure of the scout cruiser Chester, bearing John Lind, the President's personal envoy, back to Mexico, to continue his observations of Mexican affairs, the mystery which has enveloped Mr. Lind's visit to President Wilson was only partially cleared.

Just why the nation's chief executive decided not to permit Mr. Lind to have any "shore leave" and took upon himself the inconvenience of being transshipped four times at sea, has not been explained. President Wilson volunteered no explanation, but one of the suppositions current is that he did not wish the special envoy to be subjected to the inquisition of newspaper correspondents. Another theory is that the President desired to show Mexico that there is no change in the American policy and no actual interruption of Mr. Lind's mission to Mexico.

The peculiar movements of the revenue cutter Winona and the long delay before the President and Mr. Lind actually met were partly accounted for when it became known that the lack of wireless facilities on the revenue cutter had confused plans. When the Chester reported her arrival, the Winona's launch had to make a 15-mile trip to shore and back again before arrangements could be made for the President's visit.

The President was the only source of information concerning the conference with Mr. Lind. He spoke of it only in broad generalities, declaring that nothing specific had been developed, and that nothing of any definite character occasioned the meeting. The President asserted that he discussed no particular plan of action.

He referred to the conference as a "get together talk." He explained that although Mr. Lind constantly had been sending dispatches, a conversation of a few hours had been deemed worth more than weeks of telegraphic communication with the added value of affording an exchange of viewpoint regarding the situation.

President Wilson added that there had been no special occasion for Mr Lind's visit—no advices, excitement or new questions.

When asked if he was more hopeful for a speedy settlement of the trouble, Mr. Wilson made it clear that his personal view of the situation had not changed. The President has held that the Huerta government is slowly being crushed, not only by the constitutionalist force, but through incessant isolation, and that inevitably it must fall.

EXPECTS BIG PARCEL RUSH.

Postoffice Department Arranges To Expedite Handling.

Washington.—The Postoffice Department is making preparations for an immense volume of parcel post business this year. These preparations include the equipment of mail terminals in large cities for the quick handling of mail sacks and the purchase of thousands of parcel hampers for retail package traffic. A scheme is being worked out by which 100,000 mail sacks and hampers can be handled in New York every hour.

COUNTY DRY AFTER 41 YEARS.

90 Saloons In Delaware County, Pa., Close At Midnight.

Media, Pa.—For the first time in 41 years no intoxicating liquors will be legally on sale this week in Delaware county. The 96 saloons and bottling establishments and one brewery in the county closed indefinitely at midnight Saturday and the county will be "dry" Monday for the first time since 1872, when, following a bitter fight between the liquor and anti-liquor forces, the Legislature passed a special law stopping the sale of liquor.

HAS NEW FOOD TEST.

Dr. Stiles Announces Discovery To American Scientists.

Atlanta, Ga.—Discovery of a test whereby it is possible to ascertain whether or not a person has eaten contaminated food was announced by Dr. Charles W. Stiles, United States Public Health Service in an address before the Zoology section of the American Association for the Advancement of Science

TWO BLOWN TO PIECES.

Dynamite Explodes While Men Are Thawing It.

Downingtown, Pa.—William Kenneddy, a contractor of this place, and Thomas Allison, of Coatesville, were blown to pieces near here by the explosion of dynamite which they were thawing out for use in road repair work. Several workmen who were nearby were not injured.

MISS WILSON TO ACT IN GOTHAM.

She Will Appear Again In "Sanctuary," a Bird Masque.

New York.—Miss Eleanor Wilson, daughter of the President, is expected to appear here on February 24 in "Sanctuary," a bird masque by Percy Mackaye, in which she scored a success at Cornish, N. H., last summer. The performance, to be at the Hotel Astor, will be for the benefit of the Sanctuary for Birds in Meriden, N. H., organized by Ernest Harold Baynes.

COLD STORAGE TRAIL WARM

Officials Believe Developments Will Lead to Prosecutions.

VIGOROUS PROBE KEPT UP.

Combination Alleged To Be Among Commission Merchants and Producers, Not Plant Owners.

Washington.—Investigation of the cold-storage "trust" by the Department of Justice has progressed so far that officials are confident they have found trails which eventually will lead to prosecutions in the courts.

Although the operations of the dealers, believed to be leaders in the combination, have been confined to several large cities, the department has redoubled its vigor in the last few weeks. Officials expect to uncover evidence which will connect these dealers and make them amenable to the Sherman Anti-Trust act.

Within the last few days requests have reached Washington from several United States District Attorneys for help to carrying on the investigations. Several special agents have been detailed for this work. Their reports probably will be made to Washington in the next few weeks and the Attorney General and his assistants will determine the advisability of beginning anti-trust proceedings.

Although department officials are unwilling to discuss the cold-storage investigation, it is known that the general impression that the owners of cold-storage plants are involved in the alleged combination is incorrect. In only a few instances do the owners make use of their plants for storing their own products. In practically every case commission merchants and producers themselves rent cold-storage space. The combination on which the department will prosecute if sufficient evidence is forthcoming will be among the commission merchants.

NO WHITE HOUSE RECEPTION.

Secretary Of State Bryan's Breakfast To the Diplomatic Corps.

Washington.—New Year's Day in the capital passed over without a White House reception for the first time in more than a century—for the first time since the day of President Monroe. In the absence of President Wilson, taking a holiday vacation in the South, a breakfast to the diplomatic corps by Secretary and Mrs. Bryan was the principal social function of the day. More than 300 guests gathered with the Secretary of State at his home. Practically all the ambassadors, ministers and members of the embassy and legation staffs, with the women of their families, were present. There were a few exceptions, among them the Turkish Ambassador, who is in mourning. The French Ambassador, Jules Jusserand, has become the dean of the corps during the last year, since the departure of the former ambassador from Great Britain, James Bryce. The Central and South American countries were brilliantly represented.

TO MARRY AT EMBASSY.

Miss Belle Willard and Kermit Roosevelt Engaged.

Washington.—Kermit Roosevelt, second son of former President Theodore Roosevelt, will marry Miss Belle Willard, the eldest daughter of Col. Joseph E. Willard, of Virginia, the American Ambassador to Spain, next spring, according to an announcement made by cable to friends of the Ambassador in Washington and Richmond. It is understood that the wedding will take place at the American Embassy in Madrid, but the exact date and place were not stated in the cablegram. The news of the engagement came as a complete surprise to Miss Willard's friends in Washington. While it was known that she and young Roosevelt were friends, not the least idea was entertained that his attentions were of tenderer nature.

TARIFF YIELD KEEPS UP.

Loss In Revenue Not As Great As Had Been Estimated By Experts.

Washington.—Treasury officials are inclined to believe that the Underwood-Simmons Tariff act will produce several millions more revenue annually than had been estimated by tariff experts. The Treasury expected to see revenues fall off about $45,000,000 a year, but reports for the first two months under the new law have led to the belief that this estimate is excessive.

MORGAN BOWS TO PUBLIC SENTIMENT

Withdraws From More Than a Score of Great Corporations.

G. F. BAKER TO FOLLOW SUIT

Though Members Of Morgan Firm Resign From Twenty-Seven Corporations, They Are Still In Directorates Of Many Concerns.

New York.—The withdrawal of J. P. Morgan & Co. from more than a score of great corporations and the statement shortly afterward by George F. Baker, an almost equally dominant figure in American finance, that he soon would take similar action, gave Wall street generally a thrill which almost brought trading on the stock exchange to a halt.

While it is probably true that many of the prominent bankers had information foreshadowing this momentous move toward ending interlocking directorates, the public and brokers had no advance knowledge of what was taking place in the inner councils of the greatest of all American houses of finance. Wherever telephone and ticker flashed the news about the street groups of men gathered to discuss what was the all-absorbing topic.

Mr. Morgan, departing from his firm's traditional policy of silence, made a public statement announcing the withdrawal of five members of J. P. Morgan & Co. from directorships in 27 corporations and the intention to withdraw from more.

Change In Sentiment Cause.

Mr. Morgan's statement follows:

"The necessity of attending many board meetings has been so serious a burden upon our time that we have long wished to withdraw from the directorates of many corporations. Most of these directorships we have accepted with reluctance, and only because we felt constrained to keep in touch with properties which we had reorganized, or whose securities we had recommended to the public, both here and abroad.

"An apparent change in public sentiment in regard to directorships seems now to warrant us in seeking to resign from some of these connections. Indeed, it may be, in view of the change in sentiment upon the subject, that we shall be in a better position to serve such properties and their security holders, if we are not directors. We have already resigned from the companies mentioned, and we expect from time to time to withdraw from other boards upon which we feel there is no special obligation to remain."

MASTODON'S BONES UNEARTHED.

Remains Of Prehistoric Animal Found Near Roanoke.

Salem, Va.—S. D. Taliaferro, of Salem, superintendent of a crusher plant at Blue Ridge Springs, has unearthed the remains of a giant mastodon. The bones were found 20 feet under the surface. Mr. Taliaferro estimates that the mastodon was 30 feet long. Most of the bones were well preserved, and among them was a jawbone more than four feet in length.

THE MARRIED WOMEN WIN.

Toronto Gives Them the Same Franchise Rights As Others.

Toronto, Canada.—Married women are to be given the same franchise rights as widows and unmarried women owning property here, as a result of a popular vote. The proposition granting equal rights was carried by a vote of nearly 3 to 1.

FIREMAN KILLED; FOUR HURT.

Caught In Blaze Which Destroyed Wheeling High School.

Wheeling, W. Va.—John Talbott, a fireman, was killed and four other firemen were seriously injured when a new high school building here was destroyed by fire. The property loss was $150,000. The men were caught under a falling wall.

TO REVISE CUSTOMS RULES.

Work Expected To Be Completed Within 12 Months.

Washington.—A thorough revision of customs regulations will be undertaken immediately by a committee appointed by Assistant Secretary Hamlin, of the Treasury. The last revision took four years, but Secretary Hamlin hopes the work can be done this time in 12 months. Many regulations, made unnecessary by the new Tariff law, will be eliminated and others will have to be rewritten.

A BUMPER YEAR FOR THE FARMER

All Crop Records in United States Exceeded.

VALUE RUNS TO BILLIONS.

Crop Report Of Department Of Agriculture Shows the Gross Commodity Value Of American Farms To Be $9,750,000,000.

Washington.—All past records in crop values in the United States have been exceeded by 1913, according to the annual crop report of the Department of Agriculture.

The gross commodity production value of American farms is set at $9,750,000,000. This is nearly half a billion dollars more than the crop value for 1912, itself a record year. Of this huge sum products of the soil amounted to $6,100,000,000, while the total value of live stock amounted to $3,650,000,000.

Deducting for crops allowed to remain in lands and for consumption, the department places the cash sales of crops at $2,929,000,000 and the cash sales of live stock at $2,219,000,000.

It is estimated that this production was divided among approximately 6,500,000 farms. This makes the cash income per farm figure $900, according to department experts, who have employed 144,564 farmers in all parts of the country in tabulating these estimates. Here follows the various important crops and stock productions in order of their value:

Corn—Value, $1,692,000,000; production, 2,447,000,000 bushels.

Cotton—Value, $798,000,000; production, 13,677,000 bales.

Hay—Value, $797,000,000; production, 64,000,000 tons.

Wheat—Value, $610,000,000; production, 763,000,000 bushels.

Oats—Value, $440,000,000; production, 1,122,000,000 bushels.

Potatoes—Value, $228,000,000; production, 332,000,000 bushels.

Tobacco—Value, $122,481,000; production, 953,743,000 pounds.

Barley—Value, $96,000,000; production, 178,000,000 bushels.

Sweet Potatoes—Value, $43,000,000; production, 59,000,000 bushels.

Sugar Beet Sugar—Value, $24,000,000; production, 5,824,000 short tons.

Sugar Cane—Value, $21,000,000; production, 6,150,000 short tons.

Dairy Products—Value, $814,000,000.

Wool—Value, $51,000,000; production, 314,000,000 pounds.

He played with the Newark team in 1902. In Philadelphia he played second base for part of one season. He bought a half interest in the Hartford Club of the Connecticut League the next year and acted as manager. After quitting the diamond Dr. Daly took up politics.

CONFER ON SUGAR TRUST.

McReynolds and Marshall Discuss Federal Suit.

New York.—Attorney General McReynolds held a conference here with United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall to discuss, among other things, the disposition of the government's anti-trust suit against the American Sugar Refining Company, which, it is rumored, is seeking terms for a voluntary dissolution. Mr. McReynolds declined to discuss the outcome of the conference.

SENDS WILSON GREETING.

Astonishingly Cordial New Year Message From President Huerta.

Mexico City.—President Huerta, of Mexico, sent the following New Year's greeting to President Wilson:

To Hon. Woodrow Wilson,
President, United States,
Washington, D. C.

The Mexican Republic, through me, has the honor of wishing a happy New Year to the glorious people of the United States, so worthily represented by Your Excellency.

SYNOPSIS.

Scarlett, an American sonner of fortune in the employ of the French Imperial Police at the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war, is ordered to arrest Jeff Buckhurst, a leader of the Communists and suspected of having stolen the French crown jewels. While searching for Buckhurst, Scarlett is ordered to arrest Countess de Vassart and her group of socialists and escort them to the Belgian border. Scarlett finds Sylvia Elven of the Odeon disguised as a peasant and carries her to La Trappe where the countess and her friends are assembled. All are arrested. The countess saves Scarlett from a fatal fall from the roof of the house. He denounces Buckhurst as the leader of the Reds and the countess conducts him to where Buckhurst is secreted. German Uhlans descend on the place and Buckhurst escapes during the melee. Scarlett is wounded. He recovers consciousness in the countess' house at Monsbronn, where he is cared for by the countess. A fierce battle is fought in the streets between French and Prussian soldiers. Buckhurst professes repentance and returns the crown jewels to Scarlett. He declares he will give himself up to the authorities. Scarlett doubts his sincerity. Buckhurst urges the countess to go to Paradise. Buckhurst admits that he receives pay from the Prussians for information which he does not give. He secures passports to the French lines for Scarlett, the countess and himself. Scarlett reports to secret service in Paris and finds Mornac, shadow of the emperor, in charge. He deposits the crown jewels and later when making a detailed report, finds that pebbles have been substituted for the real stones. Speed, a comrade in the service, warns Scarlett that Mornac is dangerous. He also informs him that all the government treasure is being transported to the coast for shipment out of the country. Scarlett and Speed escape to join a circus. The circus arrives at Paradise. An order is received by the mayor calling the citizens to arms. Jacqueline, daughter of the Lizard, offers to join the circus to give exhibitions in the character of a mermaid. Scarlett rides friends of the Lizard. Scarlett calls on the countess at her home in Paradise. He finds Sylvia Elven also there. He learns the countess is withdrawn from the socialists. The sweet eternal friendship. The Lizard learns for Scarlett, through one Tric-Trac, that Mornac is head of communistic conspiracy. Scarlett learns wedding of Sylvia Elven through a letter from a former named Kelly. Orders regarding the treasure trains are changed owing to the discovery of a plot at Lorient. Orders are received for the expulsion of the circus. Buckhurst appears in Paradise and secures recruits for the red flag. Scarlett admits he is in love with the countess. Scarlett is injured by the cross lions and taken to the home of the countess. Preparations for the wedding of Scarlett and the countess. Treasure trains are discovered by Scarlett. Scarlett discovers Sylvia Elven sending a message to the Prussians. He sends warning of the plot and says the wedding is off. Buckhurst and his Reds make prisoners of Scarlett and the countess and plan their execution.

"Get me a horse!" said Buckhurst. "There are plenty of them in the stables, Mornac, you stay here; I'll ride over to the semaphore."

"Where are you going?" demanded Mornac's angry voice. "Do you expect me to stay here while you start for Paris?"

"You have your orders," said Buckhurst, menacingly. "Silence, you fool. Do you obey orders or not?"

Their voices receded. Speed sprang to the door to listen, then ran back to the window.

"Scarlett," he whispered, "there are the lights of a vessel at anchor off Groix."

I was beside him in an instant. "It's the cruiser," I said. "Oh, Speed, for a chance to signal!"

Jacqueline, standing beside Speed, said quietly: "I could swim it. Wait. Raise the window a little."

She cautiously unlocked the window and peered out into the dark garden.

"The cliff falls sheer from the wall yonder," she whispered. "I shall try to drop. I learned much in the circus. I am not afraid, Speed. I shall drop into the sea."

"To your death," I said.

"Possibly, m'sieu. It is a good death, however. I am not afraid."

"Close the window," muttered Speed. "They'd shoot her from the wall, anyway."

Again the child gravely asked permission to try.

"No," said Speed, harshly, and turned away. But in that instant Jacqueline flung open the window and vaulted into the garden. Before I could realize what had happened she was a glimmering spot in the darkness. Then Speed and I followed, running swiftly toward the foot of the garden, but we were too late; a slim, white shape rose from the top of the wall and leaped blindly out through the ruddy torch glare into the blackness beyond.

I looked at Speed. He stood wide-eyed, staring at vacancy.

"Could she do it?" I asked, horrified.

"God knows," he whispered.

Then we crept back to the window, where we entered in time to avoid discovery by a wretch who had succeeded in mounting the wall, torch in hand.

"Where is Jacqueline?" asked the countess, looking anxiously at the little blue skirt on Speed's knees. "Have they harmed that child?"

I told her.

A beautiful light grew in her eyes as she listened. "Did I not warn you that we Bretons know how to die?" she said.

There were noises outside our door, loud voices, hammering, the sound of furniture being dragged over stove floors, and I scarcely noticed when our door was opened again.

Then somebody called out our names; a file of half-drunken soldiers grounded arms in the passage way with a bang that brought us to our feet, as Mornac, flushed with wine, entered unsteadily, drawn sword in hand.

"I'm damned if I stay here any longer," he broke out, angrily. "I'll see whether my rascals can't shoot straight by torch-light."

The shuffling tread of the insurgent infantry echoed across the gravel court extinguished; blackness enveloped the chateau.

"Well," broke out Speed hoarsely, yard; torches behind the walls were "Good-by, Scarlett."

He held out his hand.

"Good-by," I said, stunned.

Then he went to the countess and offered his hand.

"I am so sorry for you," she said with a pallid smile. "You have much to live for. But you must not feel lonely, monsieur; you will be with us—we shall be close to you."

She turned to me, and her hands fell to her side.

"Are you contented," she asked.

"Yes," I answered.

"I, too," she said, sweetly, and offered her hands. I held them very tightly. "You say," I whispered, "that it is not love. But you do not speak for me. I love you."

A bright blush spread over brow and neck.

"See—it was love after all," she said, under her breath. "God be with you as today I love you."

"March!" cried Mornac, as two soldiers took station beside me.

Speed passed out first; I followed, the countess came behind me.

"Courage," I stammered, looking back at her as we stumbled out into the torch-lit garden.

She smiled adorably. Her forefathers had mounted the guillotine smiling.

A soldier dressed like a Turco lifted a torch and set it in the flower bed under the wall, illuminating the spot where we were to stand. As this soldier turned to come back I saw his face.

"Salah Ben Ahmed!" I cried, hoarsely. "Do Marabouts do this butcher's work?"

The Turco stared at me as though stunned.

"Salah Ben-Ahmed is a disgraced soldier!" I said, in a ringing voice.

"It's a lie!" he shouted, in Arabic—"it's a lie, O my inspector! Speak! Have these men tricked me? Are you not Prussians?"

"Silence! Silence!" bawled Mornac. "Turco, fall in! Fall in, I say! What! You menace me!" he snarled, cocking his revolver.

Then a man darted out of the red shadows of the torch-light and fell upon Mornac with a knife, and dragged him down and rolled on him, stabbing him through and through, while the mutilated wretch screamed and screamed until his soul struggled out through the flame-shot darkness and fled to its last dreadful abode.

The Lizard rose, shaking his fagot knife; they fell upon him, clubbing and stabbing with stock and bayonet, but he swung his smeared and sticky blade, clearing a circle around him. And I think he could have cut his way free had not Tric-Trac shot him in the back of the head.

Then a frightful tumult broke loose. Three of the torches were knocked to the ground and trampled out as the insurgents, doubly drunken with wine and the taste of blood, seized me and tried to force me against the wall, but the Turco, with his shrill, wolf-like battle yelp attacked them, saber-bayonet in hand. Speed, too, had wrested a rifle from a half-stupefied ruffian, and now stood at bay before the countess; I saw him wielding his heavy weapon like a flail; then in the darkness Tric-Trac shot at me, so close that the powder flame scorched my leg. He dropped his rifle to spring for my throat, knocking me flat, and, crouching on me, strove to strangle me, and I heard him whining with eagerness while I twisted and writhed to free my windpipe from his thin fingers.

At last I tore him from my body and struggled to my feet. He, too, was on his legs with a bound, running, doubling, dodging; and at his heels I saw a dozen sailors, broadaxes glittering, chasing him from tree to shrub.

"Speed!" I shouted—"the sailors from the Fer-de-Lance!"

I had picked up a rifle with a broken bayonet; the countess, clasping my left arm; stood swaying in the rifle smoke, eyes closed; and when a horrid screeching arose from the depths of the garden where they were destroying Tric-Trac, she fell to shuddering, hiding her face on my shoulder.

Suddenly Speed appeared, carrying a drenched little figure, partly wrapped in a sailor's pea-jacket, slim limbs drooping, blue with cold.

"Put out that fire in there," he said, hoarsely, "we must get her into bed. Hurry, for God's sake, Scarlett! There's nobody in the house!"

"Jacqueline! Jacqueline! brave little Bretonne," murmured the countess, bending forward and gathering the unconscious child into her strong, young arms.

A fresh company of sailors passed on the double, rifles trailing, their officer sleeting encouragement. And as we came in view of the semaphore, I saw the signal tower on fire from base to top. The marines fired steadily from the windows above us.

"They want the Red Terror!" laughed the sailors. "They shall have it!"

Blackened, scorched, almost suffocated I staggered back to the tearoom, where the countess stood clasping Jacqueline, huddled in a blanket, and smoothing the child's wet curls away from a face as white as death.

Together we carried her back through the smoking hallway, up the stairs to my bedroom, and laid her in the bed.

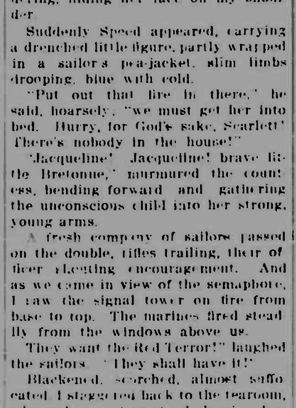
The child opened her eyes as we drew the blankets.

"Where is Speed," she asked, dreamily.

A moment later he came in, and she turned her head languidly and smiled.

Jacqueline! Jacqueline!" he whispered, bending close above her.

"Do you love me, Speed?"



"Ah, Jacqueline," he stammered, more than you can understand."

* * * * * * *

Late that night the light cavalry from Lorient rode into Paradise. At dawn the colonel, established in the mayory, from whence its foolish occupant had fled, sent for Speed and me, and when we reported he drew from his heavy dolman our commissions, restoring us to rank and pay in the regiment de marche which he commanded.

At sunrise I had bade good by to the sweetest woman on earth, at noon we were miles to the westward, riding like demons on Buckhurst's heavy trail.

I am not sure that we ever saw him again, though once, weeks later, Speed and I and a dozen hussars gave chase to a mounted man near St. Brieuc, and that man might have been Buckhurst. He led us a magnificent chase straight to the coast, where we rode plump into a covey of Prussian hussars, who were standing on their saddles, backing away at the telegraph wires with their heavy, curved sabers.

Stabbing Him Through and Through.

That was our first and last sight of the enemy in either Prussian or communistic guise, though in the long, terrible days and nights of that winter of '71, when three French armies froze and the white death, not the Prussians, ended all for France, rumors of insurrection came to us from the starving capital, and we heard of the red flag flying on the Hotel-de-Ville, and the rising of the cabineers under Flourens; and some spoke of the leader of the insurrection and called him John Buckhurst.

Then, for three blank, bitter months, freezing and starving, the First regiment de marche of Lorient Hussars stood guard at Brest over the diamonds of the crown of France.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Secret.

The news of the collapse of the army of the East found our wretchedly clothed and half-starved hussars still patroling the environs of Brest from Belair to the Pont Tournant, and from the banks of the Elorn clear around the ramparts to Launion bay. For three months our troopers scarcely left their saddles, except to be taken to the hospital in Recouvrance.

Suddenly the nightmare ended with a telegram. Paris had surrendered.

On the first day of March, by papers from London, we learned that the war was at an end, and that the preliminary treaty of Sunday, the 26th, had been signed at Versailles.

The same mail brought to me an astonishing offer from Cairo, to assist in the reorganization and accept a commission in the Egyptian military police. Speed and I, shivering in our ragged uniforms by the barrack stove, discussed the matter over a loaf of bread and a few sardines, until we fell asleep in our greasy chairs.

When I awoke in the black morning hours I knew that I should go. All the roaming instinct in me was roused. I, a nomad, had stayed too long in one stale place; I must be moving on.

Leave of absence, and permission to travel pending acceptance of my resignation, I asked for and obtained before the stable trumpets awoke my comrade from his heavy slumber by the barrack stove.

Speed awoke with the trumpets, and stared at me where I knelt before the stove in my civilian clothes, strapping up my little packet.

"Oh," he said, briefly, "I knew you were going."

"So did I," I replied. "Will you ride to Trecourt with me? I have two weeks' permission for you."

We bolted our breakfast of soup and black bread, and bawled for our horses, almost crazed with impatience, now that the moment had come at last.

Far ahead we caught sight of the smoke of a locomotive.

"Landerneau!" gasped Speed. "Ride hard, Scarlett!"

The station master saw us and halted the moving train at a frantic signal from Speed, whose uniform was to be reckoned with by all station masters, and ten minutes later we stood swaying in a cattle car, huddled close to our horses to keep warm, while the locomotive tore eastward, whistling frantically, and an ocean of black smoke poured past, swarming with sparks.

At Quimperle some gendarmes aided us to disembark our horses, and a subofficer respectfully offered us hospitality at the barracks across the square; but we were in our saddles the moment our horses' hoofs struck the pavement, galloping for Paradise, with a sweet, keen wind blowing, hinting already of the sea.

As we dismounted in the court yard the sun flashed out from the fringes of a huge, snowy cloud.

"There is Jacqueline!" cried Speed, tossing his bridle to me in his excitement, and left me planted there until a servant came from the stable.

Then I followed, every nerve quivering, almost dreading to set foot within, lest happiness awake me and I find myself in the freezing barracks once more, my brief dream ended.

After a while a glimmer of common sense returned to me. I squared my shoulders and breached deeply, then rose and walked to the window.

A step at the door, and I wheeled, trembling.

The Countess de Vassart stood in the doorway, a smile trembling on her lips. In her gray eyes I read hope; and I took her hands in mine. She stood silent with bent head, exquisite in her silent shyness, and I told her I loved her, and that I asked for her love; that I had found employment in Egypt, and that it was sufficient to justify my asking her to wed me.

"As for my name," I said, "you know that is not the name I bear; yet, knowing that, you have given me your love. You read my dossier in Paris; you know why I am alone, without kin, without a family, without a home. Yet you believe that I am not tainted with dishonor. And I am not. Listen, this is what happened; this is why I gave up all; and . . . this is my name!" . . .

And I beat my head and whispered the truth for the first time in my life to any living creature.

When I had ended I stood still, waiting, head still bowed beside hers.

She laid her hand on my hot face and slowly drew it close beside hers.

"What shall I promise you?" she whispered.

"Yourself, Eline."

"Take me. . . . Is that all?"

"Your love."

She turned in my arms and clasped her hands behind my head, pressing her mouth to mine.

(THE END.)

BELIEVE BANANA FATAL TREE

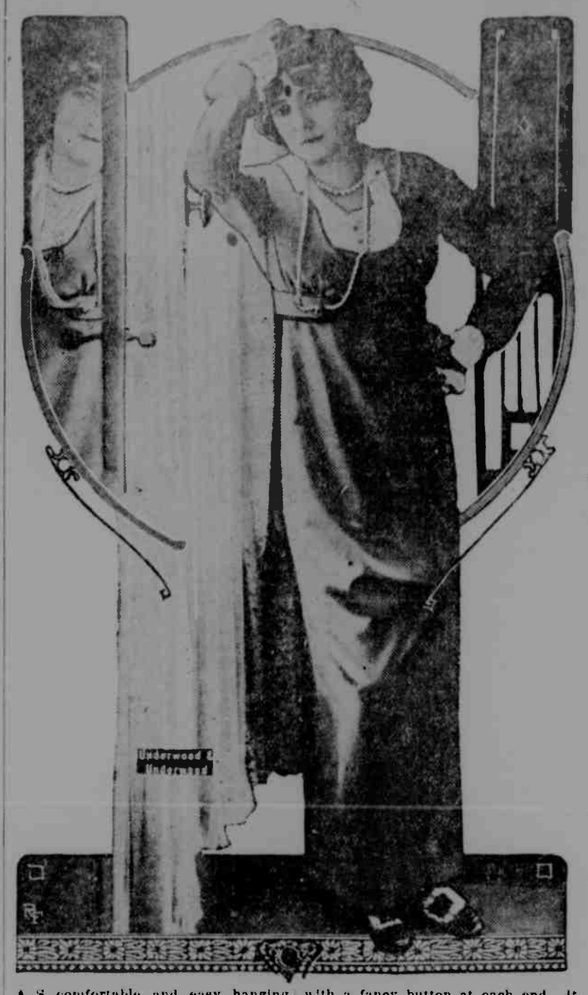
Christian Inhabitants of the East Ascribe Its Origin to the Garden of Eden.

There exists a legend relative to the Christian inhabitants of the east that they believe the banana to be the tree of the source of good and evil, in a bunch of the fruit of which the serpent that tempted Eve hid itself, and they add that when Adam and Eve became ashamed of their nakedness they covered themselves with the leaves of this plant.

The origin of the banana is given as India, at the foot of the Himalayas, where it has been cultivated since remotest antiquity. Its origin in the new world is as doubtful as the origin of the American Indian. Natural to Asia and Africa, where more than 20 distinct species of the genus are known, it is said to have been brought first to America from Spain early in the sixteenth century and planted in the island of Santo Domingo, whence its spread was rapid through the surrounding islands and the mainland. This has never been authentically established, however, and some authorities include the banana among the articles that formed the base of food supply of the Incas and the Aztecs before the arrival of the Spaniards.

Certain it is that throughout the whole meridinal America there is a strong tradition that at least two species of the plantain were cultivated long before the coming of the Europeans. Furthermore, it is singular that in all the languages indigenous to the region where the banana appears that the plant has a special name, not proceeding from the conquerors as was the case in the names of many other plants, animals and various articles introduced into America after its discovery.

Grown over the entire extent of the meridian of the earth, the fruit of the banana today forms in large part the principal food of a majority of the peoples living under the tropical zone.—National Geographic Magazine.



Bees Starved to Death.

Thousands of German emigrants died of starvation in Holland this summer, whither they had gone in search of food. The victims were not persons, however, but bees, of which the beekeepers of Westphalia and the Rhine districts take thousands of hives across the frontier every summer to the great peel heath, which in summer is covered with masses of wild flowers. Special trains are employed to facilitate the transit of the honey-makers. This year, however, the flowers bloomed later than usual and many of the bees starved, so that honey will be scarce and dear in Germany this winter.

New Idea for Belting.

Those who buy belting for machinery will not have to worry about the price of leather in the years to come if a certain sort of belting which is being manufactured by a firm in Connecticut proves to be a success. The new product is called flexible steel belting and is realy a step further than the chain and sprocket idea. The belting is made in a complicated series of links and can be used on all pulleys of from two inches in diameter to the largest size. It has been designed especially for service where atmospheric conditions are bad for leather and rubber belts.

Cloth Gown Suitable for Daily Wear

As comfortable and easy hanging as a morning gown but with every mark of afternoon apparel, this design is the simplest of all interpretations of our present modes. The skirt and bodice appear to be cut in one, but are separate.

The skirt, made of two pieces in goods of average width, might be draped on the figure from a single width of the widest materials. It is shaped in at the hips and there is a little fullness at the back. The shaping and gathers afford just room enough for the swell of the figure at the hips.

The waist line is high and very easy in order to make a free movement of the arms possible. It is cut with long shoulders and large armseyes. The fullness at the bust is taken care of by a group of plaits at each side terminating under the belt. It is in its careful finishing touches that the gown displays the talent of its noted designer. All very simple models must rely upon finish and cleverness in cut or drapery, to rise out of the class of the commonplace.

The square neck is shaped and finished with a piping of velvet. The front is cut into a double breast, the overlapping side fastened down with two buttons. Its lower edge lies over the top of the skirt where bodice and skirt are joined.

A narrow belt, with rounded ends, is finished with a piping and fastened with a fancy button at each end. It does not encircle all of the waist, allowing a straight front appearance (which is smart and clever) in the interval between the ends.

There is a small turnover collar in the sailor shape, of fine embroidered batiste. The neck is filled in with a folded chemisette of fine figured net. A plaited ruffle of the same net finishes the sleeves.

A strand of large pearls and a longer one of smaller pearls finishes the pretty toilette. But pearls might be replaced with strands of any of the many fashionable glass beads that harmonize with the gown in color.

This model is well adapted to the unusual new shades in which fashionable fabrics are made. Mustard color, gold, green, paprika, mahogany and the curious blues and greens that are displayed in cloth and silk look best when made up in the simplest manner. But the design is good in the colors which we know well, such as royal blue, amethyst, golden brown and dark green. It would be pretty developed in black, and is an especially good model for velvet.

Colonial slippers and silk stockings are worn with it, and such a dress calls for a simple and well dressed coiffure. Like all simple things it will not grow tiresome to the wearer, and might be used daily during the reign of our easy going fashions.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

DRESSING THE BABY WHEN HE GOES OUT IN COLD WEATHER

The baby must have his airing every day no matter if the weather be sharp. He must be thoroughly protected against the cold and never allowed to get chilled.

Besides the clothes he wears in the house he is to be provided with articles which he will need to fortify him against the cold. If he is dressed in the right way a jaunt in the open air can do him nothing but good and he will like it and thrive on it.

An extra flannel skirt and long soft woolen stockings should be added to the clothes he wears in the house, when he is going out, at this time of the year. His little boots of yarn are to be worn over the stockings. His mittens of silk and wool are knitted double, and his little cap is very closely knitted of the softest yarn.

In making the cap it is not only closely knitted but made large enough so that it turns back at the front. This gives additional warmth, and as he grows larger rapidly, allows the cap to be turned back less, so that he may wear it for some time. Narrow ribbon run through it at the nape of the neck ties in a little bow at the back. This allows the cap to be adjusted to the tiny head and let out afterward as needed. The ties are either of narrow ribbon or soft mull. A small close fitting silk cap may be worn under the knitted cap.

His little boots and shoes are often made of flannel embroidered with silk and laced with ribbon. They are cut out of a pattern and are soft and pretty. Knitted or crocheted boots are made with quite long tops for the baby's outing, and fastened with soft crochet cord and small zephyr tassels at the ankle.

When his head and hands and feet have been protected, he has the added comfort of his coat. Finally he is tucked into his carriage under a robe of fur or elderdown and the top adjusted to protect him from the wind if there is any.

The baby is sometimes kept too warm in the house, and is fretful on this account. In steam heated apartments particularly, he will not need a lot of flannels. He must always wear his band over the bowels, but a pinning blanket is not needed. He wears a flannel petticoat and a light slip. But for a house not so warm, or when he goes out, he must have an ample supply of extra clothing.

His dresses and skirts are not made as long as they used to be. Twenty-seven inches now is the standard length. They are not much trimmed, but are made of very fine materials and finished with fine lace edgings, little tucks, small sprays of hand embroidery and scallops. Feather stitching is much admired. One who knows how to sew nicely can make all his belongings in the best manner at home.

Tea Apron of Finest Batiste.

Daintiest among afternoon tea aprons is the one made of a half yard, half width, of finest batiste or organdie, finished at the lower and side edges with cotton lace picot bordering that is scarcely more than a series of long, loose loops, and at the top slightly gathered into a waistband of narrow ribbon, decorated at both ends with bowknots, from which fall a half dozen or more ends in quarter inch wide ribbon, bowknotted midway of the length. The center of the apron is ornamented with two insets of embroidered filet lace. One of these, placed six inches below the waistband, is a four-inch square, and the other, placed six inches above the lower edge, is a two by four inch oblong. Of course, lace of any other substantial sort could be employed and white net, soutache embroidered, is equally as pretty as filet.

Duvetyn, which has made so strong an appeal this fall for suitings, has much in its favor besides the exquisite colorings in which it is to be had. It is not only soft and supple, but has considerable warmth.

OLD HEROES CHARM NO MORE

Deerfoot, Thaddeus of Warsaw and Others Seem to Be Forgotten by the Youth of Today.

A group of American schoolboys visiting England were taken to Rugby to gather impressions. The English masters, fearful that the boys, instead of using their eyes, would carry away just the impression they had brought an impression, of course, left by reading "Tom Brown's School Days"—made eager inquiries, which brought to light the fact that not one of the hundred boys had ever read the schoolboy classic. Nor was that the worst. Few of the English boys attending the school had read the book, either. A recent investigation in an American city revealed the astounding fact that the charm of Deadwood Dick and other rugged western types begins to pall on Young America decidedly early.

It would scarcely surprise one to hear that Deerfoot no longer casts his potent spell, that Thaddeus of Warsaw is unknown, that the brisk and self reliant heroes of Alger, Optic and Henty are no longer brisk enough, and that Tom Sawyer himself is out of date. What do the youngsters read nowadays? Have they become addicted to treatises on population, exposures of graft, articles on scientific management, arguments for the suffrage and proposals to let the people rule? It may be that the cradles and the nurseries of the present are sheltering brains so eager and active that the best thing we grownups can do is to relegate ourselves promptly to the shelf.

"Konx Ompax."

Thomas Jefferson Hogg, the humorist, once proved beyond a doubt that an old fragment of classic jargon still preserved a certain magical power to soften the savage breast.

One day, as he walked near Covent Garden, an Irish laborer fancied Hogg had pushed him, and turned upon the young Oxonian, who was alone, with angry words. A number of onlookers quickly gathered to see what promised to be a row.

Hogg turned upon the Irishman. "I have put my hand into the hamper," he began, with calm severity. "I have looked upon the sacred barley. I have eaten out of the drum. I have drunk and was well pleased. I have said Konx ompax, and it is finished!"

"Have you, sir?" said the Irishman, thoroughly mystified and appeased.

A woman in the crowd said: "Now, Pat, what have you had?" Others called out, "What is it Paddy has had?" Hogg turned solemnly away, and left the bewildered Irishman to get out of his scrape as best he could.—Youth's Companion.

Wallpapers.

Paper for screens and partitions of rooms was common in China as early as the fourth century. In the sixteenth century the use of wallpaper became fashionable in Holland, and soon afterwards it was commonly seen in English houses. Originally Chinese papers were printed from blocks, handpainted, or stamped, the designs being exquisite. Modern printing and stamping machines made the manufacture of continuous rolls of wallpaper possible.

TURN FROM MEDICAL STUDY

Past Year Has Witnessed a Marked Decrease in the Number of Students Enrolled.

During the past year there were 640 women studying medicine, or 39 less than last year, a decrease of 40 below 1911 and a decrease of 367 below 1910. The percentage of women students to the total number of medical students was 3.8, as compared with 3.2 last year. There were 154 women graduates this year, or 3.8 per cent of all graduates.

There has been a very marked decrease, says the Journal of the American Medical association, in the number of women in medicine since 1910, when there were 907 women students and 154 graduates, and in 1909, when there were 921 women students and 162 graduates. Of all the women matriculants, 138 (21.6 per cent.) were in attendance at the two medical colleges for women, as compared with 143 (21.1 per cent.) in 1912, 134 (19.7 per cent.) in 1911, and 155 (17.1 per cent.) in 1910. The remaining 502 (78.4 per cent.) were matriculated in the 55 coeducational colleges. From the two women's colleges there were 33, or 21.4 per cent of all women graduates, while 121, or 78.6 per cent., secured their degrees from coeducational colleges.

Power in Gray Matter.

The genius cannot be explained and possibly never will be, but a partial explanation of his tremendous power in some one direction is offered by the examination of his brain after death. Only lately a very eminent surgeon of Philadelphia died and when his brain was examined it was found that for a large part it was like a child's, but in those parts especially required by his profession it was developed far more than is usual and the layers of gray matter at these spots were inordinately thick. It is never right to draw any broad conclusion from a single instance, but science has generalized from many instances of this kind until it is ready now to say that thought power is proportionate to the gray matter in the centers most used or needed.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 8,. 1914.

JANUARY first a vessel from Australia arrived at San Francisco with 1800 bales of wool, valued at $100,000. This is the largest shipment ever received at that port. This is the fruit of a Democratic tariff.

THE best resolution a Garrett county business man can make is to place an advertisement in the Republican every week during 1914. Persistant advertising is bound to bring results even if only a few lines.

THE readers of THE REPUBLICAN will be kept posted in all matters pretaining to the welfare of Garrett county during the present session of the legislature. We will receive information direct from Annapolis, for publication in these columns.

WHY not have an old fashioned spelling match in Oakland? It would afford a very interesting and entertaining evening for our citizins. Wherever held they have proved a source of much pleasure and interest and drew large numbers of people to the hall.

NEXT Wednesday the board of school commissioners of Garrett county will meet in their rooms in the court house. Citizens of the county having any business connected with the public schools should attend this meeting. It is for this purpose the board publishes the time of its meeting. They will be glad to hear from you.

MERCER county, West Virginia voted half a million dollars for good roads on Dec. 29, 1913. A splendid day's work for the people of that county. That is one way to get good roads and a mighty good way it is. Let the citizens of Garrett think the matter over. We need good roads and we are goning to have them. But when?

WITHIN the next two or three years eggs will be selling at $1 per dozen is the prediction made by W. T. Whitman, a Pennsylvania expert, while addressing a meeting of farmers. "The increase in the production of eggs is large," he said, "but it is not keeping pace with the demand." You had better get ready to supply the demand.

THE New Year finds the subscription list of The Republican growing larger. Our subscribers are doing nicely by telling their neighbors about Garrett county's big newspaper, filled with items of interest. The Republican is becoming more and more the People's paper. That is just what we are trying to make it. for the people, with the people and of the people. When you and your family have read this week's paper, please hand it to a neighbor who is so unfortunate as not to be a subscriber and let him enjoy the good things provided for you.

THESE days we hear much about "trusts" and the large manufacturing companies, of a very unfavorable character and doubtless many of them deserve all they receive, but at the same time some of these great corporations deal generously with their employes, as in this instance: The United States Steel Corporation will shortly distribute its annual bonus to its employes. The amount is expected to be close to $2,000,000, as against $1,500,000 in 1912 and $1,450,000 in 1911. In the past year employes also received increases in salaries aggregating $12,000,000 annualy.

UNDER existing law, 25 per cent. of the gross receipts from the forests is paid over to the states by the federal government for the benefit of country schools and roads. An additional 10 per cent. is expended in building roads and trails for the benefit of the public. It is thought that $587,000 will be available for the states during the current year from last year's receipts, besides $235,000 provided for in the road fund. Altogether, including special funds to Arizona and New Mexico, the national forests provided nearly $867,000 to be expended for the benefit of the states in which they are situated.

THE REPUBLICAN predicts that when the legislature of this State will have ended its session, that there will appear on the statute books of the State, one of the best county-wide local option laws found in the State, secured by the efforts of Senator Harvey J. Speicher, and by the enactment of such a bill the Senator will have fully met his frank, manly pledges to the voters of this county previous to the election and this all will be accomplished without the blowing of trumphets, and the exhausting of a gas bag, notwithstanding the slanders statement of would-be-wise acres. Be patient. Time will tell. This is our opinion. Reserve yours if you will.

BUYING IN DISTANT CITIES.

People sometimes tell the home merchant that he does not sell as cheaply as metropolitan stores or mail order houses in more or less distant cities.

Any person wishing to compare the two scales of prices should inquire whether the distant stores was selling the same goods. Second grade products can be made to look very handsome in a catalog cut. But the home merchant can not float that kind of goods. They come come back to his store too easily.

It is amusing to see the bother people will take for trifling sums they think they are saving. They will travel many miles, spend street car fares, pay for luncheons, hotel bills, and tips. They get tired and footsore, tramping around overgrown stores separated by long distances. They wait for change, carry bundles, and pay express. They pay a high price in money and energy for supposed economies.

When you buy goods away from home you rarely take them back. The bother and expense looks prohibitive. When you buy at home you would return them if dissatistied. This takes the time of clerks, frequently the goods have been injured while in your hands.

Where it is so easy to return goods, the customer must be given both the worth of his money, and something suited to his needs. A higher grade of salespeople is thus required in the home store. To make a sale that will stick so near home, the customer must be given intelligent advice.

Thus the public demands from the home store more competent service than it exacts from the distant merchant. This means additional expense, which is counterbalanced by lower rents and like economies. When you consider how generously the home store responds to all kinds of demands, reasonable and unreasonable, the range of its price is remarkably low.

TURNING OVER THE NEW LEAF

Have we done it? If so, see that it is kept "turning over" for the next 358 days, and as the days come and go, that the entry made is, "something done to day to advance the interests of Oakland and Garrett county. Let this be our resolve: That we will unite in a most earnest and persistent effort to make Oakland a larger and better city, a cleaner, consequently a healthy city in every respect. The ladies of the Civic Club, especially for the past few years, have had cleaning up days and have accomplished great things.

The city council has greatly improved the appearance of the city, by requiring property owners to put down brick pavements in place of the rotton board walks.

Oakland ought to have a city hall of modern architecture. Nothing would advertise the city to a better advantage. Oakland is able to erect such a building. Why not decide to build it this year?

Another thing Oakland needs badly, and that is, putting into effect the plan of the ladies' civic club for the improvement of the Oakland cemetery property. Why not decide that question and make this an object of special effort, to be fulfilled this year. Can we not have a grand rally for this purpose? A bazar, a grand concert, a three days fair, an effort of some kind to secure the last cent needed to complete the work?

THE DEATH RECORD

MRS. ANNA A. SHROUT

Saturday evening last, at her home in Oakland, Mrs. Anna Amelia Shrout departed this life, aged 82 years and 9 months. The interment took place Tuesday afternoon. Mrs Shrout is survived by three daughters, Mrs. James Tasker, Mrs. Ike Shrout and Mrs. Dave Stevens, and by two sons, Rizer and Grant.

MRS. NAOMI SIMPSON.

Mrs. Naomi Simpson, widow of James Simpson, died Thursday morning, in Cumberland. She is survived by the following children: Miss Maud and Miss Leota, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Mary and Miss Olive, of Cumberland; Mrs. James Rankin, of Westernport; William S. of Juniata, Pa.; Charles J. Harry B. and August, of Cumberland. Deceased was a member of Centre Street M. E. church, of Cumberland. Interment was made in Philos Cemetery, Westernport.

Other relatives, brothers and sisters, are: Nathan Warnick, Elk Garden, W. Va.; Dora Warnick, Kitzmiller; Miss Zilpah Coleman, Oakmont, W. Va.; Mrs. Hannah Warnick, Kitzmiller.

CHARLES BILL, SR.

The funeaal of Charles Bill, Sr., who died suddenly at his home in Grantsville, took place on December 30th, from the new Lutheran church at Grantsville, Rev. Levi Young, officiating.

Mr. Bill was born at Frankfort on the Rhine in Germany, August 27, 1831; came to this country when 17 years old and has been a resident of Garrett county 63 years. At the time of his death he was 82 years old.

He is survived by six children. They are Charles J., of Grantsville; John of Keyser; Frank, of Lonaconing; Henry, of Wheeling; Mrs J. A. Frazer, of Niles, Mich., and Miss Louize, at home.

Mr. Bill was one of the oldest members of the Lutheran church. He attended the cornerstone laying and dedication ceremonies of both the old and the new Lutheran churches at Grantsville.

SAMUEL FERGUSON.

Last Saturday morning at his home in Oakland, Mr. Samuel Ferguson closed his earthly existence and entered into "the life to come." He was one of the oldest citizens of Oakland, as well as one of the most respected citizens of the county. Mr. Ferguson was born in the Flat Woods settlement, near Hoyes in 1833, making him at the time of his death 81 years old. Mr. Ferguson raised a family of thirteen children, nine of whom are living. He was a brother of Rev. Gideon Ferguson, a useful local preacher. In early youth he became a christian and united with the Methodist church. He was very energetic and enthusiastic in his christian life. He was wonderfully gifted in prayer. In the early day, he was employed at the Davis saw mill and lumber camp, and was associated with Messrs. Abraham Wotring and George W. Kepler, who were also employed in the same camp. Mr. Ferguson's christian life in that camp had much to do with molding the lives of many who came in contact with him, especially in the case of Rev. George W. Kepler. For years he has been an official member of the Methodist church.

Mr. Ferguson is survived by his widow, a most excellent lady, and nine children.

The funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon in the Methodist church, Oakland, and were in charge of Rev. Dr. Moore, pastor of the church. Rev. John M. Davis, who had known and been associated with Mr. Ferguson for years feelingly spoke of Mr. Ferguson's influence with his fellow man. Rev. E. Manges, pastor of the Lutheran church, also tenderly refered to this man and the life he led. Monday morning a short service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Moore at the late home of Mr. Ferguson, after which the remains were taken to Hoyes, and a short service was conducted in the Methodist church by Rev. H. E. Friend, after which interment took place in the church cemetery.

BITTINGER.

Rev. E. E. Oney, of Gettysburg, held three services in the Lutheran church in this village, during the past week, all of which were attended by large audiences. The sermons were effective and well delivered, and Mr. Oney returned to Gettysburg on Mondoy morning with the good will and respect, as well as the best wishes, of all the people.

At the annual meeting of The Mutual Telephone Co., held on last Saturday, Simon Brenneman was elected president and Wilson Bittinger, vice president. The other oeffiers were re-elected for another year.

Mrs. David Miller and son, Master Irvin, of near Deer Park, spent last week with relatives here.

A. R. Bernard, of Meadow Mountain, was a business caller in this village one day last week.

Deputy Sheriff Clyde Shartzer, of Oakland, was in this neighborhood a few days ago attending to official business.

Misses Melva Bartley and Myrtle Emery, and Mr. John Walburn, of Jennings, spent Suuday afternoon with friends here.

Messrs. Wm. Stanton, Mahlon Miller and Lewis Hachman, of Grantsville, attended the meeting of the Mutual Telephone Co. here last Saturday.

Silas Platter moved his family from this village to the Henry B. Platter farm last week.

The snow on last Sunday morning prevented Rev. Miller from meeting his appointment at The Glade Mennonite church.

Grover Wiley has rented and will operate the coal mine on the Peter P. Lohr farm, near this place.

The local banks give notice of these meetings in our advertising columns today.

Garrett county is fortunate at this session of the legislature in having two men of legislative experience, viz: Mr. Harvey J. Speicher in the Senate, and Elliott C. Harvey in the House of Delegates. Mr. Harvey will have the hearty cooperation of Delegate Savage in all matters pertaining to the general welfare of the county.

The funeral of the late Patrick Garvey, of Bloomington, whose body was found at east end of Potomac Island Park, as mentioned in The Republican of last week, took place from St. Peter's Catholic church, where a solemn high requiem mass was sung. The interment was in St. Peter's cemetery. The funeral was largely attended.

The Imperial Co., of Cumberland, use a page of The Republican to tell you about its January clearing sale. The entire stock is reduced in price. Their advertisement will interest the ladies. This is the third full page advertisement from a Cumberland business house to appear in The Republican within a month. These gentlemen have learned by experience that an advertisement in this paper brings results, and there is no question about this statement, as Republican advertisers will testify.

The vacation is over and the students who had been home for the holidays have returned to their respective schools. Those who took a few days leave of absence from business are back at their desks, in the office or store to resume their duties for another year. May they each and all experience that the year 1914 will be the most successful and happiest of their life, and may a generous and good natured spirit prevail throughout the year for the uplift of mankind and the best interests of Garrett county.

Many of Oakland's young people who are pursuing their studies at various institutions in almost every part of the country have returned to their respective schools. A HEAVY FALL OF SNOW

Now Covers the Eastern Section of Country On the Mountain Top

Last Friday night a snow storm visited this mountain region. It continued to snow all day Saturday and by night about 12 inches of snow covered the ground. Sunday some snow and some rain fell. Some little snow Monday. It is estimated that the snow is about 16 inches deep.

So heavy was the fall of snow that trees were broken down and limbs broken from trees; telegraph, telephone and electric wires were wrenched from their fastenings and fell to the ground. Monday afternoon the old stable in the rear of J. M. Davis & Son's store building, Oakland, was crushed to the ground, a complete wreck.

The snow fall made excellent sledding and the farmers and teamsters have been actively engaged in hauling cross ties, mining props, lumber, etc. The merry jingle of sleigh bells are heard. It did not take long to break good roads, which because of the dampness of the snow packed solid. There were no drifts. It was necessary to shovel the snow from shed roofs to prevent their destruction.

The Legislature of 1914 has a larger number of difficult problems before it than almost any other General Assembly for many years has had to deal with. But it comes to its work with its hands united and it's spirit free—with twice the moral capacity and desire to do great things than is possessed by the ordinary Legislature. This is more than half the battle. What a chance for a splendid legislative record!—Sun.

Assemblymen W. W. Savage and Elliott C. Harvey spent Friday in Oakland consulting with their constituents relative to contemplated legislation to be passed during the present session of the General Assembly. Senator Speicher was also in Oakland where he met quite a number of his constituents and discussed with them various measures of public importance. The Senator and the two members above mentioned have the confidence of the people of the county. They are clear-cut in their views upon public matters and can be wholly depended upon to put through any measure that has merit, constructive in character and of benefit to the public.

Monday morning of this week work upon printing the minutes of the fifth and sixth annual sessions of the Laymen's Association of the West Virginia Conference, M. THE TRAGEDY OF GENIUS

CHARLES TELLIER INVENTOR OF COLD STORAGE

THE REV. HANNIBAL GOODWIN INVENTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHIC FILM

ELI WHITNEY, INVENTOR OF THE COTTON GIN

DR. RUDOLF DIESEL, INVENTOR OF ONE OF THE GREATEST OF ENGINES

MAN whose temper was quick and whose thumbs were thick used to indulge in violent language every time his wife called upon him to button her waist up the back. He had a hard time getting the hooks into the eyes, and even after he had them all adjusted there was no telling when some of them would get loose.

One day after he had nearly all of them fastened his wife wriggled a bit and most of the hooks came loose.

"I wish some darn fool would invent a hook that would stay hooked," said the husband after he had uttered some things that are unnecessary to repeat.

"Why don't you?" asked the wife, not satirically nor because she thought he was a fool, but for her own peace of mind and to save him annoyance.

"I will some day when I have a few minutes to spare," he declared.

And he did. From a simple device which he patented and put on the market he has made nearly $2,000,000.

What a contrast this case is to that of Charles Tellier, who died the other day. Tellier's whole life was one of poverty and struggle. More than once he was cast into prison for debt. He died of starvation, being too poor to buy enough food to sustain life, yet no man in all the history of the world did more to conserve the food supply of the human race than did Charles Tellier.

He was the inventor of cold storage. Other men have been made rich through his genius. Hundreds of millions of dollars are saved each year through the process he developed. But for him great cities such as New York, London, Paris and Berlin would be in danger of famine if cut off from their sources of food supply through a great storm or the interruption of their lines of communication.

New York, so far as its fresh food is concerned, lives from day to day, says the New York Sun. In 1888, when it was tied up by a blizzard, most of the food within the city had been consumed before 72 hours had passed. Another 72 hours would have meant much suffering. Today, with a tremendous increase in population, its position is one of comparative safety. It carries in cold storage enough food to support it for weeks.

And yet Charles Tellier died of starvation!

France was responsible for Tellier, but every nation was his debtor. He was born in Amiens. More than 40 years ago after being released from a debtor's prison, he perfected a system for the preservation of meats, vegetables and fruits. Thirty-seven years ago a ship equipped with his cold storage appliance was at sea for more than 100 days and brought its cargo of meat into port as fresh as the day it was put aboard.

Some inventors are careless. Many of them lack business ability. Tellier's ideas were appropriated by clever men who thought only of using them to their own advantage without feeling any sense of obligation to the inventor. Some of them laughed or scoffed at him when he protested that they were robbing him of his rights.

Sensitive and proud he tried to hide his bitterness and sought solace in working on other great inventions for the good of mankind. It takes money to prosecute studies and experiments, and Tellier had little of it. One day some one reproached the French government for its neglect of Tellier, who was in dire want. The government acted promptly. It gave the ribbon of the Legion of Honor to him. This was a fine thing to do for an old man, nearly all of whose clothes and furniture were in pawn.

The news of Tellier's death last month stirred all France. The people may have neglected Tellier alive, but they honored him dead. His funeral was a national event. Great men delivered eulogies of him. And now France is to put up a monument to him as one of its greatest sons. He has monuments in the shape of industrial plants and ships the world over.

About the same time that Tellier was dying Rudolf Diesel, one of the greatest inventors Germany has produced, fell or cast himself from the deck of a ship on which he was a passenger. He was a broken-hearted bankrupt—a genius without business sense. His engine is in use in every quarter of the globe. Next to Watt he is ranked by some as the greatest figure in the development of power. For all the good he did in the advancement of science and industry his reward was small indeed. Harassed by creditors, by his urgent needs, his life had been one of misery for years.

The tragedy of great inventors is not confined to France or Germany. The United States has more cases perhaps than Europe. It is seldom that a genius is able to protect himself in a worldly way. It is only after he is dead that the world begins to appreciate his full worth. Sometimes even that is lacking.

Without the Rev. Hannibal Goodwin photography would not have been developed to the extent it is today. Without him it is doubtful if there would be motion pictures today, yet it is a question whether any of the great producers of the photo play who have made millions upon millions of dollars in the last ten years or one person out of ten thousand of those who go to see the "movies" know of Hannibal Goodwin and his work.

The Rev. Mr. Goodwin was pastor of a little church in Newark. His pay was small, barely enough to support his family. He was a great big kindly man. Nature intended him for a scientist. Conditions made him a clergyman. He looked after his little flock, visited the sick and helped the poor and did his full duty, but he loved to climb to the garret of his little house and work out problems in chemistry.

When he got into that garret he forgot the world. His wife or his daughter might call him and he might answer mechanically, but it is doubtful if he heard them. He would forget his meals, possibly some engagement so absorbed would he become. Sometimes he would climb into the garret early Sunday morning and when hours later he would appear in the pulpit his hands would be stained with the chemicals he had been using. Once he went into the pulpit with his vestments discolored by the acids. He did not know it.

In that garret the preacher-scientist developed the photographic film.

Success with his invention brought sorrow to the clergyman. It was in 1887 that he completed his work on the film. Whatever his dreams of fortune they were shattered. A photographic company attempted to prevent Goodwin from obtaining a patent. The company was rich. The clergyman was poor. A man who is poor has a tremendous handicap in such a legal fight as the one that followed. A rich corporation can hire lawyers of fine ability. The law is very slow.

The suit became a fearful burden to the preacher. Year after year the case dragged on. When the case had been in the courts 13 years the Rev. Mr. Goodwin died. He was poor. He would not have been so poor had he never invented the photographic film. Possibly the struggle to carry on the suit and to gain what he believed was his own shortened his life.

After the clergyman died his rights to the film were sold to a company. His widow got stock in this concern in return for the sale of the invention. Years passed and the lawsuit went from court to court. A few months ago, 25 years after the Goodwin invention was perfected, a decision was handed down supporting all of the Goodwin claims and declaring the company that had fought the clergyman from the first to be infringing the Hannibal Goodwin patent.

What does triumph mean at this late day? Hannibal Goodwin's widow is past eighty. His daughter is sixty years old. Money cannot compensate them for all the years that are gone, the years of disappointment, hope deferred and of poverty. And even now they may not get the money.

It will not sadden the aged widow if she never gets a dollar from the film her husband created.

"Great expectations," she says, "makes one's life discontented. We have taken this matter philosophically. We have expected little. With this decision rendered we still expect little or nothing."

The one great satisfaction she has and that counts more than money is the vindication of all that was claimed in behalf of her husband as the man who gave the film to the world.

Alexander Graham Bell will go down in history as the inventor of the telephone and comparatively little space will be given to Daniel Drawbaugh, yet Bell and Drawbaugh filed their patent papers the same day, and after eight years of litigation, in which some of the greatest lawyers in American were engaged, three justices of the Supreme court of the United States supported Drawbaugh's claim to priority and four supported Bell. By the narrow margin of one vote Bell was made rich and Drawbaugh continued poor.

Bell came on his invention by chance. Drawbaugh by laborious study. Bell had every advantage in an educational way. Drawbaugh worked for years in his father's blacksmith shop. Most of his life Drawbaugh was hard pressed for money. His workshop was an old tumbledown shack known as Eberly's mills. There he labored year in and year out. He practically died in harness, for he worked on the day he died and he then was eighty-four years old.

He invented 500 articles that have been of value to the world at large, but he got little money out of them.

Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, was lucky in escaping the poor house. He came from a family of inventors. His uncle, William Howe, invented the truss bridge and his uncle, Tyler Home, invented the spring bed.

Elias Howe was lame, lazy and shiftless. For years after he married his wife supported him and their children by sewing. His wife's patient industry no doubt led him to think of ways to lighten her toil and the sewing machine was the result. When he took out his patent he sold a half interest in it for $500 to the man from whom he rented a garret. Eleven days after the granting of the patent he assigned the other half interest over to his father, nominally for $1,000, but really to satisfy claims for small sums the father had given to him.

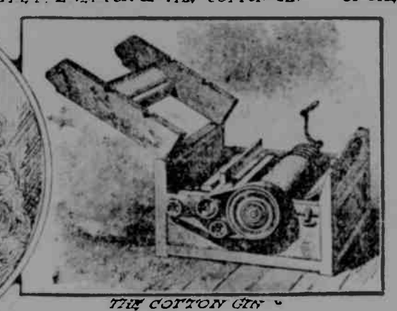
To support his family he became a locomotive engineer. He was not much of a success as an engineer and lost his job. That was fortunate, although he did not think so at the time.

His brother had been sent to England to introduce the sewing machine and thought he was doing a wonderful piece of business when he sold the English rights for $1,250. There was one saving clause in that bill of sale. It provided that the inventor should get $15 for every machine sold.

Elias Howe with his wife and three children followed his brother to England. He got work at $15 a week at manufacturing his own machines. He was so incompetent as a worker that he was discharged. For two years he was poverty stricken and only escaped jail in England by taking the poor debtor's oath. Through the charity of a sea captain he and his family were brought back to America.

Two weeks after his return his wife died owing to the privation to which she had been subjected. Destitute and forlorn Howe drifted about from place to place. His father took pity on him and reconveyed the half interest in the patent to Elias. Then Howe took advantage of the fact that various persons were infringing on his patent and sued them. For four years the suits dragged along. Howe won most of them and collected $15,000 in one instance. With this money he repurchased the half interest he had sold to the owner of the garret for $500.

That was one of the few sensible things he ever did in a business way. When he died in 1867 at the age of forty-eight he left $2,000,000.



Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin. He was a New Englander who went south, and on the plantation of Gen. Nathaniel Green of Revolutionary fame saw the slaves separating the lint from the cotton seed by hand. Few things that came from the brain of many have worked a greater revolution than the cotton gin. Without injury to the fiber it cuts the lint from the seed and plies it into the frame in which later it is baled.

From his invention, which may be classed as one of the ten most important in history, Whitney never got a dollar of profit. Immediately upon the introduction of the gin dozens of persons pirated the invention. Whitney tried to protect his legal rights and soon became involved in a lot of lawsuits. Some of them he won without much trouble, some of the more important were carried from court to court and were dragged on interminably.

The affair became one of the scandals of the time. Mr. Whitney, disgusted with the protracted and expensive litigation, nearly at the end of his financial resources and despairing of ever getting justice in the courts, determined to let the world have the benefit of his invention without profit to himself. The state of Georgia in recognition of what it had benefited through the gin voted $50,000 to him. That did not cover the legal costs, the lawyers' fees and the time he had given to the creation of the gin, but with this money he embarked in business in New England in the manufacture of firearms, and made enough money to live in comparative ease.

THE COTTON GIN

NAME WAS STRANGE TO HIM

Frenchman Could Recall Nothing of One of the Greatest Statesmen of His Race.

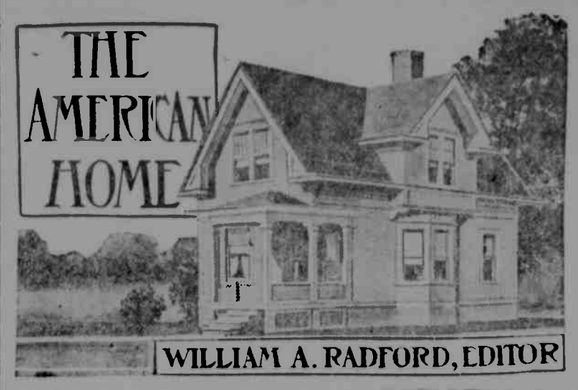
Painters are notoriously lacking in the bump of reverence, says the London Telegraph. One of the long-haired tribe of daubers happened to be spending a day or two at Castres, the birthplace of the great M. Jaures, and got into conversation with a relative over his apéritif at the cafe. The loyal Castrian vaunted the glory of his city. "Our city," he said, "produces the best billiard table in France. It has also"

and here he lowered his voice reverently "given birth to M. Jaures."

"Jaures! Jaures!" mused the shameless painter, "who's he?"

"You don't mean to say you don't know Jaures?" gasped his interlocutor, and the painter, as if with dawning comprehension, replied: "Oh, you mean Jorris, the man who won the race through Paris some years ago?"

It was too much for the patriotic citizen, who rose in disgust and left the cafe. A few minutes later the painter saw him in earnest conversation with several other local worthies on the pavement opposite. All gazed in amazement at the strange mortal who did not know Jaures. Imagine a Cockney at Criccieth who knew not Lloyd-George, and you have a fair parallel.



Two Partners.

A wicked story is told about two partners who respected each other's business ability, but who hated each other cordially. To one of them came a fairy saying that he could have any boon he desired, and whatever he had his partner should have in double portion. Naturally his first wish was for a barrel of money.

"All right," said the fairy, "but your partner will get two barrels on that wish."

"Stop a little," said the first. "Perhaps you'd better not give me a barrel of money. I'd rather you would make me totally blind in one eye."

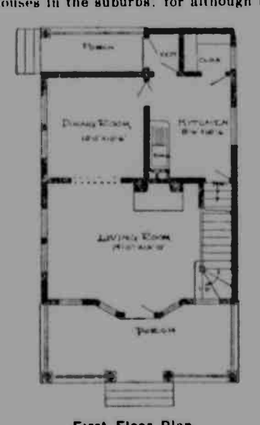
WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR

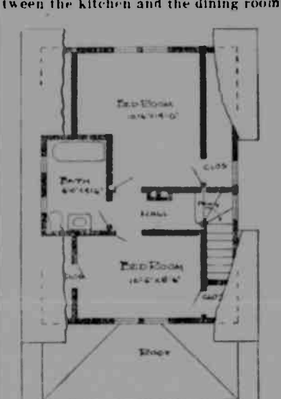
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

One of the most comfortable little cottage houses ever built is shown in this design. When you come to corral all the necessary modern improvements and fit them into a little house only twenty feet in width and thirty feet in length you have quite a job on your hands; but that is exactly what has been done in designing this little five room cottage. "Bungalow" some people would call it, because the word bungalow is very fashionable just now, but a bungalow properly speaking is a one story house with a flat, or at least a low roof.



It often happens that a family is very anxious to own a home and they find houses and lots so expensive that after looking around for several months they are obliged to give it up, at any rate for the time being. It is to meet just such cases that I recommend such small low cost houses as this.

Americans as a rule have rather large ideas in regard to dwellings. As a usual thing we want large rooms and plenty of them, but I find that public opinion is passing through a change and it has been brought about largely through the influence of city flats most of which contain little conveniences that are not common in houses.



Rates in larger cities are double what they were ten or twenty years ago. Skilled mechanics get four or five dollars a day where formerly they got two or three dollars, and the same scale of expense follows through all the different departments of building. The result is that architects have learned how to work the necessaries from comfort into very small compass together with a great many luxuries, and to combine the many good features into dwellings of very small proportions.

But there is one objection to a flat that no amount of skill on the part of the architect can overcome, and that is the scarcity of air and light. For this reason more than any other I have advocated the building of small houses in the suburbs, for although it is a fact that various persons were infringing on his patent and sued them. For four years the suits dragged along. Howe won most of them and collected $15,000 in one instance. With this money he repurchased the half interest he had sold to the owner of the garret for $500.

First Floor Plan.

Second Floor Plan.

family such as this house is intended to shelter.

There is a good veranda in front, large enough and wide enough for several large, easy, comfortable chairs, which will be occupied by the friends of the family many nights in summer. It is easy to entertain company in this way.

A very small furnace placed near the chimney under the partition between the kitchen and the dining room will heat this house with very little fuel. By placing the furnace well back the front part of the cellar may be partitioned off and kept cool for a fruit cellar. The front end is proper for this purpose because the front part of the house usually is cooler than the back. Then you have more or less dust from the furnace and it makes more noise sometimes than you want under the living room. Planning these little details is very interesting as well as very important. The little housekeeping questions that mean so much to a woman have very little effect on a furnace man. A great many furnaces are placed in the most objectionable positions just because the owners neglected to think up on the subject before the heating plant was installed.

It makes no difference to a furnace man where the heater is placed except that some pipes carry hot air better than others, and they should be longer and others should be shorter in proportion for this reason. But such calculations apply more particularly to larger houses. In a little house like this where the pipes are all short the furnace may be placed on one side of the chimney just as well as to put it on the other side. The only question to decide is where the owner wants it and the owner should not only know but he should know why.

Eyesight Worth Money.

The man who can walk about the lawn or in the park and pick up four leaf clovers has an eye that is worth big money to him. He can easily be trained to see things that ordinary men will miss or have to look a long time to find.

Some men who go hunting can see a squirrel in an oak or hickory tree with apparent ease, while others will go strolling about the timber and never see the game at all. It is the same way in the open field. The rabbit can be found sitting by some, while others will almost run over the creature before it is detected.

This ability is a gift. This is not only a gift developed by some and undeveloped by others as a result of their surroundings, but it measures the exact amount of intelligent effort they have expended in attaining this ability, also their perseverance in the line of endeavor. Aside from the external causes that have made us what we are, environment and heredity, is an inherent capacity of individual intelligence, or, in other words, natural ability.

Told in a Few Words.

An Englishman had bought through an agent an estate in the northern Highlands, and when summer came he went to inspect it. One part of his journey was by coach, and he thought to get some information about the place from the driver. So after some preliminaries: "You may know a place called Cloch na Kilty?" "I do that." "And what do you think of the place?" "I will not be thinking much." "Oh! Tell me what you think." "If ye were to see the de'il tethered there ye'd say, 'Puir brute!'"

SELF DELUSION.
Many People Deceived by Coffee.

We like to defend our indulgencies and habits even though we may be convinced of their actual harmfulness.

A man can convince himself that whiskey is good for him on a cold morning, or beer on a hot summer day—when he wants the whiskey or beer.

It's the same with coffee. Thousands of people suffer headache and nervousness year after year but try to persuade themselves the cause is not coffee—because they like coffee.

"While yet a child I commenced using coffee and continued it," writes a Wis. man, "until I was a regular coffee fiend. I drank it every morning and in consequence had a blinding headache nearly every afternoon.

"My folks thought it was coffee that ailed me, but I liked it and would not admit it was the cause of my trouble, so I stuck to coffee and the headaches stuck to me.

"Finally, the folks stopped buying coffee and brought home some Postum. They made it right (directions on pkg.) and told me to see what difference it would make with my head, and during that first week on Postum my old affliction did not bother me once. From that day to this we have used nothing but Postum in place of coffee—headaches are a thing of the past and the whole family is in fine health."

"Postum looks good, smells good, tastes good, is good, and does good to the whole body."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

NEW FORM STATIC MACHINE

French Device Has Large Surface So That Powerful Effect Is Obtained—Disks Not Used.

Most of us are familiar with the ordinary form of static machine embodying the great glass disks which revolve in a vertical plane. But the new form made at the Roy Court establishment, Avenue d'Orleans, Paris, at first glance would hardly be recognized as a static machine at all. An ebonite cylinder takes the place of the glass disks. It has a large surface so that a powerful effect is obtained says the Popular Electricity. In addition to other desirable features, it is provided with an electric heater, operated from the house wiring circuit, which warms the cylinder so that it can be operated in damp weather.

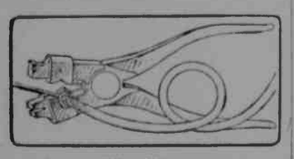
TELEPHONE LINES IN CABLE

Biggest Underground System in Country Extends From Boston to Capital of the Nation.

One of the big intercity underground telephone cable systems in this country, with ten large cities on the main trunk line, has just been completed and for the first time the telephone of the northeastern part of the United States is safe from the winter's snows and winds.

This underground telephone cable runs for 450 miles from Boston, the headquarters of the American Telephone & Telegraph company, to Washington, the capital of the nation. It runs through and connects the cities of Boston, Providence, Hartford, New York, Jersey City, Trenton, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Baltimore and Washington.

Practically the first serious consideration of the necessity of such a step was given after the blizzard of March 4, 1908, when so many cities were cut off entirely from the outside world, both in transportation and communication, says the Indianapolis News.



In this actual construction of the cable line in 40 mile lengths, the amount of material used was enormous. There were 4,690 reels of cable required, with a total weight of 8,900 tons, a load for 392 freight cars. The weight of the copper wire was 5,860,000 pounds and the total length of the wires is 317,424,000 feet. The lead sheaths for the wires total 11,060,000 pounds and would cover an area of 169,400 square yards.

Each individual wire is wrapped along its entire length with a specially prepared tissue paper, and the amount of the paper used would cover an area of 2,900,000 square yards. In the cable are 74 pairs of duplex cable wires.

ing the wire, and a slot for bending loops in the ends of the wire, says the Popular Mechanics. The jaws are crosshatched to give a good grip in pulling off the insulation.

Electrifying Roads.

Plans for electrifying all railroads in the vicinity of St. Petersburg by harnessing the falls of a river contemplate transmitting the current at 400,000 volts, the heaviest voltage ever attempted.

Transfers by Weight.

Several electric railway companies, including those in Detroit and Philadelphia, are using a machine for counting transfer tickets by weighing them, says the Electric Railway Journal. This machine is so delicate that it can be used for counting items weighing from 1-25,000 ounce to 15 pounds each in capacities ranging from eight ounces to six tons.

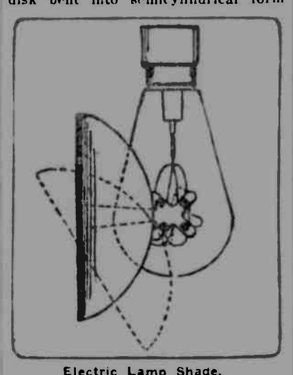
ELECTRICAL SHIP DOES WELL

Tynemount Built to Demonstrate Advantages of Electric Transmission for Large Vessels.

Perhaps one of the most interesting ships of the year is the Tynemount, a vessel built to demonstrate the advantages of electric transmission to connection with the Diesel engine for the propulsion of large ships, writes J. R. Wilson in Power. Built, for the Montreal Transportation company, this vessel, which is of 2,400 tons displacement, is equipped with two four stroke cycle, six cylinder, 300 horsepower Diesel engines driving three phase alternators at 400 revolutions per minute; the latter in turn supply a 500 horsepower electric motor which drives a single propeller.



The engines are both divided into groups of three cylinders and the camshaft of each is driven by a vertical shaft arranged between the two groups. The bedplate is cast in two pieces and bolted together, and joined with the alternator bedplate at the flywheel end of each engine.

Starting is effected by means of compressed air, three cylinders only being fitted with starting valves. A device for stopping the engine and means of controlling the amount of air delivered by the air compressor are also provided on the control pillar. Near at hand are the electric controller of the transmission system, the whole providing for the operation of the propelling machinery; controls are also carried to the bridge. At the after end of each engine a three stage air compressor is fitted, driven direct from an extension of the engine crankshaft. This extension also provides means for driving the lubricating and circulating water pumps. The fuel pumps are driven by eccentrics from the camshaft.

SHADE FOR ELECTRIC LAMPS

Clamps on Globe of Incandescent Light at Any Angle Desired—Convenient in Sickroom.

An objection that has hitherto been raised to incandescent electric lamps is that there has been no satisfactory way to shade them. A Kentucky man has overcome this difficulty by the invention of a most ingenious shade that can be clamped on the lamp in a twinkling and in any position desired. The shade consists of a metal disk bent into semicylindrical form and provided at its center with spring claws adapted to press against the globe and hold the device in position. As will readily be understood, this shade can be fastened in any position, even on the bottom of the lamp, though the shadow is cast in only one direction. Such a device, however, has many uses and is particularly convenient in sickrooms that are lighted by incandescent lamps, as it enables the nurse to protect the patients face from the direct rays of the light, yet have other parts of the chamber well illuminated. The shade is so small and compact that traveling men who have felt the need of such an article in hotels where they have stopped can carry it without trouble.

MANY EXCELLENT VARIETIES OF GRAPES

Three Superior and Popular Varieties.

Grapes are grown with success over practically the whole country, and are the surest to bear each year of all our fruits.

Probably the most popular grapes grown both for home table use and the market are the three varieties—Concord, Delaware and California Tokay. Experiment stations in the different sections of the country have made extended tests with varieties, and the recommendations of these may serve to indicate the best varieties for different sections of the country. In the north, Concord, Niagara, Catawba and Worden. The Virginia station recommends for table and market, Concord and Moore's Early among the blacks; Brilliant and Delaware among the reds, and Willie Bell, Niagara, Winchell and Martha among the white grapes. For red wine, Clinton, Cynthiana and Norton are recommended. The Georgia favorites are practically the same varieties; in addition, for white wine, Goethe, Missouri Riesling, Elvira, Catawba, Herbemont, Delaware and Scuppernong. The Texas station recommends Brilliant, Bailey, Delaware, Drocut and Duches for table use, and Catawba and Herbemont for wine. The Missouri station recommends as early varieties for local and commercial planting, Green Mountain, Jewell, Campbell, Early New Haven, Brighton, Moore's Early and Norfolk. Wisconsin recommends first of all Moore's Early, followed closely by Worden, Concord, Wilder and Delaware. New York's favorite varieties are Moore's Early, Catawba, Diamond, Concord, Agawam, Niagara, Delaware and Worden. In California, Cinifiera, or European grapes are grown. These are famed as table, wine and raisin grapes. Some of the more prominent of these are the following: Raisin grapes: White Muscat, Muscatel, Gordo Blanco, Sultana and Thompson Seedless. Table grapes: Flame, Tokay, Emperor, Black Hamburg and Chasselas, Red wine grapes: Zinfandel, Carignan and Mataro. White wine grapes: Sauvignon, Riesling and Chasselas Dore. Port wine grapes: Mission, Malvoisie and Trousseau. Sherry and Maderia wine grapes: Mission, Palomino and Sultana.

Fine grapes are also grown under glass, but for this purpose only European varieties are used. Black Hamburg is the variety most used for this purpose.

PRACTICAL HINTS FROM POULTRY YARD

Vermin Increase in Cold Weather as Rapidly as During Summer—Give Turkeys Wide Range.

(By E. J. MILLER.)

Don't stop the war on the lice just because the weather is cold. If you have them down, keep them down. They will not increase so fast in the cold weather, and that is the time to exterminate them.

When you dug the potatoes did you save the small ones for the hens? They are very fond of them when boiled and mixed with a little bran. A mess of them fed once in a while makes a variety, and is a treat.

Have the runts and defective fowls been culled? They are only a bill of expense, and the loss occasioned by their keep is usually charged to the flock as a whole, which is unfair. This should be charged to your own neglect. To keep up the vigor and utility of your flock, the undesirables must be disposed of, so there will be no danger of their eggs being set in the spring.

Keep the houses and runs clean. It will save trouble later in keeping the fowls healthy.

Now that the fowls cannot help themselves to bugs, and grasses, and seeds, these, or their equivalent, must be supplied, especially if the poultry is confined. They must be carefully watched and their wants attended to.

The hens must be kept quiet to insure good digestion.

Unless you intend to raise poultry for exhibition purposes, there is no need of buying fancy birds at high prices, to start or improve a flock. What is called utility stock is much better for practical purposes.

Air-slaked lime sprinkled on the floor under the roosts, and on the dropping boards, will help to keep the place healthy and the air pure.

Utility stock is just as pure-bred, often stronger, and just as good in every way as the show birds, except that they are lacking in some point of color or marking, which disqualifies them for the show pen.

Many people say turkeys should be restricted in their range, but we do not believe it. We have raised many turkeys, and have always found that the wider the range the better they thrive.

It is stated that eggs laid by certain Leghorn hens are 50 per cent larger than eggs contributed by the Game and Hamburgs, as 30 dozen of the latter are found to weigh 36 pounds, while the same number of the former weigh 54 pounds; both, however, bring the same price on the market.

HOW THE FRENCH POULTERER KILLS

Neck of Fowl Is Dislocated by Swift Back Chuck Given Close to Head of Bird.

The French poulterer kills his fowls by dislocating the neck with a swift back chuck given close to the head. At once the dressing begins so that it may be completed before the body cools.

The legs and wings are tucked close to the body, which is placed breast downward against a board. A moist cloth is spread on the back, which imparts a fine-grain appearance to the flesh.

A weight is applied to secure the required market flatness, and when thoroughly cold the birds are removed, packed carefully and closely in crates or cases, according to their destination.

Calf Disorders.

Bowel troubles in calves are sometimes caused by milk that is excessively rich. Milk that is moderate or low in butter fat is usually better for young calves. Indigestion in older calves is usually due to unclean milk or feed, unclean vessels, close confinement in dark, unsanitary stalls and irregular or excessive feeding. In some cases it appears to be due mainly to sheer weariness and inability to digest.

Grades of Feeding.

Professor Herbert Mumford classes all feeding cattle in six grades—fancy, selected, choice, good, medium, common and inferior. Which grade do you keep?

PUMPKINS MAKE BIG RETURNS TO FARMER

A Great Yield of Pumpkins.

Pumpkins used to be sold by the wagonload at a dollar a load in the patch. Now they they are sold by the pound. There is nothing now grown on the farm that cannot be turned into ready cash or its equivalent.

Leguminous Field Crops.

There are in the United States 15 leguminous field crops that are more or less extensively grown. In the approximate order of their importance they are as follows: Red clover, alfalfa, cowpeas, alsike, clover, crimson clover, white clover, Canada peas, soy beans, peanuts, vetch, velvet beans, Japan clover and bur clover. A few more are cultivated to less extent as sweet clover, beggarweed, grass peas, fenugreek and horse beans. Many others have been tested in an experimental way, but as yet are not grown as crops.

Preparing for Spring.

After everything wanted has been gathered from the garden there is an opportunity to begin preparations for another year. The gardener must not only lay plans for the future, but some of his work should be done four or five months ahead of time. Before winter sets in he is getting ready for spring.

Seasonable Dialogue.

The shades of the goose and turkey were discussing the circumstances which had attended their respective deaths.

"Did you offer any objection when first the cruel farmer laid hands on you?" sympathetically inquired the gobbler.

"Yes," replied his gooseship: "I cried out, 'Halloa! what's this?'"

"What did you say next?" inquired the now thoroughly interested turkey, as the other paused for a moment.

"Oh," the goose replied, "I did not say anything more just then; I was wrung off."

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED

R. F. D. No. 8, Maryville, Tenn.—"My baby, when three months old, took eczema on his face and head. His head and one side of his face were almost in a solid sore. The eczema at first was kind of a rash and then it broke out in water pimples and they would burst and looked very badly. It would itch and burn so badly that he could not rest at all and his hair just all fell out at once till his head was perfectly bald. He could not sleep at night and was very cross.

"I tried remedies without any relief at all; he only got worse all the time until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. He had great relief the first application. He was soon cured and his hair began to grow back and now he has just beautiful fine hair and has no sign of eczema." (Signed) Mrs. H. D. Clabough, Jan. 28, 1913.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 38 — OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1914. — NUMBER 46.

GARRETT CO. REPUBLICAN FAVORED BY STATE SENATE

Mr. L. A. Rudisill Named As One of the Officials of the Upper House.

Through the efforts of State Senator Harvey J. Speicher of Garrett county, his native county receives a plum at the hands of the Senate in the appointment of an official of the Upper House. The fact that the Senate is overwhelmingly Democratic and one of the best positions to be given out was awarded our Republican member, shows that he has a high standing with his colleagues.

At a conference of the Senators held yesterday it was decided that the Republicans should have the appointment of three officers, a clerk, a stenographer and a messenger. The Republicans agreed among themselves to take the appointment of two stenographers and a messenger and Senator Speicher was given the choice of naming the latter. This he did and advised this office by telephone this morning that he had named Mr. L. A. Rudisill, of Mountain Lake Park, for this position.

Mr. Rudisill has been associated with The Republican for some time past as assistant editor. He will leave here on Monday night for Annapolis in order to assume his new duties on Tuesday morning. That he will make an efficient man for the place his friends have no doubt. He has done excellent work for The Republican and his absence from the office for the next three months will double up the work of the editor, but the high standing of the paper will be maintained.

At the close of the session Mr. Rudisill will again assume his position with the paper.

Orphans' Court Held Session.

Judges Charles F. Harvey, Thomas Moon and Henry Kemp held the regular session of the Orphans' court last Tuesday.

Wilfred Chadderton qualified as administrator of the estate of Herman Beckman.

Amos M. Umble was appointed administrator of the estate of George W. Savage, deceased.

Judges Harvey and Moon returned to their homes Tuesday evening.

Judge Kemp returned home Wednesday morning.

In Memory.

HARRIET A. HOSTETLER

Harriet A. Hostetler was born May 4, 1871, in Garrett county, Md., and died October 19, 1913, at her home in Wenatchee, Wash., aged 42 years, 5 months and 15 days. She was a daughter of Wm. and Elizabeth Alexander, who preceded her to the spirit world a few years ago. She leaves, to mourn her loss, 3 brothers and 3 sisters. A. J. Alexander was the only one of her relatives who was permitted to be with her only a few days before she died. She was afflicted with stomach trouble and suffered very much, yet she bare it all patiently. She was a faithful and consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years.

She was held in high esteem in Wenatchee Valley. The floral contributions were grand. She was married March 18, 1896, to Joseph Hostetter, of Garrett county. He taught school in that county for some time; later he graduated in the Juniata college, Huntington, Pa. From there they went to North Dakota where she taught school for some time. From there they moved to Wanatchee Valley. He is now principal of the Beacon Hill school. Services were conducted by Brother A. B. Peters at the Sunny Slope church, Wash. Text, John 14. Interment near the Sunny Slope church.

Mr. Wallace Brown, son of ex-Sheriff and Mrs. Austin Brown, of Oakland, mention of whose illness was made in this paper last week, was discharged from the hospital in Anaconda, Montana, Tuesday and started on his journey homeward. He is expected to arrive here Sunday or Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Silas O. Wiley returned home this afternoon from a visit of some weeks to relatives in Somerset county, Pa.

On January 27th Mr. Joseph E. Harned will deliver an illustrated lecture to the members of the Oakland Lodge No. 192, A. F. and A. M., at the lodge room in Oakland. All members are cordially invited to be present.

FARM FOR SALE.

I have for sale, on very liberal terms, the best farm in Garrett county. This farm consists of 465 acres, situated on the main line of the B. & O. R. R., with one mile of frontage and two switches adjoining the land. The largest crops in the county have been raised on this farm the past six years. Over 113 tons of hay hailed this year besides reserving sufficient to winter from 40 to 50 head of cattle and horses. Title unexcelled and abstract may be seen by applying to.

EFFORT TO KEEP WILLIAMS OUT OF THE STATE SENATE

Unfavorably Acted Upon By Members And He Takes His Seat

(Special to The Republican)

ANNAPOLIS, MD., JAN. 13.

The General Assembly will transact little business before next week. Lack of committees and permanent working rules have held up and will continue to hold up the actual processes of lawmaking for some days. Volumes of bills are awaiting introduction in both houses, but many of these measures will have to be typewritten or printed and other wise whipped into shape to conform to the new rules.

The present delay in the actual starting of the legislative wheels promises to be of advantage in the long run. With the abolishment of the old and and cubersome rules both houses will be enabled to accomplish their business in record time if the new rules are ridigly adhered to.

The Lee rules promise to work to especial advantage to the Republican minority. In past sessions the majority has been able to hold a club over the heads of the minority by refusing to bring out bills introduced by minority members except on payment in advance in the way of pledges of support of certain majority bills. Especially was this true when the majority members so interested had trouble within their own ranks and needed the minority votes to control a situation.

Now these conditions will no longer exist. Minitory members will be able to demand the bringing out of bills from committees and will be able to wage a fight with a fair field on the floor without fear of the majority club may be felt at any time.

The Republican members in both houses will support for the most part the new rules when the latter are formally brought out for consideration tomorrow on the floors.

The Assembly will adjourn either on Thursday or Friday morning and the presiding officers of both houses are working to complete their committee assignments for announcement before adjournment. If this is accomplished the Assembly will be in shape to begin actual business next Monday night when many of the bills will be introcuced. On the Senate side only one of the Western Maryland Senators will receive a committee chairman. Senator Jones of Montgomery will land this place but because of his being a new member his committee will probably be a small one. All the Republican Senators are assured of placesion committees but Senators Williams, Zihlman and Mathias will be the only three who will land important posts.

The heavy Democratic majority in the Senate is causing embarassment to President Price as he is being hard put to satisfy all the members of his own party. Consequently the Republican senators must suffer. Senator Mathias is already on the Rules Committee while Senator Zihlman will go on Finance Committee and Senator Williams will also be given a post in place of the post on Rules Committee, which he was euchered out of on the opening day through the attack made on his eligibility.

The Democrats have realized their mistake in attempting to hold up Williams to block his being sworn in. Sentiment within their own party in favor of Williams has caused the ringleaders of the attack on the Cecil man to reverse their position. Today the special committee appointed to look into Williams' status held a brief session and unanimously decided that the Cecil countian is no longer a minister of the gospel and is clearly entitled to his seat. The committee will report its findings tomorrow morning and Williams will be immediately administered the oath. If the committee had planned to do otherwise it is most probable that the Senate would have adopted a minority report from Senator Zihlman in favor of Williams and would have rejected the majority report if it had been unfavorable to the man.

Back of the attack on Williams is said to have been a carefully thought out plan to give the Democrats a continual opportunity to suspend the rules by a straight party vote. With Williams seated the Democrats have a three-fifths but not a two-thirds majority. The former is sufficient to override the executive veto but not enough to suspend the rules. Indications are that Senator Williams will, with Senator Zihlman, prove a constant annoyance to the Democratic majority in the Senate.

The Senate has left the selection of employees to its President and the latter will allow three places to the nine minority senators. Consequently there will be a grand scramble for these jobs. Senator Price will announce the personnel of the Senate employees along with his committee assignments.

On the House side Speaker Trippe is up against it even worse than is President Price. In the lower house the Democratic majority is really topheavy and the "colts" are as active as the veterans in scrambling after committee places. Three Western Maryland Democrats will probably be assigned to chairmanship, they are: Oliver H. Bruce Jr., Allegany, Committe on Labor; Ernest B. Hoffman, Washington, Committee on Insurance; Dr. R. G. Stevenson, Washington, Committee on Hygeine.

Western Maryland counties have for so long been out of the Democratic columns that the successful Democrats this year are demanding that the temporary reversal shall be celebrated by a generous distribution of committee places in that section of the state. Lloyd Wilkinson of Baltimore city will be chairman of the Ways and Means Committee and "Cy" Cummings, a Western Marylander will also land a place there. F. Stone Posey, the minority floor leader is also slated for a place on that important committee.

Altogetner the new rules and the committee places are practically entirely occupying the minds of the legislators temporarily and there will be little thought of anything else until the green bags of the presiding officers are opened and the lucky ones are announced.

The Democrats are already seriously discussing the stripping of as much patronage from the Governor as the members of their own party will stand for and the plans to remove the appointing power to the police and Liquor License Boards of Baltimore city, the Public Service Commission and still other places from the Governor's hands being seriously considered.

ALL UNITE FOR BANNER MONTH!

A Special Effort Being Made By School Officials.

County Superintendent Franklin E. Rathbun always has something entirely new in school matters to spring upon the unsuspecting public. One month it is efficiency on the part of the teachers; another month it is improvement along a certain line for both scholars and teachers. And the best thing about Superintendent Rathbun's schemes they usually pan out tor the betterment of the object sought.

This month the idea of the Superintendent is to make it the record-breaking month in point of attendance, and in furtherance of his purpose there has been mailed from the School Board office to each teacher of the county a circular letter setting forth what is expected at headquarters and urging all to "hump" himself. The circular to the teacher is as follows:

During the four months of school of the current year, there were in actual attendance in all the schools of Garrett county, Maryland, the following number of children:

First month	3,155
Second month	3,334
Third month	3,294
Forth month	3,322

This is a small per cent of all the children enrolled in the schools of the county. We are eager to surpass any one of the months cited above. The month decided upon for this special effort upon the part of both teacher and pupils, and which we contemplate calling the Banner Month, is the sixth month of school, the same beginning Thursday, January 22nd, 1914 and closing with Wednesday, Febuary 18th, 1914.

Make it known among the pupils this special effort to excel by far the attendance for the period just named—excelling any of the months cited above. Urge daily the attendance of every pupil every day during the twenty days of school that we hope to call our Banner Month—it being so called from the large number o pupils in attendance during this period, many of whom will do so upon this special effort of the teacher and the schools to have the Monthly Report for the month ending Febuary 18th, contain a much higher "Average Attendance" than usual. The resourceful teacher will use many devices and methods which will go to carry out the desire of having as many pupils in attendance as possible. Make a special effort for better attendance! Everyone unite—both teachers and pupils!

MAKE THE ATTENDANCE FOR THE SIXTH MONTH OVER 4,000! IT WILL THEN BE OUR GLORIOUS BANNER MONTH IN ATTENDANCE!

The result of the special effort will be made known to every teacher as well as published in the papers of the county.

Yours for the Banner Month,

F. E. RATHBUN,
County Superintendent of Schools.

Mr. Smith And Miss Garlitz Are Not Married.

Again the "smart-aleck" joker is abroad and this time he has announced through the public press that Mr. William Smith, of Lonaconing, and Miss Rose Garlitz, of Avilton, Md., were recently married. Mr. Smith yesterday requested the Cumberland Daily News to deny the statement and to say, in justice both to himself and the young lady, that they are not married.—Cumberland Daily News.

Detroit Bankers have figured that the Government will loose nearly $600,000 in income tax by the transfer of the $10,000,000 by the Ford Automobile Co. among its employees. The increase will go almost entirely to men who labor with their hands and some of them will receive as much as $5,000 a year or more.

MAN HELD FOR ROBBING GARRETT COUNTY FARMER

George Friend, Accused Of Having Stolen $6,500, Last April.

Yesterday afternoon George Friend, who lived with his brother-in-law, John Miller, near Accident, Garrett county, was tried before Squire R. L. Fries, on the charge of having stolen from John W. Broadwater and John W. Seibert last April the sum of $6,500, and was held for the action of the June grand jury of Garrett county in the the sum of $5,000. He was not able to put up the bond and went to jail.

The prisoner was represented by Attorneys William Offutt and Frederick Thayer, the State by States Attorney Renninger assisted by W. L. Somerville and H. R. Donnelly, of Cumberland.

The case grew out of a robbery near Merrill some time last April. John W. Broadwater, aged about 78 years, and John W. Seibert kept bachelor's quarters on a farm near Merrill, and had accumulated a sum if between $8,000 to $10,000, some of which was deposited in a bank, but the sum of about $6,500 was kept in an iron trunk in the farm house.

Last April Geoge Friend, the accused, was employed on the farm, and during his stay was told of the money. Some time between the 10th and 16th of April the trunk was broken open and the money stolen. Detectives were employed but no clue was obtained until about two months ago, when Friend began to show marked signs of prosperity.

Suspicion then pointed to him and friends of Broadwater and Seibert were asked to keep their eyes open for marked money, resulting in the finding of one $20 bill which Friend had Gideon Broadwater, a merchant of Grantsville, change for him, and which Seibert at once identified as one of the bills which were stolen from him.

A warrant was sworn out and Friend was arrested. It was later learned that Friend had given his sister $1,000 to keep for him, and an attachment was laid against this, but only $560 was recovered. Friend had also deposited money in the First State Bank of Grantsville and the First National Bank of Grantsville amounting to about $650.

Some notes from these banks Seibert also identified by private marks. Friend had also purchased two horses. The testimony was to the effect that he was a man who spent his time trapping and hunting animals and would sell the skins for a living.

Friend had in conversation with Seibert made a number of remarks which seemed to show he at least knew more of the robbery than he cared to tell. Of the $560 taken by the Sheriff from Mrs. Miller, sister of the accused, Mr. Seibert was able to identify one $20 bill and among the money were a number of new $20 bills of the Piedmont Bank, whice made up a large amouut of the money which was stolen.

CONSUMPTION VERSUS WAR

Germs Far More Destructive Than Generals.

But Bear's Emulsion Tones Up System And Tends To Prevent Tubarculosis.

Civil War Deaths, 1861 to 1865, 205,000.

Consumption, 1904 to 1907, 640,000.

Would it not be a sad time in your home if your husband, wife, daughter and son would have to march out today in another civil war?

Look at the above figures again.

They are facing an army that is commanded by an officer that is far more destrnctive in his attack than Jackson or Lee ever were. This officer waits until you are down and then jumps on. The quiet way these attacks are made is awful. What are you going to do about it? Let it go from day to day? Or are you going to build up your system, that is weakening away and exposing you to this consumption germ? Bear's Emulsion is by far the most effective remedy to ward off this germ with. For it not only maintains normal conditions of nutrition, but has a well defined specific pallative influence upon the symptom of the germ. Another special advantage which gives the remedy the preference is that it is invariably beneficial to the disordered digestive organ. For disturbances are almost constantly present. In this way as in many others Bear's Emulsion proves to be better than any other remedy sold. One dollar a bottle or six bottles for five dollars. Express paid if you can't get it from your druggist.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Providence, R. I., Jan. 11.—Pastor Russell preached here today. His text was, "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are."—1 Corinthians 3:17.

The Pastor declared that this Scripture could not be applied indiscriminately to all men. Only the Church are the Temple of God in the sense the Apostle here mentions; for only such as have been regenerated, or begotten of the Holy Spirit, are sons of God. These have received a new life, and are Scripturally described as "New Creatures in Christ." These have entered into a covenant with God through the merit of Jesus, who imputes His righteousness to them, justifying them freely from their unintentional imperfections and weaknesses.

Then the Pastor pointed out the distinction between these spirit-begotten New Creatures and the remainder of mankind, however just and well-intentioned. He showed that ordinarily we do not speak of humanity apart from their bodies; for, cut off from the body, they would be dead. We speak of such separation as dissolution. As the union of life (vitality) with organism (body) forms the soul, or sentient being, so their separation causes the soul to cease. Death would be the end of humanity, had not God provided for the redemption of the race, and its restitution by resurrection. Restitution will be merely a bringing back of that which death is now destroying—human, or earthly, being.

Next the speaker showed that anything done, either deliberately or carelessly, to injure God's workmanship would be sin. There is a Divine Law to the effect that whoever sins shall suffer. Whoever defiles his body, either by impure thoughts, angry thoughts, malicious thoughts, or by misusing it contrary to Divine arrangement, or by drinking or by gluttony, is defiling the temple of his own soul—the work of God.

Every vile thought or act, every pandering to appetite, is sure to bring depravity of body or mind or both; and depravity, he claimed, is death at work. Unless such depravity be overcome through Christ, the end will be everlasting death, as is written, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die."

The same principle, said the Pastor, applies to all who do evil to others, either by poisoning their minds or their morals, or by injuring their physical systems. Such do violence to God's work, and degrade their own manhood. The operation of Divine Law will surely bring punishments, which, unheeded, will ultimately bring death—"everlasting destruction."

We may warn every man along the broad Biblical line, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," continued the speaker. Whoever sows to the flesh—to sin, selfishness, meanness—to the fallen propensities—anger, malice, envy, hatred, strife, evil speaking, etc.—will be sure to reap correspondingly bitter experiences. This way, persisted in, will finally bring him to the Second Death.

God's Temple the Church.

The Pastor then briefly reviewed Israel's wilderness experiences. When God entered into covenant relationship with the Israelites, He manifested Himself by the Shekinah Glory, which shone out from between the Cherubim covering the Mercy Seat in the Tabernacle. The Israelites drew near to God through His appointed servants, Aaron and his sons, who had access to God's presence.

The Tabernacle was therefore the temple of God, but it was merely a tent. After the dedication of Solomon's Temple, God appeared there instead, and manifested His presence in [illegible] manner.

BURSTING OF DAM TODAY FLOODS POTOMAC VALLEY

Stoney River Structule of W. Va. Pulp Company Went Out This Morning

The immense dam of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company erected within the past half-year by the Lukes of Luke, Allegany county, for the purpose of storing water for use during dry seasons at the mills located at Luke, near Piedmont, gave way this morning and let out with a rush the nearly two billions gallons of water stored therin, flooding the whole sections of the country which it traversed, and carrying with it trees, bridges and everything that came in its path.

The dam showed signs or weakening last night and as a result warning was sent out all along the line. Kitzmiller people took to the hills and camped last night, but returned to their homes this morning, hoping that the danger had passed.

Shortly after noon today a report reached that place, telephoned from Piedmont, that the entire dam gave way at 12.15 o'clock letting a wall of water fifty feet high into the narrow valley of Stoney river which enters the Potomac a few miles north of Kitzmiller. The people of the town again took to the hills and at the hour of three o'clock water estimated to be twelve feet deep reached the busy little mining town. The report was that the water was steadily rising and that no way could be devised to estimate what depth it would attain.

At Piedmont people from all parts of the town have taken to the hills and fear that the damage will amount to thousands of dollars.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The study of stairways and the proper placing of them in dwelling houses is responsible for more suicides among architects than any other feature of the business.

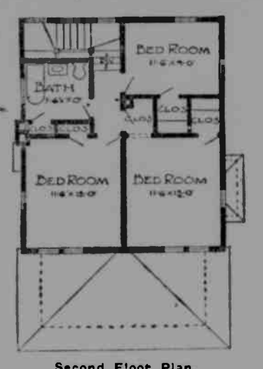
Ever since two story houses were first built stairs have occupied prominent positions, usually in front in full view of the street door where floor space is more valuable than in any other part of the house. The front stair not only takes up valuable space on both floors but it often spoils the living room or parlor down stairs and curtails two of the best bedrooms upstairs.

Now, the stairway in this plan solves the problem in a new way. It not only fills a new felt want, but it fills the neighbors with envy and the contractor with malice, because the workmanship must be so exact to please the owner that he can never get out of it with a profit.

However, this stairway seems to overcome many difficulties. It occupies the least valuable corner in the house, which is right because nobody stays in the stairway any longer than he can help. You sit in a dining room long enough to enjoy a good meal, you lounge in the living room until necessity drives you to work or sleepiness drives you to bed, and you stay in a nice front bedroom all night and part of the morning if the boss don't object; all of which goes to show the necessity and importance of dedicating the best and most valuable house space to the greatest possible service and comfort.

I realize at once that it is very difficult to change an old established custom and I also recognize the fact that all changes are not improvements. But I have never heard anybody give a satisfactory reason for planting a stairway in the best part of the house. Before selecting your house plan think this over.

A great many of these square built houses with square hip roofs, cottage roofs they used to be called when I was a boy, are being built all over the country. It seems a sensible way to build a house. From the foundation to the comb of the roof it is symmetrical and it is sensible. It is characteristic of good thrifty American ideas. It is a plan that suggests comfort and stability, and it probably provides more of both than most plans.



First Floor Plan.

The size of this house is twenty-six feet in width by twenty-eight feet six inches in length; rather small some builders would say for six rooms, but after looking the plan over most people will agree that the rooms are large enough and that they are airy, well lighted, easily heated and properly connected with each other. When you have said this you have encompassed the most essential features of a good residence.

A great many houses of this design are being built of cement. Sometimes a wooden frame is erected in the usual way and an outside coating of cement used instead of wood siding. The cement coating is plastered into expanded metal lath, or common wooden lath furred out with inch strips placed a foot apart to give the cement a good backing with plenty of clinch room. Men accustomed to cement plastering have learned how to put it on so it will be permanent. They have learned how to avoid cracks and other defects of former work of this kind.

In regard to colors a brown body with white trimmings looks well. The white trimmings give it the effect of cleanliness inside, as though it had a white lining. Some people prefer a reddish tinge because it makes the building look warm, it offers a sort of warm welcome as you approach the house from the street.

MODERN WOMAN TOO MANLIKE

English Author Criticises What He Calls "Bucolic Look" and Lack of Charm.

Dr. T. C. Shaw, a noted authority on medio-psychological problems, lecturing on "The Nervous Factor in Woman's Health," said that the excessive physical development which women of today are seeking is a bad thing for the race, according to a cable gram to the New York Sun. He said it produced women of hardened features, more wrinkles and more independence. The woman of today, he went on, has less reverence for authority than her mother and has fewer home interests.

"Sport," he added, "is bad for the marriage market. The sporting girl becomes too manlike. She shows her character too much to man and assumes a bucolic look."

Doctor Shaw assumed that the prevailing mode of short and tight skirts showing the figure is due to a desire on the part of women to be what men are and to do what men do. He considers that a mistake, as it does away with the mystery in woman, and wonders how women allow it, as it is against their own interests. He said there is danger of a new kind of woman arising with whom men will have no sympathy. Taking the suffragette as an example, he said:

"For years men have endowed women with all the virtues and never thought of the other side of the picture. They know now that there is another side—that women can be just as obstinate, spiteful and devilish as men."

"Brandy Nan" Looks Shabby.

Queen Anne's statue outside St. Paul's cathedral, London, is in a pitiful condition. The scepter is bent out of shape and the statue was last gilded so long ago that it is positively shabby.

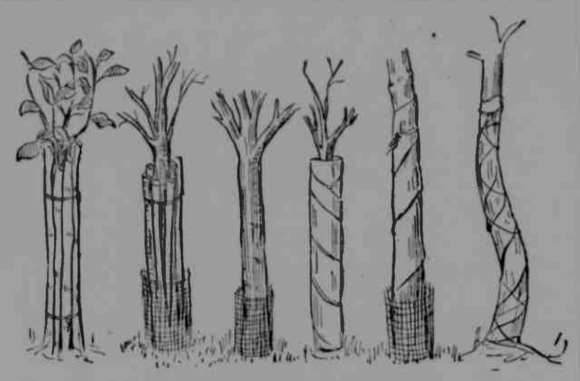
It is curious that ill luck of this kind has dogged the statue ever since it was first erected, 201 years ago, to commemorate the completion of the cathedral. In the eighteenth century there was a certain tavern upon which the queen's eyes were supposed to rest, and this inspired the following couplet:

Brandy Nan, Brandy Nan, you're left in the lurch,
Your face to the dramshop, your back to the church.

The supporting figures represent Great Britain, Ireland, France and America.

Lots Like Wigley.

"When it comes to the showdown every man can be brave, don't you think?"



"Sure I do. Take Wigley, for instance—meekest man you ever saw when he pays his gas bill, and a veritable lion for balling out the meter reader every time he catches him in the basement."

The Proper Ones.

"I assure you," said Huerta, "that there is not the slightest need for American interference."

"If we see the need," carelessly replied Uncle Sam, "you can go tell that to the marines."

PROTECTING FRUIT TREES FROM RODENTS

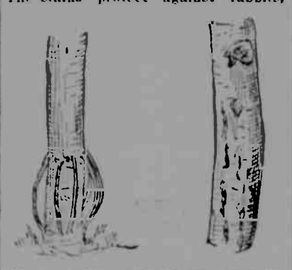
1, Corn Stalks. 2, Wire Cloth and Corn Stalks. 3, Short, Wire Cylinder. 4, The Paper Cylinder. 5, Wire Cloth and Building Paper. 6, Building Paper.

The old saying "No use to lock the stable door after the horse has been stolen" is quite applicable in the matter of protecting young and no-longer-young fruit trees against rodents. Don't wait until some of your trees are ruined before you adopt preventive measures.

The soil or cinder mound as a protection against tree injury by rodents, is very effective. Mice rarely injure trees except where grass, strawy manure, boards or trash of some kind about the base of the tree provide a hiding place; they will not come out in the open, but perform their depredations under cover. In mounding trees, first, clear away the grass or mulch from the base of the tree for a foot or more in all directions. Second, with a "post tamper," thoroughly firm the surface of the soil about the base of the tree. Third, with a few shovelfuls of fresh soil or cinders form a small mound 12 or 14 inches in diameter at the base and from four to six inches high about the stem of the tree, firming the soil well. The tops of these small mounds are usually kept quite bare by the winds and the mice will not venture out on these exposures to feed on the bark of the tree. These mounds may be left all the year, but should be repaired and tamped hard each autumn. Where cinders are available they are most excellent for mice will not burrow through cinders.

The wire screen is an ideal and complete all-round protector. True, it is more expensive than some others, but it is lasting and more effective against all kinds of rodents which prey upon young trees. Being light and open, it presents the least obstruction to strong winds; the air and sunlight are freely admitted; no dark places of concealment, such as invite wooly aphis and other forms of insect life. It is made of galvanized wire cloth of one-quarter-inch mesh (four 22-gauge wires to the inch) which may be purchased from any large supply house in rolls of 100 lineal feet and in any width from 24 to 36 inches. In adjusting to the tree allow the edges to lap about one inch.

Small meshed poultry netting protectors are made of ordinary weight mesh. This is effective against rabbits, but will not keep the mice out. In combination with a mound of soil about the base of the tree, mice will rarely prove troublesome.



It often happens that the farmer has a quantity of old poultry netting of standard mesh which he could use. Rabbits and woodchucks will not be able to seriously injure trees protected with this and if a mound is made at the tree base, mice may also be baffled.

Spiral protectors of heavy wire, while effective against rabbits, are of no avail against mice except as the trees are mounded.

Wood veneer protectors are effective, but as they form a tight, close, light-excluding cylinder, various forms of insect life thrive in the crevices and under the cover. The wooly aphis, root louse and other pests increase in great numbers under these wood covers.

Corn stalk protectors are very good. There is no device superior in effectiveness against rabbits and groundhogs, and certainly none cheaper. Five or six stalks bound firmly about the young trees with twine will constitute a protection that will last not only one season, but for several seasons. The stalks readily yield as the tree increases in size. By mounding the bases of the trees with fresh soil and firming it well, a stalk protected tree is quite secure from all rodent enemies.

Wire cloth combined with corn stalks will appeal to the most exacting. The stalks protect against rabbits, while the wire cloth completely baffles the mice even in badly infested orchards.

No. 1. Tree Injured by Rabbits. Bridgegrafted. No. 2. Vicious Work of Woodchucks.

When trees have attained the age of six or seven years they are usually beyond the period of injury by rabbits. We then have to protect only against mice. The short, galvanized wire cloth cylinder, well imbedded in the soil about the tree base, is quite sufficient even in badly infected orchards.

In combination with soil or cinder mounds, paper wrappers are temporarily effective against rabbits, but these protectors must be removed in summer because of the fact that they afford excellent hiding places for many insect pests. A simple paper (even newspaper) wrapper will serve well for a single winter.

A high grade of building or "Sheathing" paper is, of course, preferable to newspapers for tree protection. A combination of building paper and wire cloth is a trustworthy protector under all conditions. The paper may be removed and the screen retained during the growing season. The wire discourages the mice and the paper in winter is accepted by rabbits as an invitation to look elsewhere for shelter and forage.

WHY SILAGE GAINS IN PUBLIC FAVOR

Cheapest and Best Form in Which Succulent Feed Is Provided for in Winter.

(By T. E. WOODWARD.)

1. More feed can be stored in a given space in the form of silage than in the form of fodder or hay.

2. There is a smaller loss of food material when a crop is made into silage than when cured as fodder or hay.

3. Corn silage is a more efficient feed than corn fodder.

4. An acre of corn can be placed in the silo at less cost than the same area can be husked and shredded.

5. Crops can be put in the silo during weather that could not be utilized in making hay or curing fodder.

6. More stock can be kept on a given area of land when silage is the basis of the ration.

7. There is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder. Good silage properly fed is all consumed.

8. Silage is very palatable.

9. Silage, like other succulent feeds, has a beneficial effect upon the digestive organs.

10. Silage is the cheapest and best form in which a succulent feed can be provided for winter use.

11. Silage can be used for supplementing pastures more economically than can soiling crops, because it requires less labor, and silage is more palatable.

12. Converting the corn crop into silage clears the land and leaves it ready for another crop.

Corn Root Worm.

An abundance of corn beetles in a corn field should be a distinct warning that the field should not be planted to corn the following year but that it should be devoted to wheat, oats, barley, rye or to any crop other than corn. Crop rotation as a means of eradicating the worm is advocated. It is stated that not since the insect was discovered has there been a case on record where corn has been injured when grown on land planted the season before to such small grain crops as wheat, rye, barley or oats.

The worm is regarded as one of the easiest pests to control under crop rotation methods provided the farm is not subject to overflow, thus necessitating the planting of corn consecutively.

Dirt Injures Pigs.

Dirt and filth taken into the stomach along with feed impair digestion and reduce the gain, also affecting the appetite and general health of the pig.

His Turn for the Feather.

Two motorists, having almost ruined their tempers and their tires—in a vain attempt to find a hotel with a vacant bed, were at last forced to make the best of a small inn.

Even then they had to share a bed, which was—and on this the landlord laid great stress—a feather bed.

They turned in, and one of the pair was soon fast asleep, the other was not. He could not manage to dodge the bumps and heard hour after hour strike on the church clock until 3 a. m., when he also struck.

He did this by violently shaking his snoring friend.

"What's the matter?" growled the other. "It can't be time to get up yet?"

"No, it isn't," retorted his friend, continuing to shake him, "but it's my turn to sleep on the feather!"

London Slums.

The approaching demolition of the notorious Tabard street area reminds one of the clearing away of another famous slum—the Rookery of St. Giles—which was pulled down in the forties for the construction of New Oxford street. It largely consisted of lodging houses where men and women were accommodated at two pence per night, and was the resort of thieves and coiners. Many of the houses were connected together by the roof, yard and cellar in such a way that the apprehension of a criminal was an almost impossible task. In some of the passages traps were set which landed a determined pursuer into a cellar or cesspool.—London Chronicle.

His Life-Story.

"Excuse me, sir," said the seedy one in the hotel lobby, "but though a stranger to me, your face seems familiar. Have you any relatives in Atlanta?"

"Not one," was the reply. "Years ago I floated down the Chattahoochee river on a raft, leaving all my relatives behind. The raft was wrecked in a storm and I had to swim ashore, with a 40-pound catfish in tow. I traded the fish for a week's board, put an ad in the 'Lost' column, recovered my wrecked raft and started a lumber yard. You can get a double-header of near-beer at the bar on the left; here's the price."—Atlanta Constitution.

Up-to-Date Claquer.

The theatrical claquer has ever been an institution in France, especially Paris, where a "chef de claque" enjoys a recognized status and receives a comfortable income. It is a mistake to suppose that the only duty of claquers is to applaud. A well-organized claque includes the art of infectious laughter. These, called "chatouilleurs," attend the lighter forms of drama and laugh so heartily and naturally that their neighbors join in, and leave the house convinced that the play must be a most amusing one. Then, too, there are the "pleureuses," who are paid to shake with sobs at the right moment during melodrama.

NOT MUCH OF A PROBLEM

Observing Boy Had Sure Way of Determining the Breed of Chicken Served for Dinner.

At a recent dinner in a suburban district, where all the guests were amateur chicken raisers, after a discussion of the egg problem the conversation turned to the best breed of hens. After the good points of Orpingtons, Minorcas, Leghorns and others had all been brought forth the host said:

"Well, the ultimate end of every chicken is the pot, and you can't tell the difference when it is on the table. Let's see how many can tell what kind of a hen we have just eaten."

All agreed it was a very good kind, but there were many guesses as to the breed. The only child at the table, a twelve-year-old boy, was the one who guessed correctly.

The host beamed on him and said: "Minnie, how did you know it was a Plymouth Rock?"

"Oh, that was easy," he replied. "I found a feather in the gravy."

FACE FULL OF PIMPLES

Ruffin, N. C.—"My face became full of pimples and blackheads, and would itch, burn and smart. The skin was rough and red. I was really ashamed of my face. My arms and back were affected almost as badly. The pimples would fester and there would come a dry scab on top. The trouble caused my face to be disfigured badly and the itching would bother me so I could not sleep well nights, especially during warm weather.

"The trouble lasted me three long years without anything doing me any good until a friend told me about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and then I decided to try them. After the first application I could see some improvement. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment two weeks I did not look like the same person; most of the pimples had disappeared. At the end of four weeks I was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Mamie Mitchell, Jan. 9, 1913.

The Secret of Health is Elimination of Waste

Every business man knows how difficult it is to keep the pigeon holes and drawers of his desk free from the accumulation of useless papers. Every housewife knows how difficult it is to keep her home free from the accumulation of all manner of useless things. So it is with the body. It is difficult to keep it free from the accumulation of waste matter. Unless the waste is promptly eliminated the machinery of the body soon becomes clogged. This is the beginning of most human ills.

SKIN CLEARED. By Simple Change in Food.

It has been said by a physician that most diseases are the result of indigestion.

There's undoubtedly much truth in the statement, even to the cause of many unsightly eruptions, which many suppose can be removed by applying some remedy on the outside.

By changing her food a Kan. girl was relieved of an eczema which was a great annoyance to her. She writes:

"For five months I was suffering with an eruption on my face and hands which our doctor called eczema and which caused me a great deal of inconvenience. The suffering was almost unbearable.

"The medicine I took only gave me temporary relief. One day I happened to read somewhere that eczema was caused by indigestion. Then I read that many persons had been relieved of indigestion by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I decided to try it. I liked the taste of the food and was particularly pleased to notice that my digestion was improving and that the eruption was disappearing as if by magic. I had at last found, in this great food, something that reached my trouble.

"When I find a victim of this affliction I remember my own former suffering and advise a trial of Grape-Nuts food instead of medicines."

SCIENCE and INVENTION

STARTER FOR AN AEROPLANE

Overhead Carrier Also Assists Aviators in Landing—Tower of Steel Rises High Above Ground.

Aviation is far advanced indeed when people begin to invent towers to start the airships from. A New York man has designed such an apparatus, and it is described here. Aviators agree that there is not much trouble in keeping an aeroplane going once it is started. The difficulty lies in getting a good start and making a safe landing. That is what the tower is for it is of steel, of course, and rises high above the ground. Extending horizontally from the top is an arm from which a large steel ring depends on cables that yield to a certain extent when the machine alights to prevent a jolt. To use this apparatus the airship must be equipped with a catching device on the top to engage the ring In this way it can be lifted from the ground and swung clear till the engines get started. Then, released from the ring, it will sail off into space with nothing to obstruct it. In making a landing the aviator sails his aeroplane close to the ring and "hooks on" to it. If he misses it the first time he can easily try again as there will be no harm done.

SAMPLE THE OCEAN'S DEPTH

Bottle for Securing Specimens of Water for Analysis From Selected Depths Is of Metal.

The water bottle for getting water for analysis from selected depths in the ocean is a cylinder of brass, German silver, or other metal which resists the corrosion of sea water, generally about two inches in diameter and 12 or 14 inches long, with upward-opening valves at the top and bottom connected together on a central stem Lugs are cast on the side of the cylinder for conveniently securing it at any point along the length of the line by which it is to be lowered into the sea. During the lowering of the line the valves of the bottle are kept unseated by the passage of the water through the cylinder during the descent; but, when the motion is reversed, the valves seat themselves and are locked by the descent of a small propeller in the framework above the upper valve, which rides idly on a sleeve during the lowering of the bottle, but descends along a screw thread to press the valves upon their seats when the line commences to be hauled up. A specimen of the water at the depth is thus brought to the surface confined within the bottle, and a series of specimens from different depths may be obtained at one haul by securing a series of water bottles at the required intervals along the sounding line.

on the head of the setscrew that holds the needle. Thus the tone will be softened a great deal more than by the use of a wood needle, writes C. M Reeves of Los Angeles, Cal., in the Popular Mechanics. The record of a stringed instrument, such as a violin, will be almost exactly reproduced. It will also eliminate almost all the scratching sound caused by a steel needle.

Music and Nerves.

There is nothing new in the theory that music has a beneficial effect on persons who are nervously affected, but its application has not yet become so general as the men who believe in its sedative powers wish, says Medicina Italiana. The great Napoleon, who was not a musician, recognized the influence of harmonious sounds, and by his order hands "made music under the hospital windows." This order is still in force in the provinces, where the military bands give concerts at stated times in front of the hospitals.

Use of Ultra-Violet Rays.

According to experts of the United States department of agriculture, the use of ultra-violet rays for sterilizing milk, as advocated in Europe, does not destroy all bacteria and adds a disagreeable flavor to the milk.

AIRSHIPS ARE HERE TO STAY

Major Driant, Expert in Questions of Military Engineering, Has Faith in Dirigibles.

The French military authorities, in spite of the Zeppelin disaster, are still convinced that the big German dirigible dreadnoughts are a most destructive factor in warfare. Major Driant, deputy for Nancy, a son-in-law of the late General Boulanger and one of the foremost experts in questions of military engineering, in a recent interview said, according to the New York Tribune:

"The Zeppelin catastrophe does not shake one iota of my faith in big dirigibles. It is true that the Germans have had many accidents, and in time of war they will have many more, but as an offset we must remember the enormous service these dirigibles are capable of rendering in actual warfare.

"For instance, a dirigible can carry eight tons of dynamite, and can drop it, or any portion of it, at whatever point its commander may select. Suppose war breaks out between Germany and England and one dirigible costing $300,000 and handled by 20 men gets in a position above a British battleship costing $12,000,000 or $15,000,000 and containing a crew of a thousand men. The destruction of the latter would be inevitable, for no deck armor, not even that of the new Queen Elizabeth, could resist so great an impact.

"The best proof of this theory is the confident perseverance of Germane in steadily increasing their fleet of Zeppelins, a perseverance that offers us a most wholesome example.

"I do not underestimate the value of our aeroplane for reconnoitering and scouting, but I have examined at Luneville a German Zeppelin from top to bottom and I have no hesitation in saying that the loss of 13 dreadnoughts of the air is no discouragement whatever and is not by any means too great a sacrifice for the supreme and inestimable destructive values of German Zeppelins as engines of annihilation That can be appreciated only when the next war breaks out."

SOME WAYS WITH CHOCOLATE.

Chocolate is such a favorite with most people that one never tires of it in different combinations. Here are some new ones to try:

Chocolate Pudding.—Take a pint of milk, a quarter of a cup of sugar, one egg, a tablespoonful of flour mixed well with the sugar, a tablespoonful of chocolate and vanilla flavoring. Mix the flour and sugar, and add it to the well beaten egg; add the milk a little at a time, saving out a little to mix with the chocolate. Melt the chocolate over hot water. Add a little of the milk, and stir it into the first mixture. Stir constantly, and cook until smooth; put away to cool and serve in glasses with whipped cream on top.

Steamed Chocolate Pudding.—Melt a square and a half of chocolate over steam; add a half cup of sugar, half cup of milk, an egg well beaten, a cup of flour and a teaspoon of baking powder with a pinch of salt, one teaspoonful of melted butter. Steam one and a half hours. Serve with a sauce made of powdered sugar, butter and the yolks of two eggs.

Another Steamed Pudding.—Cream three tablespoonfuls of butter, add two-thirds of a cup of sugar gradually, and one egg well beaten. Mix and sift two and one-half cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Add to the creamed mixture, alternating with one cup of milk, then add two ounces of melted chocolate. Turn into a greased mold and steam two and a half hours. Serve with the following sauce: Cream a fourth of a cup of butter, add one cup of powdered sugar gradually, one-half teaspoon of vanilla and a fourth of a cup of heavy cream, beaten stiff.

Chocolate Caramel Cake.—Mix together the following ingredients: Two ounces of chocolate, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of milk, two cups of flour, a quarter of a cup of butter, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in three layers. Caramel Filling—One and a half cupfuls of sugar, a half cup of sweet milk, a teaspoonful of butter. Boil until it spins a thread, then when cool, add a teaspoonful of vanilla.

A dainty little cracker for afternoon teas is prepared by putting a spoonful of soft fudge on small butter thin crackers. Add a half of a nutmeat, and you have a delicious little cake with which to treat your friends.

"If we continue borrowing for work, the hours that are due to sleep, though we may postpone a settlement for years, the final inevitable result will be physical and mental bankruptcy."

SEASONABLE DISHES.

During the cold weather some good combinations of the cheap cuts of meat or the good, wholesome rabbit makes a good meal.

Barbecued Rabbit.—Lay the rabbit in salt water for half an hour; drain and dry, gash freely and lard with strips of bacon. Put into a baking pan and pour in a cupful of boiling water. Cover with another pan and steam until tender. Then uncover and baste with the following: Four teaspoonfuls of vinegar, two of mustard, one tablespoonful of currant jelly and two tablespoonfuls of butter. When nicely browned lay on a hot dish and butter generously:

Lamb's Liver en Casserole.—Wash and wipe a sliced liver, and lay aside to dry, while frying six slices of bacon. Strain out the bacon and return the fat to the pan. When it is hissing hot, return the liver to the pan and sear on both sides. If you desire to have the dish especially nice, add half a can of mushrooms and put them with the liver into the casserole. Cover with broth or, if that is not at hand, boiling water. Cover and cook in a slow oven for two hours.

Calf's Brains on Toast.—Scald the brains and throw at once into very cold water. This makes them firm and white, and the membrane can then be easily removed. When cold, beat to a paste and add three eggs well beaten. Season to taste and fry in a hot frying pan in a little butter. Line a platter with strips of buttered toast and pour the brains and egg over, and serve. Pigs' brains are as good as calves' brains.

Stronger than steel is the sword of the spirit;
Swifter than arrows the light of the truth is,
Greater than anger is love that subdueth.
—H. W. Longfellow.

VEGETABLES THAT GO WITH MEATS.

There are reasons for the various combinations of vegetables with meats as to flavor and with fruits, acidity as well as flavor.

Red meats seem to call for white vegetables. Potatoes, onions, stewed celery with steaks and roasts.

Fricasseed chicken with rice is a time-honored dish, and young onions go well also with chicken and pork, when roasted.

Peas with lamb, asparagus with mutton, and even with beef it is not to be overlooked.

Without having a practical knowledge of the composition of food substances, we will all by some instinct combine foods, as for example, who thinks of corn beef without cabbage, or roast pork without apple sauce.

The vegetable acids are required to neutralize the natural oils. For these and other reasons we like mint sauce with lamb, orange salad with duck and so on.

Cauliflower, brussels sprouts and cabbage are all of the same family, and each goes well with steaks, chops or ham.

Green corn and young chicken, in fact, any kind of meat will be enjoyed with the king of vegetables.

The tomato is one of our most cosmopolitan vegetables. It goes well anywhere, as does the succulent cucumber. Cucumber with fish seems to be a favorite combination, and as fish is rather hard to associate with it is not so often prepared as it deserves. The plebean potato is omnipresent and always welcome. Macaroni is a good accompaniment to fish and will combine most acceptably with it in an escalloped dish.

Green vegetables are necessary for the welfare of our department of the interior, and should be found on our tables the year round, when possible. Fresh lettuce is now a daily commodity in our markets, and with a French dressing is a most wholesome salad

String beans and spinach go well with veal in the digestive harmony.

Rice, beans and starchy foods should be accompanied with Swiss chard, buttered beets or beet greens and serve with lemon or vinegar.

Hominy or corn bread accompanies a roast of tenderloin pork, or the highly-prized piglet.

There is no arbitrary rule which is so iron-clad that one may not occasionally stray from the path of common usage in the serving of vegetables.

Real knowledge, like everything else of value, is not to be obtained easily. It must be worked for, studied for, thought for, and more than all, prayed for.
—Thomas Arnold.

EASY HALF-HOUR DISHES.

For the busy woman who has much to do, it is a wise plan to have a list of recipes that may be quickly prepared on short notice.

Soups of various kinds which come in cans will, of course, be quickly served. But creamed soups, of potatoes, onions, carrots, asparagus and in fact almost any vegetable, can be prepared and served in half an hour, if the vegetable is finely cut before cooking.

Many kinds of fish, besides the fried variety, are easily cooked in half an hour.

Escalloped dishes, from cold fish or other foods, are ready to serve as soon as they are thoroughly hot.

A glance at the list of quick dishes will tell you if you have the materials at hand, and the regret will be saved that you might have had this or that if "I had only thought." In the hurry of a quick meal getting one's memory is often faulty and not to be relied upon.

Tomato toast is a delicious quick lunch dish. Omelets of various and sundry kinds are always popular, and if you have a little cold meat which, with a hot sauce like the Mexican or Spanish, will serve as a good main dish.

Oyster stew is a simple dish and quickly made, quite filling, and almost always popular.

Cream toast is one of the staple good old-fashioned dishes. With the addition of cheese it raises its food value.

A dessert, in a hurry, of preserved or canned peaches with whipped cream, or none at all, with a piece of cake or a cooky, is a good finish to a meal.

Good Rule for Right Living.

Gentleness and cheerfulness, these come before all morality—they are the perfect duties. If your morals make you dreary, depend upon it they are wrong. I do not say "give them up," for they may be all you have; but conceal them, like a vice, lest they should spoil the lives of better men. —Robert Louis Stevenson.

Worship of the Serpent.

The Apaches profess to be descended from a snake, and venerate it accordingly, and the most extraordinary prehistoric earthwork on the continent testifies to the power of the serpent on the imagination of primitive man. The tribes of central Australia, the most primitive people in contact with modern civilization, have in a mythical serpent of gigantic size and magical attributes their nearest approach to a deity.

Dealers from all parts of England were present at the sale, but failed to discover the bargain.

General Manager Could Form Only One Conclusion From Appearance of the Applicant.

"Poor girl!" said the general manager, as the young woman who had just applied for a position as stenographer walked out of his office.

"What's her trouble?" asked the secretary.

"It's too bad that a girl who is so pretty—one who might be living in luxury—is compelled to get out looking for work because she refused to listen to her parents. You heard her say she was married, didn't you?"

"Yes, but I didn't hear her mention her parents."

"Evidently you have not developed much ability in the way of making deductions. Why would a girl with such eyes, such hair, such a complexion, such teeth, such a beautiful face and such a figure as her have to go out looking for work if she hadn't married against her parents' wishes?"

Shanghai and Salt Fish.

The city of Shanghai imported last year about 500,000 yen worth of salt fish. The import of salt fish dates three years back, and began with the introduction of salt salmon from Primerskaya (Russian littoral province), salt cod from Kwangtung leased territory, and salt sardines from Nagasaki, says the Manchurian Daily News. In addition to salt cod, the leased territory exported 6,000 yen worth of swordfish last year. This fish, which owes its name to its likeness to a sword in shape as well as in its glistening, scaleless body, is found in great abundance in these coast waters. The local quality is better suited to the Chinese palate than imports from Ningpo and ports on the North China coasts, and has a promising future on the Shanghai market. In fact, the Chinese are heavy consumers of this fish, the total annual import to Shanghai reaching 4,200,000 piculs.

Women Everywhere

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Women from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from all sections of this great country, no city so large, no village so small but that some woman has written words of thanks for health restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No woman who is suffering from the ills peculiar to her sex should rest until she has given this famous remedy a trial. Is it not reasonable to believe that what it did for these women it will do for any sick woman?

Wonderful Case of Mrs. Stephenson, on the Pacific Coast.

INDEPENDENCE, OREGON.—"I was sick with what four doctors called Nervous Prostration, was treated by them for several years, would be better for a while then back in the old way again. I had palpitation of the heart very bad, fainting spells, and was so nervous that a spoon dropping to the floor would nearly kill me, could not lift the lightest weight without making me sick; in fact was about as sick and miserable as a person could be. I saw your medicines advertised and thought I would try them, and am so thankful I did for they helped me at once. I took about a dozen bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and also used the Sanative Wash. Since then I have used them whenever I felt sick. Your remedies are the only doctor I employ. You are at liberty to publish this letter."—Mrs. W. STEPHENSON, Independence, Oregon.

A Grateful Atlantic Coast Woman.

HODGDON, ME.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and was fat and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself if she does not try this famous medicine made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO. (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 15, 1914.

IN their report, the Inter-State Commerce Commission gives 1,699,218 as the total number of men and women employed by the steam railways of the United States.

DEMOCRACY has not reduced the high cost of governing, says the Monroe county, W. Va., Republican. The Wilson administration is asking for thirty-four millions more dollars to run the government than was appropriated for Taft's last year.

THE total wealth of the United States exceeds that of England by $50,000,000, and is twice as great as that of France or Germany. The per capita wealth in the United States is exceeded in France alone and by only ten dollars. The amount of money in the United States is $1,000,000,000 more than in the United Kingdom and Germany combined. In the production of corn, wheat, oats, tobbacco, cotton, petroleum, pig iron, steel and copper we lead the world.

BECAUSE of the liberal patronage THE REPUBLICAN is receiving we are compelled to issue a 10 page paper this week. The business men of this county have found by past experience that advertisements printed in THE REPUBLICAN produce results. How could it be otherwise with our growing subscription list.

MAYOR PRESTON of Baltimore wants the legislature to pass a law authorizing Baltimore city to elect its board of School Commissioners. He says:

"I can see no reason why the election of School Commissioners by popular vote should have any more tendency to place the school under political domination than the system of appointment by the city administration."

Why not such a law for the whole State? Garrett county had such a law but a Democratic legislature took it away from us.

How frail is human nature, says the Baltimore Evening Sun. As we read the accounts of our splendid array of warships assembling in Mexican waters and of our dashing marines gathering within striking distance of the Mexican combatants, peaceable as we may be—sincerely as we deplore bloodshed, many of us feel a secret desire to see the dogs of war let loose and to witness at a distance the thrilling spectacle of gallantry and glory that would follow. The most questionable act of Wilson's administration would be intervention; but for a short time at least it would be the most popular. May Heaven preserve us from the savage instincts of our nature.

THE Gazette Times 1914 Almanac has just come to hand. As a book of reference on national, state and local matters it is fully up to the standard of The Gazette Times, and is replete with interesting information on thousands of vital topics, many of which are constantly coming up for discussion. The Almanac covers the fields of politics, religion, labor and industrial affairs, sports and numerous other matters of interest.

The Almanac will appeal to all who value exact, concisely stated facts which are of practical, every-day use. It is a perfect storehouse of information and knowledge. It is well printed, handsomely bound, and is worth many times its price, which is 25 cents a copy; 35 when orderd by mail. Address Gazette Times, Pittsburgh, Pa.

ON another page of this paper will he found a very interesting article entitled, "What is the matter with Kansas?" We bespeak for it your most careful reading and study. It is one of the strongest and best arguments why Maryland should be included among the "dry states."

If not the entire state, then Garrett county. The whole state may not be ready to decide the question, but we believe Garrett county has made up its mind to do away with the saloon and its ruinous business, and that during this year of 1914 the citizens of the county will vote for or against its sale, and that the result of the vote will be against the sale of all intoxicating liquors within the borders of the entire county. The legislative ticket last November was elected with the distinct understanding that the successful candidates were to give us a county-wide local option law, and believing they will carry out their pledge, the electors of the county must prepare for the fight at the polls. THE REPUBLICAN will be in the fight for county-wide local option, and from time to time will publish facts and arguments in favor of it. The articles we are publishing weekly, written by Jason Kep, a man who took an active part in the West Virginia campaign, will help mould public sentiment in favor of closing the saloons, as will the circulation of such telling articles as "What is the matter with Kansas?" Urge your neighbors to subscribe for the Republican. After you are through reading your paper hand it to some neighbor to read and have him to pass it on. We must create public sentiment in favor of county-wide local option, and work for its adoption by a large majority.

THE PUBLIC AND LOSSES IN MAIL.

The report of the United States Dead Letter office for 1913 clearly shows that the public suffers more than the inconvenience due to delayed mails and the losses incident thereto. The carelessness in addressing letters and parcels is astonishing, as revealed by the report.

More than 13,000,000 "dead" letters were received, containing money orders, checks and negotiable paper amounting to $7,584,437 and other valuables that totalled $67,599.34. Of these "dead letters" over 6,000,000, or nearly one-half the total number, were held without delivery because the senders had neglected to give their names and addresses either on the envelopes or inside and the persons to whom they were improperly addressed could not be traced. In all over 6,440,000 letters were returned to the senders. Such figures are eloquent in teaching the lesson of particular care in addressing mail matter.

Letters and packages should bear the name and address, or at least the address, of the sender, written or printed on the envelope or wrapper, and the address of the person to whom delivery is to be made should be accurate, precise, free from blotting or blurring. Checks, negotiable paper and valuables to the amount of nearly $8,000,000, find their way to the Dead Letter Office, and virtually one-half of the "dead letters" remaining to be destroyed, should be warning enough for the public in this matter.

But the public is frequently slow to profit by its mistakes.

What's The Matter With Kansas?

A few days ago, when the whole country was worring about the unprecedented heat and drought in the west, the governor of Kansas issued a public statement saying he hoped no one would waste pity on the people of his state.

He told the world they were taking the medicine nature at some time or other deals out in some way or other to every community and that no people ever were so well prepared to meet a situation.

"With more than $200,000,000 on deposit in our state and national banks, we could weather a worse storm than this without hardship," he said.

And when you stop to think that this money, divided equally among the men, women, children and babies of Kansas, would give each of them $118 in cash, not to mention the tidy sum of $1681 each is credited with as his or her share of the state's assessed wealth, you can see the force of the argument.

As a matter of fact, Kansas, which last year produced $325,000,000 worth of farm products, can better afford such a roasting and drying up than any other state in the Union, for her per capita wealth is larger than that of any other state.

She can better afford this or any brand of calamity, for her people are not constantly paying out huge sums for the care and keep of criminals, paupers, insane and feeble minded.

In eighty-seven of her 105 counties there are no insane. In fifty-four of this number are no feeble minded. Ninety-six counties have no inebriates, and in the other nine they're as scarce as hens' teeth. Thirty-eight county poor houses are as empty as a last year's locust shell, and most of these have been so for the best part of a decade.

The pauper population of the state falls a little short of 600. That is one pauper for each 3000 of the kind making a living, and a good one—the kind that now own $255,000,000 worth of livestock and in the last twelve months have added more than $45,000,000 to their taxable personal property.

At one time not long ago the jails in fifty-three counties were empty and sixty-five counties were on the roll as having no prisoners serving sentence in the penitentiary. Some counties have not called a jury to try a case in ten years, and the attorney general says "a grand jury is so uncommon that half our people wouldn't know what it is and how to use it."

For still other reasons Kansas can afford to lose two thirds of one corn crop without having to renew the calamity howls which once went rasping through the nation from that "grassy quadrangle whose dream is the realization of the impossible" and which for twenty-five years has been making that dream come true.

Instead of being plastered from end to end with mortgages held by easterners, as was the case two decades ago, her own people this year hold more than $67,000,000 in this form of wealth, an increase of over 500 per cent in five years.

Instead of being hampered by a large mass of illiterate—thirty years ago 46 per cent of her population came under this head—her present ratio of 2 per cent is next to the lowest in the land and two-thirds lower than Massachusetts, including Boston.

Where "Sockless" Jerry Simpson once preached populism now William Allen White delights a world with his wit and wisdom. In place of Carrie Nation's screeds, punctuated with hatchet thwacks, we have Ed. Howe's incomparable books of travel. But the pride of Kansas is not penned up in a few names that shine out against a dull backgronnd of mediocrity. Her boast is an average of physical and mental ability not equaled by any other state.

In this uncommon prevalence of sound minds in sound bodies that has reduced her death rate from 17 to 7 per 1000 in thirty years, through the former per centage still holds among her neighbers. It is this combination of sense and solid muscle that has kept her growing stronger and richer through extremes of climate which soon would decimate a less fit lot.

These people have made good in a zone once declared to be unquestionably unproductive. In the last twenty years they've made this "unproductive" soil yield corn and wheat worth $2,517,902,640. They've shown the nation the worth of alfalfa as a money maker, a soil rejunivator and an ideal feed for stock. The wheat crop, harvested before the last hot spell, is worth $93,000,000 at current prices.

And in 1907, when the panic was on, Kansas forwarded $50,000,000 to help Wall street out of the hole—the same Kansas which once was laughed at by the islanders of Manhattan as dead broke and done for.

She hasn't as many people as some of the other states, but man for man, she creates wealth faster than any other; she keeps her own healthier and richer than any other, and offers for the world's consideration a record of moral and material progress the like of which has not been seen since the civilization dawned in the valleys of the Nile and the Euphrates.

Though forced to acknowledge this, we cannot help thinking it strange. The people who settled Kansas were not different, on the whole, from those who pioneered in Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. Nor are the soil and climatic conditions greatly unlike. Indeed, the odds are unfavorable to Kansas, so far as natural conditions are concerned. Yet many of the facts here arraved could hot be spoken of these states.

So something would seem to be the matter with Kansas.

Something is the matter with her. That something, we believe, can be boiled down into these first fourteen words constituting an amendment made to her constitution in 1881.

The manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor shall be forever prohibited in this state.

It is this fundamental provision, fought and evaded in some localities as it was for a quarter century, and strictly enforced in all parts of the state only within the last five years, that has helped Kansas to flaunt a two-hundred million bank account in the face of a partial crop failure; that relieves her of spending much time, strength and a large amount of money on paupers, criminals, insane and feeble minded; that gives her people the best of chances for living and the fewest excuses for dying.

It is this defiance of what other states have legalized as a "necessary" evil that has helped to make her citizens the richest per capita in the country and the richest of any agricultural folk in the world; that has given her a permanent school fund of $10,000,000 and has reduced her illiteracy to an almost negligible quantty.

It is this insistence upon what slaves of custom always have sneered at as "impractical," if not impossible, that has helped to give her a balance of more than a million and a quarter in her state treasury and no bonded debt, save $370,000 held by the permanent school fund; this alone that makes possible the statement that 98 per cent of her 400,000 school children never have seen a saloon.

For even while the liquor interests succeeded in evading the law in many instances and boasted that prohibition was a failure in Kansas, goverment statistics showed that the average annual consumption of intoxicating liquors in the state was $1.18 per capita, while in the neighboring state of Missouri, where the whiskey ring ruled, it was $24 per capita.

In other words, the average Kansan has just $22 52 more to spend on food, clothing, education and entertainment than his average neighbor across the Kaw. And just about that much more to save on doctors, nurses, fines, jails, poorhouses and insane asylums. And now that the United States supreme court has upheld the Webb law, prohibiting liquor shipments into legally dry territory, Kansas is enabled to enabled to enforce legislation that will virtually eliminate intoxicants from her borders.

Again and again it has been said prohibition is a failure in Kansas; that when the older generation responsible for its adoption passed over the reins of government to its sons and daughters, for Kansas has recognized women's rights as full citizens Kansas would "come back to her senses."

That this prophecy was without foundation is best evidenced by the following statement from Attorney General Dawson:

The last two session of the legislature answered these false prophets by passing the most drastic prohibiton law in the world, killing the drug store saloon, making it impossible even to cure snake bites by the liquor treatment and by absolutely clapping down the "lid" and riveting it on.

They were not satisfied by going this far, but showed their appreciation of the benefits of state-wide prohibition by making it a felony for the fellow who violated the law a second time. And I have just lately received from the warden at the penitentiary a receipt for one "Red Mercer," who was sent up from Barber county as a first consignment to serve nine years for violating the new prohibitory law.

The law that sent him there was made by these tow-headed, one-gallused boys who grew to manhood on the Kansas pariries without ever having seen a saloon.

Yes; something's the matter with Kansas. Of what it is here can be no doubt in the mind of any unprejudiced observer. And in view of the effect in the Sunflower state, there is little wonder that an increasing number of persons believe that this nation will be past the most dangerous rocks in its course when the thing that is the matter with Kansas is the matter with every [illegible] to San Diego and from Walla Walla to Key West.

Roads Commission in Suit Against th United Co. to Recover $87.916

What is said to be the largest verdict ever rendered in a Baltimore court was announced last Thursday by Judge Heuisler in the Superior court where he held that the United Railways and Electric Company would have to pay the State Roads Commission the sum of $87,916.68, which the commissioners sought to recover as the cost and expense of changes in the roadbed, tracks, and overhead structures of the railway company on roads improved by the comsion. Although the amount of the verdict is extraordinarily large, it covers only certain roads which were mentioned in the suit. Actualy, by the court's decision, the State will be the gainer by about $300,000.

Wants To Enter Frostburg

The event of the evening came in to the city council of Frostburg from the Avilton Mutual Telephone Company for the privilege of erecting poles and wires within the corporate limits for telephone purposes. The company's lines will radiate from the town of Grantsville and connect thereby a number of towns, farms, and dwellings. H. S. Coleman is president; Daniel W. Warn, vice president; David Pope, secretary, and Arch Broadwater treasurer. Other Garrett county citizens connected with the company as directors are Michael H. M. Robinson, W. C. Chaney, W. A. Murphy and Richard Laymon. The petition is signed by about 30 business firms and houses of Frostburg. The petition was received and filed. What our "city dads" will do with the petition, The Spirit cannot say, but the petition ought to be granted, as it is a great convenience for the farmers and others in the rural districts to be able to get into quick communication with doctors, merchants and other business men in town. Nor is the convenience one-sided. It is just as beneficial to the town people as to the country people. The Avilton company should be permitted and encouraged to get their telephone lines into Frostburg at the earliest possible moment.—Frostburg Spirit.

GRANTSVILLE.

Master Wiliam Zeller is visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. M. Zeller, in Frostburg.

Miss Irene Hayes, of Grantsville, was an Oakland visitor last week.

A sleighing party composed of about 40 young people drove from Salisbury, Pa., to Grantsville, on Monday evening of last week where a sumptuous supper was spread for them at the Victoria Hotel. Dancing and general merry-making were the order of the evening and everybody had a good time. Another party consisting of some of the younger set, journeyed thither on Tuesday evening for a "hop" and supper at the same popular hostelrie.

The citizens of Grantsville filled the audience and Sunday school rooms of the Methodist church recently with a delighted audience, who listened to the address and saw the beautiful pictures of the old Braddock road. The views were intensely interesting and life-like and the story of the old National pike as told by him, called forth applause. The speaker, Prof. Lacock, suggested that the good people of Grantsville hold a celebration next fall, which he claims according to the original contract, will be the one hundredth anniversary of the completion of the famous Little Crossing bridge, near Grantsville. The suggestion is a good one. Grantsville ought to make this an occasion of a great jubilee—a home coming week. It would attract a great number of people to that beautiful village.

The State Normal at Frostburg, which was closed for over a month by diphtheria, was open for students on the 5th inst. Among the students from Garrett county are Misses Angela Getty and Vida Engle of this village.

Maryland Manual Out.

The Maryland Manual for 1913-1914, the annual publication of the state, has been issued and many copies of it have been distributed from the executive office in Annapolis.

The manual is a compendium of legal, historical and statistical information pertaining to the state. It was compiled by Secretary of State Robert P. Graham.

The book contains lists of the Colonial Governors, of officials serving under the state government and of the several counties, a roll of all former presiding officials of the Senate and House of Delegates and a roster of members of the present legislature. It has 270 pages.

"A GIRL OF THE UNDERWORLD"

In all homes, in all branches of life there is an uncertain feeling of uneasiness, a desire to see the world; to go on your own accord, there is much pity for a girl alone, homeless, hungry and without money. There is only one road open for her, and "A Girl of the Underworld" will show you the folly of that road. A road perhaps which is smooth going, but when the end is reached, and you want to return, you will find the road rough and hard to travel. Every mother, father, brother and sister owes it to themselves to see this beautiful play for the lesson it teaches. Girls who want to go to the city, girls who don't know their own mind should see "A Girl of the Underworld." It will show the pitfalls of the big city of New York. The greatest moral lesson ever taught is the verdict of this beautiful four act comedy drama, "A Girl of the Underworld," which is the attraction at the Maryland on next Wednesday evening, January 21.—Advertisement.

Baggage Limitations.

Beginning with the first of the year a new rule limiting the the size of baggage became effective on all the railroads of the country. No trunks or boxes are now accepted that measure more than seventy-two inches in any direction. No package weighing more than 250 pounds is received as baggage. It must be turned over as freight or express matter, and will not arrive on the same train or as soon as the owner.

The occasional advertiser reaps results, of course, but it is the persistent, regular advertiser who reaches the coveted goal of success.

Irene Hayes, vs. Elza L. Hayes.

No. 193 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, Irene Hayes, a vinculo matrimonii, from the defendant Elza L. Hayes.

The Bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the 25th day of December, 1901, and resided together as man and wife until October, 1907.

That the defendant without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than six years, and is deliberate and final.

That one son was born as a result of said marriage, to wit: Emmerson Hayes, on the 13th day of October, 1902.

That the defendant has failed, neglected and refused to contribute any thing toward the support of the plaintiff ever since said separation.

The Bill further states that the defendant has been guilty of the crime of adultery since said marriage.

And further states that the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, and avers that the defendant is a non resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 12th day of January, 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 15th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of the Bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 2nd day of March next, to show cause, if any he has why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

BITTINGER.

The demand for coal is so great that the local mines are not able to keep their customers supplied with fuel.

Amos H. Reckner, of North Glade is employed in John Stark's coal mine, and Peter Bickford, of Meadow Mountain, is digging for F. M. Bittinger.

A very large gathering of people from Jennings, Davis and other near-by places, attended the literary held in this village on Thursday evening of last week. The next meeting will be on Thursday evening, Jan. 22nd.

The ladies of the Lutheran church held another successful oyster supper in the basement of the parsonage last Saturday evening.

Deputy Sheriff Geo. A. DeWitt, of Oakland, passed through this village on Sunday afternoon.

Lloyd F. Brenneman and Miss Mary Buckle visited Grantsville a few days ago.

Lymann Soelders, who has been located in the west for some years, is spending some time at his old home near here.

While at work on O. C. Buckle's new store building, a few days ago, Simon Brenneman slipped and fell from a ladder and slightly injured his neck.

Chas. Buckle and Miss Linnie Miller were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Buckle last Sunday afternoon.

FARM FOR SALE.

I have for sale, on very liberal terms, the best farm in Garrett county. This farm consists of 465 acres, situated on the main line of the B. & O. R. R., with one mile of frontage and two switches adjoining the land. The largest crops in the county have been raised on this farm the past six years. Over 113 tons of hay bailed this year besides reserving sufficient to winter from 40 to 50 head of cattle and horses. Title unexcelled and abstract may be seen by applying to,

The Reason Why

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY JASON KEP

The question agitating the general public today is, Why this great temperance wave is sweeping over the country and has it come to stay?

Read carefully the following questions and answer them honestly and see if you can not give the correct answer.

1. Does your son have as good chance to grow up an honest, sober, good citizen where there are saloons as where there are none?

2. Do saloons cause men to become addicted to the saloon habit?

3. Is there not more drunkenness in a community where there are saloons than in a dry section?

4. Do you object to your sons, daughters and wife patronizing the saloons?

5. Do you object to having a saloon next door to your home? If so, why do you not object to having them next door to other people's homes?

6. If the saloon is not a safe place for your family to patronize, is it a safe place to have in the community?

7. Is the influence of the saloon elevating?

8. Can saloons be regulated, made to obey the law?

9. Can a saloon obey the law and make money? Don't answer too quick.

10. Do you know of any saloon which hasn't a place where one can take a girl and get drinks if he knows the roops? What percentage?

11. You know the saloons take an active part in politics, is their influence on the side of better and cleaner government?

12. You put poison and sharp tools out of the road of your children for fear they might hurt their body. Would it not be well to do the same with the saloons which jeopardize their immortal souls?

13. Why do police and detectives always make a straight shot for the saloons when notified to pick up some crook?

14. There are over 152,000 poor souls who die drunkards each year in the United States, would closing the saloons increase or decrease that number, in your opinion?

15. The blind tigers, boot leggers and speak easies are outlaws, with no law to protect them, would it be harder to suppress them and make them obey the law than the saloons with the millions of dollars of backing they have from the brewers and distillers?

16. It has been stated by many judges and district attorneys that 85 per cent of the criminal court work was caused by drink. Would closing the saloons increase or decrease this percentage?

17. One wet county in West Virginia has more convicts in the penitentiary than twelve of the dry counties. Does that mean anything to you?

18. Do you know that the murders of our three martyred Presidents were planned in a saloon and the man who shot Roosevelt was a saloon keeper?

19. Has a business which injures its patrons and produces crime, a legitimate excuse for a licensed existence in a civilized community.

20. We have tried regulating the liquor traffic for years and it has not been a success; it has grown worse. Would it not be a good idea to suppress it, to prohibit its manufacture and sale and see if it will not better the condition?

21. Can you produce any argument in favor of saloons which your conscience will approve?

22. And now, can a church member, or a good moral-man-outsider seeing all the suffering, misery and dispair caused by drink, and voting wet, or doing nothing toward making his section dry, expect to become eligible to a halo that isnt moth eaten?

23. Now with reference to yourself. Have you been helping by work and vote to make your section or state dry? If not is it because you have not given it a thought or consideration or is it because you are naturally cruel? The greatest question which confronts the people today is the liquor question and as a good citizen you must give it consideration. You cannot be neutral, by your vote you must help one state or the other. The saloon keepers, liquor men and allied interests, the white slave people and dive keeper work, spend their money and vote for a continuation of the traffic. You know the class of people who are working to suppress the traffic, size up their reasons. Now with which side do you wish to be identified. Think it over.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Mormonism.

To the Editor of the Republican:

After Rigdon left the church trouble arose. Brigham led his flock to Salt Lake where he landed in 1847. Here they were on the boundaries of Mexico safe from the Babylonist government of the United States. But the Mexican war soon brought them under the United States, but so far removed from the centre of operations that they have been entrenched in the mountains for more than half a century. He had things his own way to justify the habits of the priesthood. Brigham had a revelation making polygamy a condition of exaltation in the next world. It is marvelous at what convenient times these revelations were received. They just suited the purposes of the old rascal.

To give it sacredness and to add force, it was dated back to 1843 and ascribed to Joe Smith the martyred prophet. Travel across the continent was increasing and isolation was threatened. They must keep the Gentiles out and prevent apostacy, so Brigham invented the doctrine of "Blood atonement," that is the right to kill a man to save his soul. It was a convenient way to get rid of a Gentile or apostate. As a result of this reformation the Mountain Meadow massacre in Southern Utah in 1857 was enacted, when 120 peaceful emigrants were slaughtered and their horses, wagons, moneys, clothes, etc., were confiscated to enrich the church and it did it, by thousands of dollars. To give it the appearance of being done by the Indians, the murderers were disguised as Indians. The massacre in the valley of Rio Virgin; the outrage on the Bransfield boys; the murder of the Morrisites and the assassination of the Parishes show that the infamous doctrine was appliedto destroy outsiders.

The order of Enoch was a device of the prophet which required them to have all things in common, by which innocent victims were victimized and the priests were enriched. By and by a new era dawned under governmental protection. Gentile miners began to develope the resources of the country; the Union Pacific railroad reached Utah and capital began to pour in, civilization came in contact with Mormonism.

When it was a territory the hand of the Nation's authority was felt. The President of the United States appointed the executive and judiciary officers, and acts of the legislature were subject to veto of the Gentile governor and Congress.

Gentiles were increasing among them, apostates were thinning their ranks and the Mormon hierarchy was threatened. It seemed to be tottering. They could not hold their own against Christianity. It must get converts from abroad.

This was its only hope. The power of the priesthood was getting weaker. They must save their loved system—the heirachey by some means. True to its nature, which is treacherous and deceptive, they pretended to quit or abandon polygamy and promised to be good, decent people and abide by the law, and so they induced Congress to admit Utah as a State. So soon as they got control of the state government they forgot their good promises and renewed the practice of polygamy and flung an insult in the face of the United States, by electing a polygamist to Congress.

The story of the plates and of Urim and Thuminim were invented to account for the divine origin of the book. Mormons regard it as superior to the Bible. They claim it was translated by inspiration and so is free from error. The Pearl of Great Price is a series of special revelation from God, through Joe Smith, for the guidance of the people of this age. This last is the most binding of all because given especially to them.

The Mormon church believes the President of the church is prophet, seer and revelator of the church throughout the world. He is the mouth-piece of God and as such he gets such revelations from God, from day to day, as the people of the age need for guidance. His words are therefore "living words" of God, to govern man in spiritual and temporal things and are consequently of more importance to this generation than all the written revelations combined. Mormonism is Paganism pure and simple, but veneered with Christian terminology. Its spread has been marvelous, considering its pernicous character. In 1890 there were 144,352 Mormons in the United States, now there are over 100,000 and 20,000 in other lands. In 1910 they gained over 16,000 by birth, and by proselyting 2,000. Mormon missionaries are at work (about 800 in the United States) who visit about 2,000,000 homes annually and distribute their literature and hold some 50,000 meetings yearly.

These missionaries appeal to the depravity of the heart. They do not tell the real truths concerning their doctrines and practice. They are trained in the art of deception. They believe the end justifies the means, a true Jesuist doctrine. This is due to their training. They quietly slip into a community in pairs and go to work, and by their manners take christians off their guard. They will find out who the church members are, how they live and if there are any who are weak in the faith or dissatisfied they will begin to proselyte them. They will visit all the families, from house to house, as often as three times in a few days. They are polite and tactful and pious looking fellows who introduce themselves as missionaries, make a friendly call, leave a tract, are of fair speech, gain the confidence of all they can, arouse their curiosity, yet not divulging their real character or intentions, so as to be invited to call again. They try to shake the faith of christians by suggesting doubts. If they find a disgruntled church member they will try their best to make some impression on him. They like to emphasize church distinctions and show how far the churches have drifted away, and then cautiously remind you that they represent the true church. They represent themselves as missionaries who travel as the 70 did, but they do not give the name of Mormon, but if pressed will give the more euphonious name of Latter Day Saints. They will tell you that they believe in the Father, Son and Holy Ghost—that sounds all right, but it is not the Father, Son and Holy Spirit of the Bible. With the air of injured innocence they will tell you they believe in the Bible as the Word of God, but they fail to tell you that it is not our Bible but Joe Smith's manufacture. But their doctrinal beliefs we will reserve for another time.

Yours truly,

HAM.

A PURE HEART IS A PURE FOUNTAIN

Suggestions as to How to Start a New Year Right.

Pure Thoughts—Two Ways of Fighting Vice, Sin—We Must Copy God's Methods—Impurity Is Devouring Our Race—Its Ramifications—In Business, In Religion, In Society, In Politics, In the Home, Everywhere—The Fight Against Impurity—Its Progress—Its Soldiers—Its Efforts and Results, Present and Future.

New York, January 4.—Pastor Russell, of the City Temple Congregation, took for his text today St. Paul's words: "Whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Philippians 4:8.

The Pastor began by calling attention to the will. Then he showed that the heart represents the real man, whom we are not always able to recognize properly. He quoted Scripture to prove that God looks upon the heart rather than upon the outward appearance, and declared that all who desire to be pleasing to God should carefully scrutinize their own hearts. As a man thinks in his heart, the Pastor claimed, so will he gradually come to do.

The man who does not think has not properly begun to live, continued the Pastor. The man with wrong thoughts has before his mind wrong ideals, and is still worse off. All must admit, he declared, the truth of the Apostle's proposition that we must think upon good, honorable, just, pure, lovely things. If we would have our lives just, noble, pure, lovely and lovable.

The Pastor did not choose this subject because his congregation is devoid of good ideals, but because we are all apt to let slip some of those noble ideals set before us in the Scriptures. The opening of the new year he considers to be a very favorable time for resetting our heart affections upon things noble, just, pure, lovely, and for exercising all the will power and resolution we can command. Thus we make character.

Then he reminded his congregation that we are all preaching both by word and by action; and that others are influenced more by our actions than by our words. As God's people, we are all to show forth His praises as we have opportunity. Our ordination is of God through the Holy Spirit—the highest, the only authority.

The World's Purity Congress.

Last November Pastor Russell was appointed delegate to the World's Purity Congress, which met in Minneapolis, November 7th to 12th. There he met a band of noble men and women who are laying down their lives in the fight against sin. Some labored as Christ's followers; others, from merely a humanitarian standpoint.

The Pastor then gave a resume of the work of the Purity Congress. The delegates discussed, not merely the evil, but rather the good and what must be accomplished that good may prevail. He was pleased with their spirit of moderation, and noted also their appreciation of what he has sought for years to set forth; namely, that apparently much of the sin and vice in the world results from ignorance and superstition, although all must agree that there are people whose vicious conduct can scarcely be characterized as other than wicked, sensual, devilish.

The congress devoted much time to discussing the welfare of children, the Pastor declared. It was demonstrated that among the very poor ideals of chastity are practically unknown. These children possess knowledge of sex matters beyond their years; and, mingling with others in the schools, they suggest immoral practises to those whose parents have sought carefully to maintain their purity.

The parental duty of giving children proper conceptions of the sanctity of their bodies was next discussed. This information should be given before the child enters school; for first lessons in vice are sometimes given even in the kindergarten, notwithstanding the teacher's watchful eye. The child should be assured that the parent will give further instruction later on, and should have such confidence in the parent's truthfulness that it would wait for that further information which every child's mind seeks regarding itself and its origin.

The Pastor declared that many parents do not know how to broach the subject of sex hygiene to their children. Are we to see young boys start bad habits which will injure their own health and that of their posterity? he asked. Yet great care should be exercised lest evil be encouraged, instead of guarded against.

From thirteen to fifteen seems to be the age when clear knowledge is quite necessary to save the child from the evil which has overtaken many. The parents, the Pastor claims, are the God-given instructors and protectors of their families. Nothing can excuse them from this duty, whether church work, slum work or even Bible study.

NAME YOUR FARM AND USE PRINTED STATIONERY

Every Farmer Ought to Have Printed Stationery

The Chronicle, Emmittsburg, Md, has this to say on a subject which should interest every Garrett county farmer:

There are a great many farms in this district—in every district, in fact—that, although they are quite worthy of them, do not bear names. There is an individuality about almost every farm. A farm's location, character of soil, nature of nearby trees, its view, its environment—any of these characteristics should suggest a name to the owner, and these names should by all means be perpetuated. The name will soon become identified with your place. The rural carrier will know it; your friends will quickly be made familiar with it and, if you use printed stationery—and it will be a great convenience to you—every customer of yours, every firm with which you deal will direct your mail accordingly.

On the subject of stationery the Brunswick Herald aptly remarks:

Every farmer ought to have printed stationery, with his and the name of his farm and his postoffice address properly given. The printed heading should also give the names of whatever crops he specializes on, and of whatever varieties of seed or whatever breed of hogs, cattle, or poultry he keeps. Printed stationery gives you standing with whatever person or firm you are writing to and gives you a new dignity besids insuring that your name and address will always be given properly and in full.

Moreover, such printed stationery increases your credit. A prominent advertiser wrote one of our readers the other day saying: "We usually require cash with orders for all our goods, but we have found it pays to trust a man who uses printed stationery as you do so we are shipping your order at once."

If you want to write to your Congressman or member of the Legislature; or if you have a request to make of your County Superintendent of Schools; or if you wish to get information from any business house, in any case your letter will have increased weight and get prompter attention if you use printed stationery.

Even if you use postal cards, buy 200 to 500 at the time and have your name and address printed in the corner.

Get the habit of using printed stationery. The next time you go to town, why not drop into the printiug office and give an order for 1,000 sheets of printed note paper and envelopes to match? It will be one of the best investments you have ever made in your life.

Why not begin the year 1914 by adopting this practical, convenient and common-sense idea? The Republican printery is prepared to do all kinds of farm printing.

OPTOMETRIST

Is Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 80 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 20 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientinc accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

HUDSON Six-40
f.o.b. Detroit

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country

See This Innovation

A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.

They were sold on these startling facts:

That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.

That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.

That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.

That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.

Think What This Means

Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.

Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far undersells any Four in its class.

You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.

A Distinguished Car

In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.

Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.

Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.

And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.

Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

We can color them to suit as desired at a small additional cost. We have a nice pile of them now on hand, selling price $12.00 per M.

¶ Never be afraid to buy a pressed cement brick or block that comes of the home press.

1st.	Are superior to tamped brick.	11th.	Perfectly uniform.
2nd.	Are equal to pressed clay brick.	12th.	Specified by architects.
3rd.	Compete with pressed clay brick in price.	13th.	Uniformly dense.
4th.	Better than common clay brick.	14th.	Clean, sharp corners on edges.
5th.	Compete with common clay brick in price.	15th.	Beautiful texture.
6th.	Combine the advantage of concrete and clay	16th.	Law absorption.
7th.	Lay faster than other brick.	17th.	Absolute fire proof.
8th.	Are used by U. S. Government.	18th.	Do not deteriorate.
9th.	Lay easier than other brick.	19th.	Harden with age.
10th.	Perfectly true.

Be Sure You Get These Two Points:

¶ FIRST.—A building must have 253 12 foot stories to secure enough weight to cause these brick to crush under their own weight.

¶ SECOND.—This is the practical way in which any competent architect would figure the load these brick will carry. He would allow a factor of safety of four; consequently he would specify these brick for a building SIXTY-THREE (63) Stories high. Do they build that high in your locality?

The Republican is the leading newspaper of Garrett county.

The Grafton Sentinel, in speaking of the revival just closed in Rev. J. O. Bolton's church, in that city says "The revival was one of the most successful ones ever held in that church, and nearly forty persons became converts. The many friends of Dr. Bolton in this vicinity will be glad to hear of this successful revival meeting.

Why not reorganize the Mountain City band? We have the boys who can make the music. Why not use them? Oakland pride should awaken enthusiam on this subject. Friendsville has a good band, of which it well may feel proud. Oakland can have a first class band and there is no good reason why it should not have one.

The Republican is issued a few hours late today on account of an error made by our ready print-house in making a shipment of the wrong sheets. We contemplate making large improvements within the next few months which will make The Republican assume a metropolitan air, thus giving our subscribers the latest news of the world.

The "Spelling Bee" at the Lutheran church tomorrow evening promises to be well attended and quite a social function. Everyone has evinced an interest in the matter and a large crowd is expected to be present. All are cordially invited to be present. All are cordially invited. The affair is given as a benefit for the Ladies' Guild of the Episcpal church.

Mr. Henry H. Baker, assistant cashier of the First State Bank, Grantsville; Mr. Ervin Blocher, who holds a similar position in the First National Bank of the same town, and Messrs. Gilead Broadwater and Charles Bender, were in Oakland as witnesses in the Broadwater—Friend case heard by Justice Fries, a full account of which is published in this paper today.

The advertisement of the Hudson Six-40 was crowded out of The Republican last week, as was also over two other columns of advertisements and three columns of reading matter in type. This week by issuing a ten page paper we are able to meet the demands upon our columns. The advertisement of the new Hudson auto is worth reading. The machine can be seen at Lawton's garage.

Some few weeks ago The Republican made the suggestion that Oakland have a spelling match. We are pleased to note that the Ladies of St. Matthew's Episcopal church have planned for a regular old-time spelling match. The ladies are to be congratulated for taking hold of he matter. That it will be an interesting and enjoyable occasion no one will deny. Let everybody be present.

The ice harvest in this section is well under way today. At the Wilson lake, just east of town, ice ten inches thick is being cut which is being stored in many of the ice houses about town. At the Park the ice is some twelve inches thick a double shift of men is being employed to harvest the crop. Several hundred tons daily are being cut which is shipped to points along the line of the B. & O. R. R.

The list of road supervisors and the amount appropriated for the several roads of the county will be found on another page of this paper. For the amount of money the Commissioners had for the public roads, it appears to us that they have made a judicious distribution of the funds and selected suitable men to look after the roads. It is the duty of every citizen to give these road supervisors their hearty support.

A co-partnership has been formed by Messrs. Gilmor S. Hamill and his two sons, Messrs. Stuart F. and H. Byrne, for the purpose of practicing law and carrying on a general legal business. Mr. A. J. Alexander, of near Accident, was in the city last Thursday when he presented the editor with an apple brought from Wenatchee, Washington, grown on the farm of his brother, Mr. Joseph Alexander. The apple was of the wine sap variety, looked beautiful but lacked the taste of the Garrett county fruit. Mr. Alexander says that Garrett county is a paradise compared with Washington State and its mosquitoes, hot, dry weather, where everything in order to grow must be irrigated, the irrigation ditches thus becoming the natural breeding places for mosquitoes and other pests.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

Mr P. T. Garthright, who was paralyzed on the 13th of June, 1913, is still confined to his home, at Mountain Lake Park, and is not able to dress or undress himself, makes an earnest appeal to all who know themselves indebted to him in any way, by book account, note or judgment, to make an earnest effort to help him in this time of his great need. Mr. Garthright has no income whatever and must depend upon the collection of amounts due him to provide his daily bread and meet his personal obligations. If you cannot pay the full amount due me, please send me as much as you can. I can use any kind of farm produce. I will greatly appreciate a prompt response to this appeal. I am only pleading for a portion of my own, in all kindness, and believe me, as ever, a friend to the needy, and rejoicing in affliction, trusting and hoping in God for a better home than earth can give, through the merits only of Jesus.

I cordially invite every one to call and see me at my home.

Most sincerely,
P. T. GARTHRIGHT.

URGES PARENTS TO PILOT COPIO

Prof. Johnson Would Combine Eugenics and Romance.

STEP TOWARD BETTER RACE.

At Battle Creek Conference He Unfolds Plan—Would Not Go So Far As to Eliminate Romance.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Marriage selection, education for race betterment, especially along lines of eugenics, and the dependent child were some of the principal topics of discussion at the closing session of the national conference on race betterment. Among the speakers were Prof. Roswell Hill Johnson, of the University of Pittsburgh; Prof. Winfield Scott Hall, of Northwestern University, and Dr. Gertrude E. Hall, of the State Board of Charities of New York.

Professor Johnson urged the widest possible range of acquaintance for young people, claiming that the school and church do not offer sufficient advantages in that respect. He suggested the municipal dance hall as a beneficial step in that direction. Eugenics seek improvements in both mental and physical racial qualities of future generations, he said.

"Eugenics does not eliminate romance," continued Professor Johnson. "We Eugenists believe romance should be retained.

"Through the past romance has proved a good thing. In fact, we believe that it has been a powerful factor lu the building up of the most valuable traits in man s evolution.

"Most people believe we are attempting to produce the perfect physical baby. Physical perfection has a certain importance, of course. But physically perfect babies may be found frequently with inferior minds. Eugenics seeks the improvement in racial qualities both mental and physical in future generations of men. By racial, we mean inheritable qualities.

Selection Of Mates.

"The superior stock we have is marrying at an alarmingly low rate. In order to advance this rate, which must be done, it is necessary to promote the following agencies:

"Let young persons of both sexes be educated together, as they now are in many institutions.

"Let parents interest themselves in furthering the acquaintance of eligible friends of opposite sex, though without throwing the young people together too obviously and thus nullifying the advantage.

"Let the young people he impressed with the thought that marriage is their ideal and normal goal of life and let all cynical and pessimistic views of marriage be opposed.

"Above all things, let young people have the widest range of acquaintance possible.

Beauty Not All.

"Teach the young man that mere physical beauty, except insofar as it indicates physical well-being, trivial mental qualities such as vivacity and a forced and feeble attempt at wit, and devotion to stylish dressing are very subordinate.

"Let the young people see that they are marrying for a long period, that in such circumstances flashy and assumed characteristics are negligible; that they must keep watch against too great a play of mere beauty and vivacity upon the emotions in opposition to more worthy characteristics, for there is a very slight chance for reason after love actually exists."

NO SUGAR COMPROMISE.

Trial Of Trust Dissolution Suit To Be Resumed.

New York.—If there were ever any negotiations between the Department of Justice and the American Sugar Refining Company, as rumored, for a compromise in the government suit to dissolve the company as an illegal combination, they appear to have failed. "I have no negotiations on with the Attorney General," said James M. Beck, general counsel for the corporation. "We expect to resume taking testimony in the action at an early date."

12 KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION.

Disaster Occurs In Rock Castle Colliery In Alabama.

Birmingham, Ala.—Twelve men, five whites and seven negroes, were killed in an explosion in the Rock Castle mine of the Davis Creek Coal Company, 35 miles south of Birmingham, in Tuscaloosa county. More than 200 men were at work in the mine when the explosion occurred. All but 12 got out of the workings before the afterdamp affected them seriously. The explosion is believed to have been of gas origin, igniting dust in the mine.

LUNACY TEST FOR DOVENER.

Former West Virginia Congressman In Failing Health.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Application was made in the Circuit Court of Ohio county for a lunacy commission for Capt. Blackburn B. Dovener, who represented the First West Virginia district in Congress from 1894 until 1904, and was for five terms a member of the Rivers and Harbors Committee. Captain Dovener's health has been failing for a number of years, according to his wife, who made the application.

BANK'S DOORS CLOSED.

First National Of Superior, Neb., Ordered To Suspend.

Superior, Neb.—The First National Bank of Superior did not open for business Friday, the doors being closed at the orders of the Comptroller of the Currency, according to announcement of President C. E. Adams. The cause of the closing of the institution is not definitely known. The bank, according to the last statement, had a capital stock of $60,000 with surplus and profits bringing this up to $72,000.

MUNICIPAL STORE IN CHICAGO.

City Plans To Sell Necessities To the Poor At Cost.

Chicago. — A municipal "general store," at which persons with limited funds may purchase the necessities of life, probably will be established in Chicago in the near future. Council finance committee set aside $25,000 in the city's 1914 budget for the "unemployed commission," which will have charge of the city store.

HAWTHORNE CHARGES FALSE.

Criticism Of Atlanta Prison Declared Without Foundation.

Washington. — Julian Hawthorne's charges against the management of the Atlanta Penitentiary were not sustained in a report of a special investigation by Dr. A. J. McKelway, submitted to Attorney General McReynolds. Allegations by Hawthorne and Representative Howard involving Warden Moyer, his rules and discipline were declared to be without good foundation.

SOUTHERN SOCIETY DINES.

Midwinter Banquet Brilliant Affair. Nearly 1,000 Members Present.

New York.—The first midwinter banquet of the Southern Society, held at the Waldorf, was a brilliant affair. Nearly 1,000 members, their families and guests attended the function. During the dinner McCall Lanham, the baritone, rendered several popular selections, while Miss Bettie Lee delighted the diners with her soprano voice. After the dinner was over everybody went to the main ballroom, where dancing was going on at midnight.

FOR EUGENIC MARRIAGES.

Massachusetts' State Board Sends Bill To Legislature.

Boston.—A bill designed to promote eugenic marriages, the first of its kind ever proposed in this State, was sent to the Legislature by the State Board of Health and Insanity. It aims to amend the marriage law by a provision that a person suffering from a communicable disease shall not be capable of contracting marriage.

DECIDES THAW IS NOT INSANE

Commission Finds He Would Not Be a Public Menace.

SAFE TO GRANT HIM BAIL.

Report Of Commission Appointed By Federal Judge Aldrich Completes Its Inquiry and Turns Over Report.

Concord, N. H.—Harry Kendall Thaw would not be a public menace if he were released on bail, according to the report of the commission appointed by Federal Judge Aldrich to inquire into the state of Thaw's mentality. The report of the commission finds Thaw is not now afflicted with any of the mental diseases from which he was suffering when he slew Stanford White.

The finding was announced Sunday. While the commissioners say that they have reached "a definite and positive opinion as to the present mental condition of Thaw and his probable state of mind at the time of the homicide," they refrain from expressing this opinion in view of their instructions from the court not to "embarrass any subsequent litigation where the broad question of insanity might be involved."

"Upon the question of menace or danger through the granting of bail, we may, however, be permitted and probably are compelled," concludes the report, "to record our finding that, whatever may have been the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw at the time of the homicide, upon which question we express no opinion, he is not now suffering from any of the forms of mental disease alleged by the prosecution at the time of the trials or subsequently thereto, namely, maniac, depressive insanity, paranoia, dementia, praecox, or delusional insanity. In our opinion, it is reasonably probable that Harry Kendall Thaw's liberty under bail would not be dangerous or a menace to the public peace and safety."

SAYS FAREWELL TO SONNY SOOTH

President Wilson Gives a Popular Reception.

PARTY OFF FOR WASHINGTON

The President Appreciative Of the Rest the Mississipians Have Allowed Him—An Old Confederate.

Pass Christian, Miss.—Nearly 2,000 residents of this region paid their respects to President Wilson at a public reception given especially for them at the Presidential cottage just before his departure for Washington. Guests were welcomed by the President and Mrs. Wilson, who stood on the cottage veranda in the warm, bright sunshine. Mr. Wilson apparently enjoyed the occasion immensely, greeting with a cordial smile those who shook hands. Incidentally, it was the first reception under the present administration.

The president is highly appreciative of the manner in which the residents have scrupulously observed his desire for seclusion and rest, and it was in recognition of their courtesy that he tendered the reception before his departure to Washington.

Automobiles, carriages, rickety traps, crude farm wagons, dust-covered saddle horses and crowded trolley cars brought eager people to the reception. Pretty girls, aged Confederate veterans in gray uniforms, mothers carrying their babies, and little children by the score crowded into line and passed up the steps to meet the President. A picturesque figure among those who shook hands with the President was Gen. A. C. Oxford, of Birmingham, Ala., who wore a resplendent Confederate uniform. He left his card with the President. On the reverse side of the card appeared these words:

"If I ever disown, repudiate or apologize for the cause for which Lee fought and Jackson died let the lightnings of Heaven rend me."

Then there was Aunt Lucy Marshall, an ante-bellum negress, garbed in a wonderful flowing white sunbonnet. She is 95 years old. For weeks she has been talking about meeting the President. And she was not to be denied despite the fact that it was generally accepted that the reception was strictly for the white residents of the section. Aunt Lucy carried a picture of herself, neatly framed in a white frame, which she insisted on giving him. The old negress was applauded to the echo by the crowd on the lawn as she bowed low in an ancient courtesy to the President and Mrs. Wilson.

Standing in the receiving line with the President and Mrs. Wilson were Misses Margaret and Eleanor Wilson, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, Misses Lucy and Mary Smith, of New Orleans, house guests at the President's cottage, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N.

WOMEN TO SIT AS JUDGES.

To Hear Cases Of Girls In St. Louis Juvenile Court.

St. Louis, Mo.—Two women hereafter will act as judges in the Juvenile Court when girls are on trial. This was announced by Circuit Judge Hennings. The women designated for the work are Miss Catherine Dunn and Mrs. E. C. Runge, both attaches of the court. Judge Hennings' decision was a result of the trial of four girls who had run away from home. The girls refused to discuss the case freely in the presence of the judge.

DREW SLIPS FOR FORTUNE.

Springfield (Ohio) Heirs Split $4,000,000 Estate That Way.

Springfield, Ohio.—Drawing numbered slips out of a box was the method used to divide the $4,000,000 estate of the late Ross P. Mitchell, real estate owner, among his three daughters. The heirs could not agree on a division, so appraisers numbered the property and the drawing was made.

THAW HEARINGS END.

Commission To Report On His Sanity In Few Days.

Concord, N. H.—Hearings before the commission appointed by the United States Court to determine whether the release of Harry K. Thaw on bail would endanger public safety, were concluded here, and three members of the commission went to Boston to consult their colleagues. It is expected that the findings of the commission will be filed with Federal Judge Aldrich within a few days.

GEN. VILLA'S BIG VICTORY

Gen. Mercado Surrenders to U. S. Army Officers.

SEVERE BLOW DEALT HUERTA

The Federals Forced To Yield Because Of Lack Of Ammunition—Most Of Federals On the American Side.

Presidio, Texas.—The Mexican federal army, with its nine generals, evacuated Ojinaga, Mexico, after six hours of fighting. The triumphant rebel forces under General Francisco Villa immediately occupied the town.

General Salvador Mercado, who was Huerta's chief military commander, crossed the river and surrendered to Major McNamee, of the United States Army.

It was impossible for Major McNamee to learn what had become of the federals, whether the bulk of them had taken refuge on this side or whether they scattered to points in Mexico. The country about Ojinaga is mostly desert with little to sustain.

Later General Mercado sent over seven wagon loads of government documents under the escort of a wounded lieutenant, who also brought his personal effects.

The wagons were pulled out of the river and taken into the United States Army camp.

The defeat of the federal army followed only a few hours fighting in which the rebels, beginning at sundown, started to close in on the besieged garrison with a cannon and rifle fire.

General Castro and General Mercado of the federal regulars saw that the asault was to be nothing less than a massacre. The federals had left only 50 rounds of ammunition for each man. Generals Castro and Mercado therefore gave the order to evacuate.

All the federal soldiers and their officers who could scramble to the American side did so. The others ran in all rections. Gen. Pascual Orozco, commander of federal volunteers, threatened with summary execution by Villa, was the first to cross. It was believed he had escaped into the mountains of Texas.

Major McNamee, commanding the United States patrol, immediately called out all the cavalrymen to meet an emergency. Women, children and wounded soldiers had been crossing in numbers, but the apparent advance of the rebels turned to the very heart of the federal garrison, gave reason to believe a greater rush across the border was imminent.

POURS SERUM INTO BRAIN.

Holes Bored Through Skull To Treat Paresis.

Philadelphia.—A remarkable operation, the first of its kind in this country, was performed here at St. Mary's Hospital. It consisted of the direct application of serum to a diseased brain through holes bored in the skull of the patient and marks the latest daring step in medical science in the treatment of a cerebral disease heretofor considered incurable. The patient, a man 51 years old, was suffering from paresis. The operation was performed by Dr. Ellwood R. Kirby, assisted by Drs. Leo Wejczynski, George Kieffer, Edward Murphy and Robley D. Snively.

INSPIRED TO KILL WILSON.

Man Who "Heard Voices" Gives Himself Up In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia. — After surrendering himself to Chief Postal Inspector Cortelyou in the Federal Building, Joseph Gorman, 24 years old, told the inspector he had a feeling that he must kill President Wilson and wanted to be committed to safe keeping. The man said he had been in the Philadelphia Hospital and after his release he had "ringing in his ears" and "heard voices," which told him to "kill the President." After being examined by the police surgeon he was declared insane and committed to the Philadelphia Hospital.

PREPARING TO RECEIVE EARL.

Official Washington To Give Him a Warm Welcome.

Washington.—Elaborate plans are being made for the entertainment of the Earl of Kintora, chairman of the Anglo-American Peace Celebration. On Thursday the Earl will be the guest of the British Ambassador at luncheon. In the evening he will be the guest of honor at a dinner attended by representative men in the business and official life of Washington. On Friday evening the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan will receive in his honor at the Pan-American Union Building.

TAFT 80 POUNDS LIGHTER.

Ex-President Has Tailor "Take a Reef" in 35 Pair Of Trousers.

New Haven, Conn.—Loss of weight has compelled former President William H. Taft to have his garments modeled on less generous lines. He gave to a local journeyman tailor an order for changes to be made in 35 pairs of trousers. Professor Taft has reduced his weight 80 pounds and his waist line has contracted six inches.

JACK ROSE GIVES UP FARMING.

Former New York Gambler Tires Of Rural Life.

South Norwalk, Conn.—Jack Rose, the former New York gambler and Rosenthal witness, has given up the merry life of a farmer, saying that the name is a misnomer. He sold his farm near here, and with his family has taken up his residence at the Westport Hotel. Mr. Rose is now lecturing on the underworld and intends to write a book on the expose of the graft and gambling game in New York city.

THOUSANDS OF JAPANESE PERISH

Earthquakes Accompany Volcanic Eruption.

350 SEISMIC SHOCKS IN A DAY

Tremendous Upheaval Of Nature In Southern Japan—Decks Of Vessels Carrying Refugees Covered With Stones and Lava.

RECORD OF DISASTERS.

May, 1902—St. Pierre, Martinique. Earthquake and eruption of Mount Pelee; 40,000 killed.

1905—Northern India; 35,000 killed.

April, 1906—San Francisco and adjacent towns. Nearly 300 killed. Estimated loss, $250,000,000.

August, 1906 — Valparaiso, Chili. Estimated 500 killed. Estimated loss, $50,000,000.

January, 1907 — Kingston, Jamaica. Over 2,000 killed. Estimated loss, $15,000,000.

June, 1907 — Tsing-kiang, China; 4,000 killed.

October, 1907—Karatagh, in Russian Turwestan; 1,500 killed.

March, 1908 — Chilpancingo, Coatepec, Conception and Tetilla, in Mexico, destroyed; 100 to 300 killed.

December 28, 1908—Messina, Catania, Riggio and other towns in Italy; 200,000 killed. Property loss, $1,000,000,000.

1910—Sardinia, largest Island in Mediterranean, except Sicily, devastated; 100 lives lost.

Tokio, Japan.—A tidal wave added its terrors to the earthquakes and volcanic eruptions which struck Kagoshima, in Southern Japan, according to late official advices.

It is believed here that the Kagoshima disaster will prove to be one of the most serious in the history of Japan. The loss of life and property increases with fuller news from the scene.

The reports estimate that from 1,000 to 5,000 people perished. The volcano Sakina-Juna, on the Island of Sakina, continues to emit streams of lava and showers of stone.

The full extent of the disaster could not be ascertained, as all communication was cut off from the stricken district south of Kumainoto, 80 or 90 miles north of Kagoshima. The Navy Department was unable to obtain a wireless report from the warships sent to the scene, although many messages were dispatched to them.

Ashes to the depth of six inches have fallen in the seaport of Miyazaki, on the east coast of Kiushiu.

A postal employe who fled from Kagoshima states that the big postoffice building there collapsed during the earthquakes and tidal wave and that a great number of residences were ruined, while many people and animals were killed or injured.

A wireless dispatch from the Japanese cruiser Tone reports the arrival of the cruiser and destroyers at Kagoshima. The eruption of Sakura-Jima continues "with great violence, ashes falling on the warships." According to the message, Kagoshima has been evacuated by the inhabitants, but the troops remain.

Other mountains in the Island of Kiushiu showing extreme activity include Aso, Kirishima, Takakuma and Dusen, and the greatest consternation prevails throughout the Island.

Miyazaki, capital of the province of the same name, and the fortified city of Kumamoto, 35 miles east of Nagasaki, are believed to be in great danger.

BOY BURNED TO DEATH.

House Destroyed By Fire While Child's Parents Were Away.

Hagerstown, Md.—Fire destroyed the residence of Charles Uttsey, near Clevenburg, while Mr. and Mrs. Uttsey were away from home, and their four-year-old son perished in the flames. Returning home at night from Shippensburg, they found the house in ashes. Their little daughter, who was in the house when the fire broke out and who was badly burned while attempting to escape, stated that an overheated stove caused the fire, which spread so rapidly that she was unable to save her little brother.

PUBLICITY LAW CONSTRUED.

Only Bona Fide Paid-For Circulation To Be Counted.

Washington.—The manner in which publishers are to arrive at the daily circulation of newspapers in order to make reports required by the Publicity law enacted by Congress in 1912 has been set forth in an opinion rendered by Attorney-General McReynolds to Postmaster-General Burleson. The reports, according to the Attorney-General must cover the whole bona fide paid circulation, whether sold over the counter, distributed through news agencies or disposed of in other ways. Copies actually paid for by news agents, reporting the number delivered, less the number returned unsold, are to be counted.

GERMAN WOMEN WANT VOTE.

Petition Asking For Suffrage Introduced Into Parliament.

Berlin.—A petition asking that the franchise be given to women and that they be allowed to vote at the elections for the Imperial Parliament and also to sit as Deputies was introduced into the Imperial Parliament by the German Woman's Suffrage Union. It was not directly rejected, but was referred to the consideration of the Government without any recommendation.

Prof. Johnson Would Combine Eugenics and Romance.

STEP TOWARD BETTER RACE.

At Battle Creek Conference He Unfolds Plan—Would Not Go So Far As to Eliminate Romance.

Battle Creek, Mich.—Marriage selection, education for race betterment, aspecially along lines of eugenics, and the dependent child were some of the principal topics of discussion at the closing session of the national conference on race betterment. Among the speakers were Prof. Roswell Hill Johnson, of the University of Pittsburgh; Prof. Winfield Scott Hall, of Northwestern University, and Dr. Gertrude E. Hall, of the State Board of Charities of New York.

Professor Johnson urged the widest possible range of acquaintance for young people, claiming that the school and church do not offer sufficient advantages in that respect. He suggested the municipal dance hall as a beneficial step in that direction. Eugenics seek improvements in both mental and physical racial qualities of future generations, he said.

"Eugenics does not eliminate romance," continued Professor Johnson. "We Eugenists believe romance should be retained.

"Through the past romance has proved a good thing. In fact, we believe that it has been a powerful factor in the building up of the most valuable traits in man's evolution.

"Most people believe we are attempting to produce the perfect physical baby. Physical perfection has a certain importance, of course. But physically perfect babies may be found frequently with inferior minds. Eugenics seeks the improvement in racial qualities both mental and physical in future generations of men. By racial, we mean inheritable qualities.

Selection Of Mates.

"The superior stock we have is marrying at an alarmingly low rate. In order to advance this rate, which must be done, it is necessary to promote the following agencies:

"Let young persons of both sexes be educated together, as they now are in many institutions.

"Let parents interest themselves in furthering the acquaintance of eligible friends of opposite sex, though without throwing the young people together too obviously and thus nullifying the advantage.

"Let the young people be impressed with the thought that marriage is their ideal and normal goal of life and let all cynical and pessimistic views of marriage be opposed.

"Above all things, let young people have the widest range of acquaintance possible.

Beauty Not All.

"Teach the young man that mere physical beauty, except insofar as it indicates physical well-being, trivial mental qualities such as vivacity and a forced and feeble attempt at wit, and devotion to stylish dressing are very subordinate.

"Let the young people see that they are marrying for a long period, that in such circumstances flashy and assumed characteristics are negligible; that they must keep watch against too great a play of mere beauty and vivacity upon the emotions in opposition to more worthy characteristics, for there is a very slight chance for reason after love actually exists."

SOUTHERN SOCIETY DINES.

Midwinter Banquet Brilliant Affair. Nearly 1,000 Members Present.

New York.—The first midwinter banquet of the Southern Society, held at the Waldorf, was a brilliant affair. Nearly 1,000 members, their families and guests attended the function. DECIDES THAW IS NOT INSANE

Commission Finds He Would Not Be a Public Menace.

SAFE TO GRANT HIM BAIL.

Report Of Commission Appointed By Federal Judge Aldrich Completes Its Inquiry and Turns Over Report.

Concord, N. H.—Harry Kendall Thaw would not be a public menace if he were released on bail, according to the report of the commission appointed by Federal Judge Aldrich to inquire into the state of Thaw's mentality. The report of the commission finds Thaw is not now afflicted with any of the mental diseases from which he was suffering when he slew Stanford White.

The finding was announced Sunday. While the commissioners say that they have reached "a definite and positive opinion as to the present mental condition of Thaw and his probable state of mind at the time of the homicide," they refrain from expressing this opinion in view of their instructions from the court not to "embarrass any subsequent litigation where the broad question of insanity might be involved."

"Upon the question of menace or danger through the granting of bail, we may, however, be permitted and probably are compelled," concludes the report, "to record our finding that, whatever may have been the mental condition of Harry K. Thaw at the time of the homicide, upon which question we express no opinion, he is not now suffering from any of the forms of mental disease alleged by the prosecution at the time of the trials or subsequently thereto, namely, maniac, depressive insanity, paranoia, dementia, praecox, or delusional insanity. In our opinion, it is reasonably probable that Harry Kendall Thaw's liberty under bail would not be dangerous or a menace to the public peace and safety."

NO SUGAR COMPROMISE.

Trial Of Trust Dissolution Suit To Be Resumed.

New York.—If there were ever any negotiations between the Department of Justice and the American Sugar Refining Company, as rumored, for a compromise in the government suit to dissolve the company as an illegal combination, they appear to have failed. "I have no negotiations on with the Attorney General," said James M. Beck, general counsel for the corporation. "We expect to resume taking testimony in the action at an early date."

12 KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION.

Disaster Occurs In Rock Castle Colliery In Alabama.

Birmingham, Ala.—Twelve men, five whites and seven negroes, were killed in an explosion in the Rock Castle mine of the Davis Creek Coal Company, 35 miles south of Birmingham, in Tuscaloosa county. More than 200 men were at work in the mine when the explosion occurred. All but 12 got out of the workings before the afterdamp affected them seriously. The explosion is believed to have been of gas origin, igniting dust in the mine.

SAYS FAREWELL TO SUNNY SOUTH

President Wilson Gives a Popular Reception.

PARTY OFF FOR WASHINGTON

The President Appreciative Of the Rest the Mississipians Have Allowed Him—An Old Confederate.

Pass Christian, Miss.—Nearly 2,000 residents of this region paid their respects to President Wilson at a public reception given especially for them at the Presidential cottage just before his departure for Washington. Guests were welcomed by the President and Mrs. Wilson, who stood on the cottage veranda in the warm, bright sunshine. Mr. Wilson apparently enjoyed the occasion immensely, greeting with a cordial smile those who shook hands. Incidentally, it was the first reception under the present administration.

The president is highly appreciative of the manner in which the residents have scrupulously observed his desire for seclusion and rest, and it was in recognition of their courtesy that he tendered the reception before his departure to Washington.

Automobiles, carriages, rickety traps, crude farm wagons, dust-covered saddle horses and crowded trolley cars brought eager people to the reception. Pretty girls, aged Confederate veterans in gray uniforms, mothers carrying their babies, and little children by the score crowded into line and passed up the steps to meet the President. A picturesque figure among those who shook hands with the President was Gen. A. C. Oxford, of Birmingham, Ala., who wore a resplendent Confederate uniform. He left his card with the President. On the reverse side of the card appeared these words:

"If I ever disown, repudiate or apologize for the cause for which Lee fought and Jackson died let the lightnings of Heaven rend me."

Then there was Aunt Lucy Marshall, an ante-bellum negress, garbed in a wonderful flowing white sunbonnet. She is 95 years old. For weeks she has been talking about meeting the President. And she was not to be denied despite the fact that it was generally accepted that the reception was strictly for the white residents of the section. Aunt Lucy carried a picture of herself, neatly framed in a white frame, which she insisted on giving him. The old negress was applauded to the echo by the crowd on the lawn as she bowed low in an ancient courtesy to the President and Mrs. Wilson.

Standing in the receiving line with the President and Mrs. Wilson were Misses Margaret and Eleanor Wilson, Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, Misses Lucy and Mary Smith, of New Orleans, house guests at the President's cottage, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson, U. S. N.

WOMEN TO SIT AS JUDGES.

To Hear Cases Of Girls In St. Louis Juvenile Court.

St. Louis, Mo.—Two women hereafter will act as judges in the Juvenile Court when girls are on trial. This was announced by Circuit Judge Hennings. The women designated for the work are Miss Catherine Dunn and Mrs. E. C. Runge, both attaches of the court. Judge Hennings' decision was a result of the trial of four girls who had run away from home. The girls refused to discuss the case freely in the presence of the judge.

DREW SLIPS FOR FORTUNE.

Springfield (Ohio) Heirs Split $4,000,000 Estate That Way.

Springfield, Ohio.—Drawing numbered slips out of a box was the method used to divide the $4,000,000 estate of the late Ross P. Mitchell, real estate owner, among his three daughters. The heirs could not agree on a division, so appraisers numbered the property and the drawing was made.

THAW HEARINGS END.

Commission To Report On His Sanity In Few Days.

Concord, N. H.—Hearings before the commission appointed by the United States Court to determine whether the release of Harry K. Thaw on bail would endanger public safety, were concluded here, and three members of the commission went to Boston to consult their colleagues. It is expected that the findings of the commission will be filed with Federal Judge Aldrich within a few days.

GEN. VILLA'S BIG VICTORY

Gen. Mercado Surrenders to U. S. Army Officers.

SEVERE BLOW DEALT HUERTA

The Federals Forced To Yield Because Of Lack Of Ammunition—Most Of Federals On the American Side.

Presidio, Texas.—The Mexican federal army, with its nine generals, evacuated Ojinaga, Mexico, after six hours of fighting. The triumphant rebel forces under General Francisco Villa immediately occupied the town.

General Salvador Mercado, who was Huerta's chief military commander, crossed the river and surrendered to Major McNamee, of the United States Army.

It was impossible for Major McNamee to learn what had become of the federals, whether the hulk of them had taken refuge on this side or whether they scattered to points in Mexico. The country about Ojinaga is mostly desert with little to sustain.

Later General Mercado sent over seven wagon loads of government documents under the escort of a wounded lieutenant, who also brought his personal effects.

The wagons were pulled out of the river and taken into the United States Army camp.

The defeat of the federal army followed only a few hours fighting in which the rebels, beginning at sundown, started to close in on the besieged garrison with a cannon and rifle fire.

General Castro and General Mercado of the federal regulars saw that the assault was to be nothing less than a massacre. The federals had left only 50 rounds of ammunition for each man. Generals Castro and Mercado therefore gave the order to evacuate.

All the federal soldiers and their officers who could scramble to the American side did so. The others ran in all rections. Gen. Pascual Orozco, commander of federal volunteers, threatened with summary execution by Villa, was the first to cross. It was believed he had escaped into the mountains of Texas.

Major McNamee, commanding the United States patrol, immediately called out all the cavalrymen to meet an emergency. Women, children and wounded soldiers had been crossing in numbers, but the apparent advance of the rebels turned to the very heart of the federal garrison, gave reason to believe a greater rush across the border was imminent.

POURS SERUM INTO BRAIN.

Holes Bored Through Skull To Treat Paresis.

Philadelphia.—A remarkable operation, the first of its kind in this country, was performed here at St. Mary's Hospital. It consisted of the direct application of serum to a diseased brain through holes bored in the skull of the patient and marks the latest daring step in medical science in the treatment of a cerebral disease heretofor considered incurable. The patient, a man 51 years old, was suffering from paresis. The operation was performed by Dr. Ellwood R. Kirby, assisted by Drs. Leo Wejczynski, George Kieffer, Edward Murphy and Robley D. Snively.

INSPIRED TO KILL WILSON.

Man Who "Heard Voices" Gives Himself Up In Philadelphia.

Philadelphia. — After surrendering himself to Chief Postal Inspector Cortelyou in the Federal Building, Joseph Gorman, 24 years old, told the inspector he had a feeling that he must kill President Wilson and wanted to be committed to safe keeping. The man said he had been in the Philadelphia Hospital and after his release he had "ringing in his ears" and "heard voices," which told him to "kill the President." After being examined by the police surgeon he was declared insane and committed to the Philadelphia Hospital.

PREPARING TO RECEIVE EARL.

Official Washington To Give Him a Warm Welcome.

Washington.—Elaborate plans are being made for the entertainment of the Earl of Kintora, chairman of the Anglo-American Peace Celebration. On Thursday the Earl will be the guest of the British Ambassador at luncheon. In the evening he will be the guest of honor at a dinner attended by representative men in the business and official life of Washington. On Friday evening the Secretary of State and Mrs. Bryan will receive in his honor at the Pan-American Union Building.

TAFT 80 POUNDS LIGHTER.

Ex-President Has Tailor "Take a Reef" In 35 Pair Of Trousers.

New Haven, Conn.—Loss of weight has compelled former President William H. Taft to have his garments modeled on less generous lines. He gave to a local journeyman tailor an order for changes to be made in 35 pairs of trousers. Professor Taft has reduced his weight 80 pounds and his waist line has contracted six inches.

JACK ROSE GIVES UP FARMING.

Former New York Gambler Tires Of Rural Life.

South Norwalk, Conn.—Jack Rose, the former New York gambler and Rosenthal witness, has given up the merry life of a farmer, saying that the name is a misnomer. He sold his farm near here, and with his family has taken up his residence at the Westport Hotel. Mr. Rose is now lecturing on the underworld and intends to write a book on the expose of the graft and gambling game in New York city.

THOUSANDS OF JAPANESE PERISH

Earthquakes Accompany Volcanic Eruption.

350 SEISMIC SHOCKS IN A DAY

Tremendous Upheaval Of Nature In Southern Japan—Decks Of Vessels Carrying Refugees Covered With Stones and Lava.

RECORD OF DISASTERS.

May, 1902—St. Pierre, Martinique. Earthquake and eruption of Mount Pelee; 40,000 killed.

1905—Northern India; 35,000 killed.

April, 1906—San Francisco and adjacent towns. Nearly 300 killed. Estimated loss, $250,000,000.

August, 1906 — Valparaiso, Chili. Estimated 500 killed. Estimated loss, $50,000,000.

January, 1907 — Kingston, Jamaica. Over 2,000 killed. Estimated loss, $15,000,000.

June, 1907 — Tsing-kiang, China; 4,000 killed.

October, 1907—Karatagh, in Russian Turwestan; 1,500 killed.

March, 1908 — Chilpancingo, Coatepec, Conception and Tetillia, in Mexico, destroyed; 100 to 300 killed.

December 28, 1908—Messina, Catania, Riggio and other towns in Italy; 200,000 killed. Property loss, $1,000,000,000.

1910—Sardinia, largest island in Mediterranean, except Sicily, devastated; 100 lives lost.

Tokio, Japan.—A tidal wave added its terrors to the earthquakes and volcanic eruptions which struck Kagoshima, in Southern Japan, according to late official advices.

It is believed here that the Kagoshima disaster will prove to be one of the most serious in the history of Japan. The loss of life and property increases with fuller news from the scene.

The reports estimate that from 1,000 to 5,000 people perished. The volcano Sakina-Juna, on the island of Sakina, continues to emit streams of lava and showers of stone.

The full extent of the disaster could not be ascertained, as all communication was cut off from the stricken district south of Kumamoto, 80 or 90 miles north of Kagoshima. The Navy Department was unable to obtain a wireless report from the warships sent to the scene, although many messages were dispatched to them.

Ashes to the depth of six inches have fallen in the seaport of Miyazaki, on the east coast of Kiushiu.

A postal employe who fled from Kagoshima states that the big postoffice building there collapsed during the earthquakes and tidal wave and that a great number of residences were ruined, while many people and animals were killed or injured.

A wireless dispatch from the Japanese cruiser Tone reports the arrival of the cruiser and destroyers at Kagoshima. The eruption of Sakura-Jima continues "with great violence, ashes falling on the warships." According to the message, Kagoshima has been evacuated by the inhabitants, but the troops remain.

Other mountains in the Island of Kiushiu showing extreme activity include Aso, Kirishima, Takakuma and Dusen, and the greatest consternation prevails throughout the island.

Miyazaki, capital of the province of the same name, and the fortified city of Kumamoto, 75 miles east of Nagasaki, are believed to be in great danger.

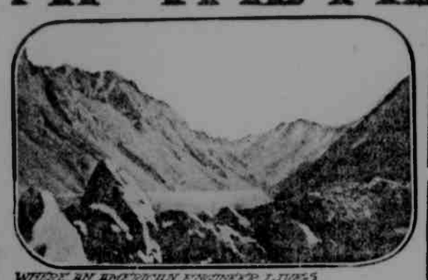
BOY BURNED TO DEATH.

House Destroyed By Fire While Child's Parents Were Away.

Hagerstown, Md.—Fire destroyed the residence of Charles Uttsey, near Clevenburg, while Mr. and Mrs. Uttsey were away from home, and their four-year-old son perished in the flames. Returning home at night from Shippensburg, they found the house in ashes. Their little daughter, who was in the house when the fire broke out and who was badly burned while attempting to escape, stated that an overheated stove caused the fire, which spread so rapidly that she was unable to save her little brother.

PUBLICITY LAW CONSTRUED.

Only Bona Fide Paid For Circulation To Be Counted.

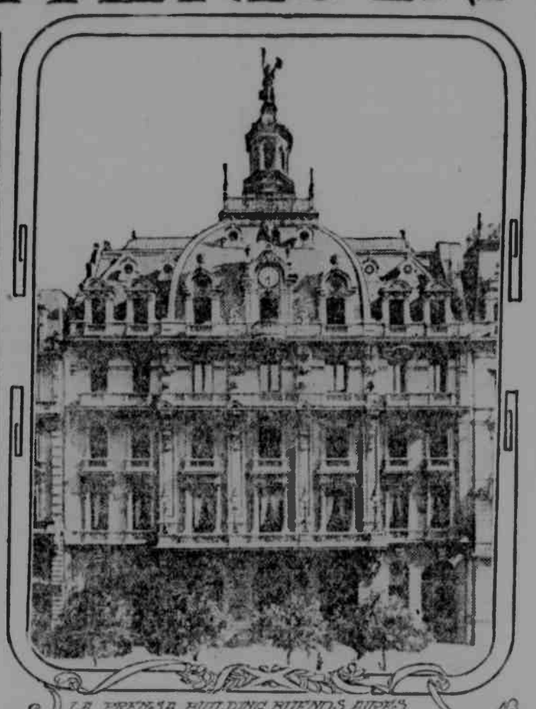


Washington.—The manner in which publishers are to arrive at the daily circulation of newspapers in order to make reports required by the Publicity law enacted by Congress in 1912 has been set forth in an opinion rendered by Attorney-General McReynolds to Postmaster-General Burleson. The reports, according to the Attorney-General must cover the whole bona fide paid circulation, whether sold over the counter, distributed through news agencies or disposed of in other ways. Copies actually paid for by news agents, reporting the number delivered, less the number returned unsold, are to be counted.

GERMAN WOMEN WANT VOTE.

Petition Asking For Suffrage Introducsd Into Parliament.

Berlin.—A petition asking that the franchise be given to women and that they be allowed to vote at the elections for the Imperial Parliament and also to sit as Deputies was introduced into the Imperial Parliament by the German Woman's Suffrage Union. It was not directly rejected, but was referred to the consideration of the government without any recommendation.



AT THE HEMISPHERE'S END

WHERE AN AMERICAN ENGINEER LIVES

BOTANICAL GARDENS AT RIO DE JENEIRO

LA PRIMAR BUILDING BUENOS AIRES

LAGUNA DEL INCA, ANDES

IF you crave the unusual it may be encountered in South America as in few other lands. But before visiting that part of the world make sure you are well supplied with money and in a mood to put up with more or less discomfort and inconvenience; for the exceptional will be your portion in this line as well as in others," says Frederic S. Isham, author and globe trotter, in the Detroit Free Press.

"South America is a land of magnificent distances, also of surprises, some of which are not exactly welcome, although on the whole it is a very interesting part of the world," said Mr. Isham, recounting some of the experiences that befell them on the trip. "You are constantly running on to the unexpected, so that there is no danger of being wearied by lack of variety.

"We met one man who has the most trying position of which I know. He's an American—a big, broad shouldered, athletic chap, with the polish of a university man and the breezy openhearted manner of a true westerner.

"He is an engineer, and it is his duty to see that the Chilean division of the Trans-Andean railroad is kept free from land and snow slides.

"That doesn't sound so bad, does it, because you can have no conception of what it means unless you have seen the country. The Trans-Andean railroad is a third rail system in the strictest sense of the word. That third rail is located between the narrow gauge strips of steel on which the cars travel, and is a cogged affair into which teeth on the driving wheels of the locomotive slip, giving sufficient grip to pull the heavy trains up the almost perpendicular course.

"On the Chilean side of the Andes it is a case of climbing almost every foot of the way, and at times it seems as though the locomotive must tail backward on the cars that follow.

"This chap lives in a little stone house close by Inca lake, in the Andes, 12,000 feet above sea level. He has a gang of natives under him, and at certain seasons of the year they are kept on the jump battling with snow slides, which bury the tracks so deep that it requires days of the hardest kind of work to clear them.

"Then the mountains have a playful habit of casting off a good big slice of rock and dirt, which comes tumbling down across the tracks and puts an end to travel until it has been removed.

"Sometimes these pranks result seriously, and there's many a lonely grave along the right of way to indicate the last resting place of some poor section man who was buried beneath a slide. Last winter a few square acres of snow and rock and ice came crashing down on a crew that were endeavoring to clear the tracks. Part of them escaped untouched and immediately began digging out their fellow workers. At the end of 26 hours they came upon a sorry figure—a battered section man who had borne the full brunt of the slide.

"And what do you think he did when they pulled him out, more dead than alive? Berated them for leaving him buried so long.

"'You're a fine lot,' he stormed, 'why, you left me in there two hours. It wasn't your fault that I didn't die.'

"And the hands on the clock had started on their third round trip since the slide went over him!

"The place this engineer calls home is one of the most Godforsaken spots I ever saw. They try to keep the road open the year round, but there are three of four months every winter when trains are few and far between, and the district is virtually cut off from the outside world.

"The scenery along the route is impressive—but somehow I didn't envy this particular American his job.

"Crossing the crest of the Andes and getting down to the Argentine plains you strike one of the widest gauge railroads in the world. Service on the line is not so bad—in some respects.

"They have single and double compartment cars for male and female passengers. It was my ill fortune to draw a seat in a double compartment with three Spaniards. Now, they are not exactly the traveling companions you would select for a 24-hour ride across the plains, a journey that is trying under the most favorable conditions.

"They are passionately fond of onions of a particularly rank variety. Without exception they smoke cigarettes that make burning rubber reminiscent of attar of roses. Most of them are affected with bronchial trouble. They detest fresh air. Also they never have acquired a liking for a cold plunge before breakfast—or a bath any other time, for that matter. When I was ready to enter the train three of the most disreputable representatives of their species were settled comfortably in the compartment. Delightful prospect.

"Just about that time I had the good fortune to run into an American engineer who was on his way to Buenos Aires. He had the same luck as I—three of the unwashed in his compartment. Fortunately he was able to talk some Spanish.

"'Let's bribe the guard and see if we can't get a compartment to ourselves,' I suggested.

"No sooner said than tried. Presently my newfound friend came back. We had with our train a virtuous guard. Offered five dollars to effect the desired change he spurned the tender with a fine display of indignation. He could not be hired—for such a paltry sum. But for ten dollars he would throw the dirty rascals out, bag and baggage.

"Gladly I contributed the other half of the bribe. Soon baggage began to fly out on the platform, followed by a jabbering trio, who made the Argentine sky blue with picturesque profanity as they protested against this summary ejectment.

"They produced tickets to show they were entitled to seats in this particular compartment. The guard, in his most imperious manner, informed them that he cared not what their tickets called for. Did not he have the official chart of the train? And did it not show that this particular compartment belonged to the two distinguished American travelers? Out with such dogs as they. And out they went.

"I never learned what became of them. The next morning when we left the train at Buenos Aires three ugly looking Spaniards glared at us as they trudged by with their baggage—but we cared not. All the way across the plains we had a compartment to ourselves, a double portion of bedding and every attention that the guard could bestow upon us.

"Even then there was sufficient discomfort. The rain came down in torrents throughout the entire trip. The roofs to the coaches leaked like a sieve, and some of the passengers who were fortunate enough to possess such an article found it expedient to sit under an umbrella. The dining car had a couple of inches of water on the floor and we found it necessary to wear rubbers when going in to our meals.

"Buenos Aires is an interesting seaport, with a wonderful waterfront and dock system. However, it is in some respects one of the deadest places imaginable.

"No respectable woman of the country is to be found in the innumerable cafes of an evening, for the reason that she would not be safe from insult. The only place of amusement where the young women of the city can go is the opera house, and this has only a brief season.

"As an example of up-to-date construction and equipment the railroad which runs from Santos to Sao Paulo, in Brazil, commands attention. It is doubtful if there is anything more complete anywhere on earth. The road is only 25 miles long, but so far as I could discover the only thing they overlooked in their endeavors to outstrip all others was to gild the telegraph poles and to use gold wires.

"The road impressed me so that I made some inquiries, and discovered the reason for this lavish expenditure. It seems that one of the terms under which the concession was granted was that all profits above 8 per cent. were to go to the government.

So far as I could discover there had been no appreciable decrease in the national debt from the government's share of the profits. It makes vast sums of money—but everything above the stipulated 8 per cent goes back into the enterprise.

"Evidently spending these earning so they will not fall into the hands of the government is a strenuous job and calls for no little ingenuity. There are gutters alongside the tracks to carry off the water. These are paved with small sections of stone, laid with mosaic precision. This feature alone, wholly unnecessary, must have cost a vast amount. And everything else is on the same extravagant scale.

"To crowd more thrills into a given length of time than you would have thought possible it is only necessary to hire a taxicab in Rio Janeiro. Here dare devilism finds its highest expression in the way the drivers of motor cars tear around.

"The drivers have a union of their own and they dictate things to suit themselves. Whenever one of them hits a pedestrian he throws on more power and races off, never waiting to see whether or not he killed his victim. And they hit them with frightful frequency. Every day the newspapers publish a brief summary of accidents of this nature, and I should say the average was around 20."

CO-OPERATION IN BIBLE TIMES

In common with many of the prophets of Bible times, Elijah, the man who placed Jeroboam over the ten tribes of Israel, was a rural man, W. A. Lippincott writes in the Kansas Industrialist. Elijah, who outwitted the brilliant and scheming Queen Jezebel, went about preaching in his shepherd's mantel and carrying the shepherd's staff as though proud of his country origin. Of Elisha, his successor, we are told that at the time when Elijah offered him a job as his helper he was plowing with 12 yoke of oxen. The fact that this is recorded we would interpret to mean that he was considered a skillful teamster.

When Saul first comes to our attention in the Old Testament, he was out on the range looking for his father's asses that had broken away from the picket or escaped the wrangler. Later we find him coming after the herd out of the field. David was a red headed farm boy called from his keeping the sheep to have Judge Samuel pass compliments upon him to his father and point out the great possibilities he saw in the boy.

The problems which confronted the people of the Old Testament and the questions involved in current legislation have just as modern a ring as has the eminent and great. One of the problems which they had solved and which we have not was that of co-operation among farmers. Another was the question of concentration in the ownership of land with its attendant evil, the absentee landlord.

You will not find the the subject of co-operation discussed as such in the Old Testament, perhaps, but you will find it put into practice.

So far as can be learned, there were no isolated farm houses where single families lived alone. As a general thing, a number of more or less related families united in forming a rural village. These were not cities in any sense, nor even small towns, but little hamlets set in the midst of the fields and hills. The country districts were dotted with these tiny villages, and we find constant reference to them throughout the Old and New Testaments.

Every morning the men went out to the fields to work and at night they came back to the village for shelter.

The reason for this gathering into villages was that the farmers were under the necessity of co-operating against the attacks of enemies from the desert and the surrounding countries. They co-operated just as the sturdy pioneers of our own early colonial days co-operated in the use of the stockade—because they had to. And the trend of the times seems to be that the farmers of today are co-operating more and more for the same reason—because they find they have to.

It's a case of self-preservation now as much as it was in Bible or early colonial times. The enemy is not the same save in the characteristic of being a common enemy. Then the necessity was military; now it is economic and social, but it is just as real.

And there are those who have studied this question deeply, who feel very certain that the time will come when the American farmers will again be gathered into farm villages, as the farmers of Germany have already gathered, under the pressure of economic necessity and as a part of a broad program of co-operation.

HERE'S THE SIMPLE LIFE.

The ocean for years was rich hunting ground for the lover of the picturesque, but changes both numerous and rapid have occurred there in recent years. The old negro types of the cotton fields are no more. The log cabins, the pine groves, even the stately plantation mansions, recalling the flowery days of "befo' de wah," are passing away. Fortunately for those who enjoy seeing life as it is lived where there is a real attachment to the soil, the French section of Canada is left us. Here along the lower St. Lawrence river one may find conditions exactly as they were a century ago. Here the "one-hoss shay," the pride of colonial days, is making its last stand. In the fields women may be seen cutting grain with sickles than which there is no implement more primitive. The people of the hamlets live and work as did their great grandparents. Picture to yourself a place where spinning is still an everyday task! I have sat in these simple homes, watching deft fingers at the spinning wheels and listening to their whirring sound that is like the hum or bees. It was in one of these old interiors that I photographed Grand'mere Trudeau. She sits looking from her cabin across the river, thinking of a son at sea.—Christian Herald.

Color Blind Never Haunted

Are you afraid of the dark? There isn't a chance of you seeing a ghost if you are color blind, which may furnish you a ray of comfort for the beauties of landscape and floral decorations you may have missed during your lifetime. Dr. Auguste Lummer, head of the physical institute of the University of Breslau, in Germany, is authority for this.

Dr. Lummer explains the phenomenon in this way:

"The normal eye has an arrangement of tiny rods and cones in the retina. The rods perceive light and the cones color. When a person with [illegible] dark place the cones, which are useless, interfere with the effective action of the rods, and the confusion creates the effect of apparitions that come and go and change their shapes. The color blind person lacks the cones and his rods act with extraordinary outline of things as long as there is the least amount of light present. That means that he never sees ghosts."

Preserved Memory of Friend.

Ten years ago Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., met his death by starvation while exploring that bleakest of lands, Labrador. His comrade on the trip, Dillon Wallace, who survived, recently went again to Labrador with a tablet as a memorial to his friend. In trying to reach the place where Hubbard died, his canoe upset and the tablet was lost. Wallace, however, persevered and finally carved this inscription on a bowlder: "Leonidas Hubbard, Jr., intrepid explorer and practical Christian, died here October 18, 1903. John xiv., fourth verse."

University of Today.

The true university of these days is a collection of books.—Carlyle.

EASY TO UNDERSTAND

WOMAN SOLVES PUZZLE THAT HAD CAUSED ARGUMENT.

Final Conclusion Was That Men Did Not Need to Attend Women's Meetings, Since Wives Would Tell Them All About It.

It was 11:45 p. m. The man and his wife had just come home. They did not come home together. They had not been to the same place. She had been to a meeting for women only, he to one for men.

Said the woman: "There was a man at our meeting tonight."

Said the man: "There were about a hundred women tried to push their way into ours."

"That one man," said she, "looked awfully scared."

"Those hundred women," said he, "didn't look a bit scared."

"I think," said she, "the man got into our hall by mistake. Anyhow, he got away as soon as he could."

"There was no mistake about those women being there," said the man, "and they didn't leave until they were shooted away."

There was a short silence. Said the man presently:

"It is this difference in the attitude of the sexes toward the meetings for women only and for men only that makes me feel morally superior. It makes me proud of my sex. I haven't the slightest desire—no man has the slightest desire—to butt into a feminine confiab, but the woman never breathed who wasn't on edge with curiosity in regard to what takes place when a bunch of men hold a secret conference. I have known women who admitted that they would willingly sacrifice a year's normal pleasures for the privilege of being smuggled into a Masonic initiation or some other masculine rite. Contrast that prying spirit with the modesty of men. On your own showing, when a man is accidentally trapped in a hall where a beauty congress or a dressmakers' convention is in progress, he is so miserable that the fly in the spider's web had a picnic compared with his martyrdom. That, to my mind, is a pungent commentary on the disposition of man and woman. Can you explain it?"

The woman admitted that she could not explain it—furthermore that she did not intend to try.

There was another silence. Said the woman after a little: "What happened at your meeting tonight?"

"Oh, nothing much," said the man. "What happened at yours?"

"Everything," said the woman. Then she proceeded to tell him what 'everything' comprised. It took more than half an hour to tell it. Every now and then the man, for consistency's sake, tried to look bored, but the air of indifference was ill assumed. The narrative really interested him, and he was sorry when it was finished. The story being ended, there was another silence. Suddenly the woman said:

"I can answer your question now."

"What question?"

"Why women are crazy to go to men's meetings, while men wouldn't give a fig to go to women's meetings. It is because the women come home and tell the men everything that happened, so they don't need to go, whereas the men never tell the women anything."

"By, George," said the man, "I don't know but you are right."

Near Death in Sewer.

Dr. G. Cooke Adams, who has been a civil engineer, surgeon, naval officer and research worker in Australia, was telling some of his blood curdling experiences the other day.

"My narrowest escape from death," he said, "was not at the hands of aborigines or bushmen. I was engaged as an engineer in preparing plans for a new system of sewers for the city of Sydney, Australia. In connection with this work it was necessary to resurvey the old unventilated system which had been laid 30 years previously, the existing plans of which were most inaccurate. I had been underground several hours, and the men in charge of the manholes had mistaken the signals and closed the manholes, thinking I had come to the surface. The gate valves were opened and the sewage started on its way before the mistake was discovered and I was rescued, together with an assistant, both of us unconscious from sewer poisoning."

Ancient Covenant of Blood.

In the world's most ancient records—the monuments of Egypt—we find evidence of the existence of the covenant of blood. Even then it seems to have been a custom to covenant by tasting the blood from another's arm. In the "Book of the Dead," the most ancient and most important of the sacred books of the Egyptians, there are several references to blood covenanting and incidental mention of the tasting of blood by gods and by men. An inscription on an ancient Egyptian monument details a legend of the rebellion of mankind against the gods; of an edict of destruction against the human race; of a divine interposition for the rescue of the doomed people. In this legend a prominent part is given to human blood mixed with the juice of mandrakes (love apples) and prepared as a drink to propitiate the offended gods.

Old Estimate of Field Hands.

The sixteenth century earl of Warwick stayed the slaughter after the suppression of Kett's rising by an argument which shows how completely agricultural workers were regarded as mere "hands." Of the 20,000 insurgents who had encamped with Kett on Household Heath, 2,000 or 5,000 had been killed in the battle—the strength of the victors lying in German and Italian mercenaries. Kett himself was hanged from the walls of Norwich castle, 45 others were hanged, drawn and quartered in the market place, and 500 in all are said to have been executed. Warwick checked the demand for increasing the number of victims by asking, What shall we do, then? Hold the plow ourselves, play the carters, and labor the ground with our own hands?"

Elaborate and Beautiful Evening Gown

THE Oriental influence is distinct enough in this elaborate evening gown, in which one thin fabric after another is draped over the silk foundation. There is first a skirt of silk veiled with chiffon. Six narrow ruffles are also veiled with chiffon with a border or tuck of this fabric extending below each ruffle.

Over this skirt a tunic of lace is worn, extending almost to the knees. One would think this quite enough in the way of draping, but over this a drapery of gorgeously embroidered chiffon is gathered like a second tunic.

By way of further elaboration a wreath of scattered chiffon roses on a fuzzy stem extends from the bust to the hem of the embroidered chiffon, and a small bouquet at its upper end finishes the corsage.

The draped shoulder and opening at the neck are finished with a fine lace edging. There is a narrow crushed girdle of chiffon.

The natural lines of the figure are followed in this wonderful gown, and we must concede to the French designer a masterful handling of the drapery. It is modest, but is meant to be conspicuous. It is original and sticks to beautiful lines, so that there is no straining after novel effect at the expense of taste.

The headdress is in keeping with the character of the gown. It is made of rhinestones and a magnificent spray of costly feathers. The hair is peculiarly dressed but suits the type of face of the model in the illustration, which is pure French.

Altogether the gown, coiffure, and hair ornament suit this type incomparably well, so that the ensemble is full of fascination. One could hardly be other than charming with a toilette so complete and so beautiful. And it is the knowledge that she is making a charming appearance which lends charm to those wonderful French women, to whom the world owes a debt of gratitude. They are preserving charm; they take care to be charming.

NETS AND SHADOW LACES USED FOR THE LATEST BLOUSE

THE last step in the direction of thin materials for blouses is said. There isn't anything thinner than nets and shadow laces.

An underblouse with sleeve caps, (finished with lace) is made of the same net as that used over it, in the waist model shown here. A broad band of ribbon is tacked to it below the bust and finished with a bow at the left side. The blouse with long sleeves is placed over this. The shoulder seams and under arm seams are in one.

A double frill of net encircles the neck and extends down the front with round pearl buttons for fastening.

The sleeves are finished at the wrist with two single frills.

Sometimes two kinds of net are used, but often shadow lace makes the outside waist, over plain net. Heavier all over laces are used as well.

In any of these the waist is so sheer that a fancy corset cover must be worn under the blouse. These are of lace, chiffon, net or thin silk. They are trimmed with ribbon and small chiffon or ribbon flowers, and are very pretty.

Using a plain net waist as a foundation, more beautiful effects are made by draping lace or chiffon veils over them and supplying a wide crushed girdle of silk or velvet. Lace veils in colors are used for the same purpose, and tinted nets and laces make possible an unending variety in these thin, soft garments.

Three such blouses take up so little room that they may be carried in a small box or a bag. They are very convenient for the southern tourist, and they are indispensable with the season's suits.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

SEASON'S COLOR IS YELLOW

Skillfully Handled, as It Must Be, It Is Becoming to the Average Wearer.

Yellow is much seen in these days. Last spring yellow was first extensively used in lingerie. Ribbons of yellow were run into all sorts of underwear and negligees. Then yellow and crepe de chine were used for the making of rest robes and petticoats and chemises and night gowns. Yellow waists of chiffon and crepe de chine were next worn. And then evening frocks and afternoon frocks of yellow appeared. There are even some yellow tweed street suits. Yellow is usually a becoming color, if it is skillfully handled. But there are not many skins that are improved by coming into direct contact with yellow. This fact is now understood by most dressmakers. In almost all the gowns and blouses of yellow there is a generous use of cream of white tulle at the throat. There is usually a touch of black somewhere on these yellow garments. A little black velvet at the wrist or elbow or belt, or a knot of black in the drapery of the skirt, gives character to the color that might otherwise seem monotonous.

Two Kinds of Wrinkles.

Can you tell the difference between wrinkles produced by smiling and those produced by discontent? And which would you rather have? Perhaps you say "Neither." But the wrinkles from happiness only come after a couple of scores of years of smiling, while those which spring from worry may grow over night.

Another argument for the smile wrinkle is that when it comes it is really attractive, curving up and giving the face even in repose a happy expression. On the other hand, the lines born of discontent make the expression unhappy.

There are few smiling faces in any big city. There is an anxious, hurried look on every face you pass on the street. Is it any wonder young women grow wrinkled before their time and are forced to spend hours in the hands of a masseuse, so that they may frown as much as they like at other times?

Hooped Coats.

The hooped coats are very smart. They are made of velvet, broche satin, velours de laine, fine faced cloth and many other materials, says the New York Press. The genuine leg of mutton sleeve is seen, and, as a rule, these coats are generously trimmed with fur.

To Heal Chapped Skins.

Skins that have been chapped and made rough by exposure can be relieved by applying with a bit of old linen a lotion consisting of one ounce of rose water, half an ounce of glycerin, half a teaspoonful of borax and three drops of benzoin.

Parisians Find Rent a Burden.

Rents in Paris have increased heavily within the last decade. The number of vacant dwellings is constantly decreasing and many citizens fear that within five or six years they will either have to pay unbearably high rents or move outside the city.

Home of Dwarf Races.

In Luzon, the Philippines, there dwells a race of dwarfs known as the Aetas, whose average height is four feet eight or nine inches. They live in the mountains of the interior, thus bearing out the theory of one authority upon little peoples that most, if not all, of the dwarf races survive only in the most inaccessible parts of the continents or islands to which they belong.

Scientific Attainment.

The porcus lead of Prof. H. T. Hanover of the Danish Polytechnic high school of Copenhagen, is said to be the result of many years of study of the problem of accumulator efficiency. The lead is filled with cavities so small as to be visible only through a powerful microscope, but they diminish weight, and they add so much to the surface that it is said storage batteries have their capacity increased five times without addition to their size or weight.

Value of Choice Ideas.

Few things matter more to us than the entry of choice ideas into our outlook. Let the "practical" man condemn them if he will; those minute and delicate powers give the tinge to our thoughts, the bias to our theories, that determine our whole attitude towards life and shape the destiny of nations.—George Bourne.

Severe Reflection.

A discussion on appointments to the Most Noble Order of the Thistle gave rise to a caustic saying on the part of Disraeli. Among the names suggested was that of a certain peer, who displayed more zeal than judgment in his support of the Conservative party. "Oh, no!" remarked his ungrateful chief, "I couldn't give Lord —— the Thistle. He'd eat it."

Hats Denoted Liberty.

In Rome slaves, when they received their liberty at their masters' hands, wore cone-shaped felt hats, which came to be the symbol of liberty. After the death of Nero the citizens of Rome wore pointed hats to show that they were relieved from the oppression of a tyrant. Later on, when the Netherlands threw off the Spanish yoke, they adopted a hat in the coat of arms of that nation.

Matter of Supply.

The witness testified that he had been knocked down by a motor-car and that the chauffeur, who was joy riding, had given no warning of his approach. "Do you mean," asked the judge, "that he didn't have a horn?" "No, your honor," replied the witness, "I think he'd had too many."

Mere Matter of Choice.

"Marie," asked the star of her maid, gazing perplexedly at her reflection in the mirror, "what was I about to do—step into the bathtub or go on the stage?" Marie shrugged her shoulders. "How can I tell? Mademoiselle is dressed for either."—Judge.

Love as Poet's Inspiration.

Moore lived up to his theory that love's young dream is the sweetest thing in life. He never let one love get old before he supplanted it with a new. Carey had his Sally of "Sally in Our Alley" fame. Surrey loved Geraldine from the time she was a child in short dresses. Corneille, the astute lawyer, fell in love and became the brilliant dramatic poet. Thus it seems that love, whether successful or otherwise, for a time inspires its votaries.

THE SPELLING BEE WAS QUITE ENJOYABLE

Thirty-Two Ladies and Gentleman Participated Last Friday Night.

In the assembly room of St. Mark's church last Friday evening the spelling bee, previously announced in these columns, under the auspices of the Guild of St. Matthew's P. E. church, was held and throughly enjoyed by those participating and the large crowd of on-lookers which numbered in the neighborhood of a hundred or more.

Rev. W. H. Shearer, pastor of St Matthew's, captained one side, while Clerk of the Circuit Court E. Z. Tower, marshaled his forces in opposition. Capt. R. R. Sanner, principal of the grammar school, was pronouncer.

The sides were equally divided as to numbers each one containing sixteen. While nearly every one in the audience were chosen by the two captains the declinations were more numerous than those who accepted. In taking the floor Captain Sanner stated that he had a written list of about two hundred and fifty words and when these were exhausted he would produce others, and that he would follow closely the list in hand.

The first round many dropped out, while in the second others went down until on Rev. Shearer's side Mr. H. A. Rasche, B. & O. agent, who grew up in a printing office, was the sole survivor. Mr. Tower's side had three remaining, they being Mrs. Richard Connell, Miss Anna Gonder and the editor of The Republican. Mr. Rasche was called out, which gave Mr. Tower's side the victory.

The words pronounced by Capt. Sanner were as follows:

Sugar, molasses, obsolete, necessary, victuals, integer, pole, billiards, picknicking, frolicking, oasis, lovable, millinery, confectionery, tee-to-ta-ler, treacle, trystmg-place, tureen, utensil, villain, equinox, equinoctial, gangrene, sardine, sandwich, vaccination, cullen, cinnamon, copious, concrete, civilize, college, coleslaw, chimneys, brakeman, blaspheme, biscuit, bilious, mercantile, bicycle, benedict, beggar, battalion, balance, bachelor, baboon, augur, asparagus, arbutus, aqueduct, melancholy, canaces, onerous, barbecue, the kettle bane, recompense, arable, expunge, autonomy, fallacy, irrigate, omelet, athlete, erase, tyranny, imagine, irksome, knead, regicide, suicide, germicide, homicide, matricide, purloin, belfry, colonel, vermilion, mortise, giggle, accommodate, crystallize, pennant, hygiene, indelible, deleble, beefsteak, fidgety, chanticleer, uncouth, enamel, booby, complement, excavate, chenille, affidavit, olfactory, paregoric, blonde, limn, glycerine, insidious, incision, ennui, colander, hymeneal, hemorrhage, guttural, trey, toboggan, liquefy, teeter, talc, sophomore, silesia, siege scribbler, satinet, salt-cellar, salary, rutabaga, rouge, ribbon, rhubarb, reservoir, resurrection, resume, referred, recommend, receipt, rancid, raccoon, pursue, prophesy, promontory, pillage, supersede, secede, parallel, pallet (bed), currant, buzzard, plumber, shepherd, sassafras, sycamore, fertile, bouquet, benefit, dahlia, granite, conscientious, physician, until, busy, Kentucky, Delaware, affable, wholly, bananas, singeing, judgment, salable, vinegar, vacancy, virgorous, lemonade, courtesy, parasol, misspell, mirage, mileage, measles.

The injured man is being attended by Dr. Mason and is resting quite easy at this time. He will be incapacitated from attending to business for some weeks.

HIRES MAN TO KILL RABBITS

Unusual Procedure By Lonaconing Man To Save His Fruit Trees.

For the first time in the history of this county a man has been hired by a farmer to kill rabbits every day in the year. That is what Joseph Goodman, a well to do fruit grower of Garrett county, living near Lonaconing, has been forced to do to save his trees. The man that will kill rabbits 365 days in the year is Charlie Green.

Goodman planted a thousand peach trees one night and the next day, the rabbits had eaten them clear to the stumps. He decided to take drastic measures. Rabbits are so plentiful on his place that they drive off the dogs.

SENATOR H. J. SPEIGHER MAKES GOOD HIS PROMISE

By Introducing a County-Wide Local Option Measure.

[Special to The Republican]
ANNAPOLIS, MD., JAN. 21.

With the third week of the session on the General Assembly has at last hit its stride. The working committees have been appointed and with the new rules in force in both houses the flood of bills, held back for several weeks, started at last.

The delay in getting down to the real business has been beneficial, however, in that the Assembly is in better much shape to concretely consider legislation than was any of its predecessors. The new members have had an opportunity to become acquainted and the time usually taken up for such purposes after the committees have organized will not be needed.

Two of the most important of the early bills, and which were introduced yesterday by Senator Harvey J. Speicher of Garrett, provides for a statewide anti-cigarette law and a local option vote for the entire county of Garrett at the next fall election. Senator Speicher's anti-cigarette measure is regarded as one of the most drastic pieces of legislation to be offered during this session. The bill prohibits the selling or giving to any person under the age of 21 years any cigarettes, cigarette materials or cigarette papers and provides for heavy fines and jail sentences for persons violating its provisions. In any case where persons found guilty are imprisoned the term is to be worked out on the state roads. To prevent the protection of violators of the proposed anti-cigarette law Senator Speicher's has included a minor who refuses to tell any police or truant officer, school teacher or other person in authority where the cigarettes have been obtained may be punished by a fine and compelled, if the latter remains unpaid, to serve out the time in jail.

The bill has been sent to the Committee on Hygeine.

The Speicher local option measure has been introduced in accordance with the campaign pledges made by the Garrett Senator. The bill gives the entire county the right to vote whether the "wet" places in the county shall remain "wet" or whether the entire county shall go "dry." By skillful maneuvering Senator Speicher saved the bill from going to the Senate Temperance Committee and had it committed to a select committee consisting of Senators Beck of Kent, Snader of Carroll, and Speicher of Garrett. There is every probability that the bill will be reported favorably with an excellent chance of passage, at least in the Senate.

So far no other measures of especial interest to Garrett county have made their appearance.

The Garrett House delegation has organized and buckled down to work. Mr. E. C. Harvey has been elected delegation chairman.

The delegates of Garrett have had little opportunity to cut any figure on the the floor of the House, due to the routine nature of the proceedings up to date.

The feud between Senator Frank E. Williams, Republican, of Cecil, and Senator Carville D. Benson, Democrat, of Baltimore county, promises to become notable before the present session is over. Benson attempted to block Williams taking his seat on the opening day through an attack on the latter's eligibility on the grounds that "common report" had it that Williams was a minister of the Gospel. After the special committee recommended to the Senate that the Cecil Senator was entitled to his seat and Mr. Williams had been sworn in the latter on Wednesday last arose on a point of personal privilege and scathingly criticised Benson's attack. Benson heatedly replied and the incident closed.

But that was a mistake. On the opening day of this week Senator Williams offered a resolution providing for a special joint legislative committee to investigate the road system of Maryland prior to the granting by the Assembly of the State Road Commission's request for a new $6,000,000 road loan. Senator Williams had asked permission to speak on the resolution when Benson interposed on a point of order and not only insisted that the Cecil man's remarks were unparliamentary but that Mr. Williams had no right to address the Senate as the resolution had already been sent to the Committee on Highways. Senator Williams debated but the President Price sustained Benson and the latter won out. Benson, by the way, is reported to have been picked to introduce the new road loan bill and the constroversey between the two men promises much interest in succeeding days.

Governor Goldsborough has already sent two important messages to the Assembly this week. The first calls attention to the fact that though the Seventeenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution (which provides for the direct election of the United States Senators) has been ratified that the General Assembly of Maryland is still called upon to either express its approval or disapproval. Incidentally the Governor recommends that while the amendment is under consideration that the Legislature pass legislation effectting the amendment in Maryland through amendments to the general and primary election laws. The Governor failed to recommend either the county unit or mass vote system for the nomination of senatorial candidates.

The second executive message urges change in the existing law to enable the Governor to name a limitless number of notary publics in any section of the state and making any person over 21 years old and of good moral character eligible for the position. The Governor also urges that the fee to be paid by notaries in Baltimore city and the counties be made a uniform one.

In the committee allotments Western Maryland members fared well in both houses considering the fact that the House and Senate are heavily Democratic and minority members are usually given scant consideration.

On the Senate side Speicher of Garrett has been given three good committee places, on the Elections and Engrossed or Printed Bills and the Fish and Game Committees. On the former committee Senator Speicher will be one of the five members who will pass on the rights of Orlando Harrison, Democrat, who is contesting the seat held by Ashburn, Fusionist, of Worchester county. The Engrossed Bills Committee is also important on account of the new rules providing for introduction and consideration of typewritten and printed bills instead of bulky measures written by hand.

Senator Zihlman of Allegany, minority floor leader, was given chairmanship of the Pensions Committee with membership on the important Finance Committees.

On the House side the Western Maryland Democrats were treated well and the Republicans were also given some consideration.

The three Garrett members were given assignments as follows:

Shartzer—Railroads and Canals, Labor and Civil Service Reform; Savage—Public Hygeine; Harvey—Expiring Laws.

THE DEATH RECORD

MARY E. BECKMAN.

Mrs. Mary E. Beckman, wife of Mr. John A. Beckman, of Frankville, died Thursday morning about 3 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Captola Beckman, of Ridgeley, W. Va., after a lingering illness of several months. Mrs. Beckman was born near Frankville, Md., where she lived nearly her entire life. She leaves a husband, two sons and a daughter, all grown and one brother, Mr. John McFadden. She was 56 years and four months of age. She was a member of the Lutheran church at Meadow Mountain, from which church she was buried Saturday, January 17. Services were conducted by Rev. Oney, of Gettysburg, Pa. The body was taken to Frankville, Md., on the B. & O. accommodation, and a short service was held at the house by Rev. H. E. Richardson.

Mr. William Welch died last Wednesday midnight at Keyser, W. Va., from the effects of a fall he sustained on Saturday, January 3rd. He went to Keyser from Sunnyside, this county, several years ago where he was engaged in business. He is survived by twelve children, they being Miss Mollie Welch, of Keyser; Porter Welch and Miss Maggie Welch, of this county; Mrs. Bertha Crissman, of Rowlesburg, W. Va.; John, Cass, and Oscar Welch, of Breedlove; James Welch and Mrs. Bertie DeWitt, of Sang Run; Charles Welch, of Emoryville. Mrs. Alice Clark, of Hartmonsville, and Mrs. J. S. Oats, of Keyser. The funeral of the deceased occured on Saturday from the Lutheran church in Keyser, interment in Queen's Point cemetery at that place.

BROKEN DAM OE W.VA.PULP COMPANY INSPECTED

Party Found A Gap 70 Feet Wide And Many Cracks.

After spending a night in a blizzard in the Allegany Mountains, the citizens' committe of Kitzmiller sent to examine the break in the great dam at Maysville reached Blaine utterly exhausted Saturday.

Three members of the party did collapse in the night and the other members attempted to carry them through the snow, which had drifted to a height of five feet. Unable to make any headway, they built a fire and announced that they would remain until daylight and then try to reach some habitation.

James M. Mahaffey, the guide, undertook to go to his house and get food, but lost his way in the storm. Two other members who started after him, found the house to be only a little over a mile away.

Coming across a stream, which led toward the house, the two men hurried back and after a council it was decided that three men should push on to the Mahaffey home and return to the camp with stimulants, food and lights.

Clarence Robinson collapsed when within three-quarters of a mile of the house and was dragged in by Mahaffey, while John Bray sprained a leg, but managed to reach safety. The three were too exhausted, however, to carry succor to their friends.

After waiting for three hours those at the fire sent Grant Pew and Joseph Weicht to the house. Pew and Weicht stopped long enough to eat, then started back for their comrades in the mountains, taking with them part of the way a mule to be used in case of emergency.

In the meantime the temperature had dropped to 5 above zero, the wind had increased in fury, but the snow had ceased. Leaving the house at midnight, Pew and Weicht reached the fire at 1.35 A. M. As the fire was in a hollow, they were unable to locate it for some time and feared that their comrades had succumbed to the fury of the storm.

Their shouts finally evoked an answer from former Legislator John Long and James T. Poland, who had remained to look after another member of the party and to keep the fire going.

Refreshed by food and drink, the entire party fought its way through the drifted snow up the mountainside across an icy stream to an open field, where the mule had been stabled in a shanty. The mule was used to carry the most exhausted members of the party to the Mahaffey house, which was reached at 3 o'clock.

The party left Blaine Friday morning in two sleds drawn by mules to examine the dam and report back to a citizens massmeeting. Its report will be the basis of the fight to be made against the reconstruction or repairing of the dam. The party drove 32 miles by way of Mount Storm to the home of Mahaffey, which is five and one-half miles from the dam. The rest of the trip had to be made on foot.

The snow had drifted three feet in places, but the eight men pushed on to Stoney river, following the stream five miles to the dam. Rocks and ground were covered with ice, making walking difficult and dangerous. The snow had stopped falling early in the day, but began again when the party was half way to the dam.

Two members of the party slipped through the ice into water waist deep and every other man fell at one time or another, the clothing of all being torn.

The party reached the dam at 4 P. M. and photographs of the strucurte were made. A gap 70 feet wide has been torn in the dam and an examination through the passageway under the dam showed big cracks and leaks in almost every compartment.

After a thorough inspection the party started home. The wind had increased in violence. The snow drifted deeper every moment. Walking became so bad that those who lost their footing had to be helped out of the drifts. It soon grew dark. The party, keenly alive to the danger of being separated, followed close behind Mahaffey, who set a stiff pace, till he attempted to lead up the mountain side.

There man after man began to fail and fall behind. The greatest exertion was required to help along the rear guard and keep anyone from being lost in the darkness.

After a few hours' rest at the Mahaffey house the party started for Blaine. At places the snow had drifted even with the seven and eight rail fence and the mules floundered through it with difficulty. One of the sleds, with two men in it, upset. Poland was caught under it, but escaped uninjured.

TO DEVELOP RESOURCES

Maryland Conservation Association Permanently Organized.

As an outcome of the widespread interest which was aroused by the Fifth National Conservation Congress, held in Washington last November, the Maryland Conservation Association was permanently organized at a meeting held in the City Club's headquarters in Baltimore on Thursday afternoon, when the newly elected officers of the association took hold of their respective offices.

After the adoption of a constitution which was presented by Charles Morris Howard, chairman of the committee on organization, Ex-Senator W. McCulloh Brown was elected president; Edwin Warfield, Jr., treasurer; Frederick Clement Weber, responding secretary. Bernard N. Baker and Dr. W. Bullock Clark were chosen as members of the exective committee.

The state organization will co-operate with the national body in its efforts to promote and develop the interest in conservation in Maryland by providing a common meeting ground for the discussion of the various conservation interests now being carried out in the state. The attention of the association was called to the reclamation of the swamp lands of the state by Bernard N. Baker and Dr. Clark. Among the items mentioned by President Brown in his address was the preservation of old Fort Frederick, in Western Maryland, in which he is much interested. Mr. William Ellicott, originator of the plan to establish a national forest adjacent to Washington; Miss Katherine Lurman, who has always been interested in the protection of the Patapsco forest, State Forester Beasley, a strong advocate of conserving our forests and tree-planting, and B. Howard Haman, father of the present oyster-culture law, were all present and assured the association of their hearty co-operation. Dr. B. Holly Smith also offered the aid of the Maryland State Game and Fish Protective Association. The development of the state's agricultural resources under the leadership of the Maryland Agricultural College was also brought up at the meeting.

The speakers at Thursday's meeting, besides the opening address of President Brown, were Dr. George W. Fields, of Boston, Mass., and James Craft, of Mobile, Ala., president of the National Association of Shellfish Commission. Both speakers gave an interesting account of the work of conservation in their states, and showed as a result that thousands of dollars' worth of revenue to the state are being saved each year by reason of such precautionary measures. In the South it has largely to do with the cotton interests, of protecting it against the ravages of the boll weevil; while in the North it means as much for the game, with stress laid upon the oyster culture. Arrangements for a big meeting to be held about the middle of February are under way, and the exact date will be announced later.

ASK $6,000,000 TO BOILD STATE ROADS.

Appropriation Urged By Commission in Annual Report to Governor

A loan of $6,000,000 for road-building during 1914 and 1915 is urged by the State Roads Commission in its annual report to the General Assembly. While the commission explains that $6,000,000 is needed to complete the total state roads system of 1,285 miles, only two-thirds of this sum can be properly expended before 1916 and the necessary remainder to complete the work should be left for a decision by the General Assembly of that year. The commission's report was presented this afternoon in a special message to the General Assembly from Governor Goldsborough giving the executive's views of road needs, as was promised in his original message of this session.

Chairman O. E. Weller of the commission, came to Annapolis today and confered with the Governor at noon in contemplation of the latter's special message. The report of the commission is a voluminous one, but its recommendations for legislation during the present session briefly set forth are as follows:

"That $6,000,000 be provided for the 1914 and 1915 work and that it shall be made available as soon as posible before March 1 of this year.

"That completion of secondary gaps not finished in 1914-1915, the construction of spurs and other extension of the system, the acquisition of more turnpikes, the improvement of turnpikes not already provided for, the erection of large bridges and completing the work of building through incorporaten towns, which will be necessary to complete the whole 1,285-mile system, shall be deferred for action by the legislature of 1916 and, perhaps then worked out in part through the State Aid Act.

That $500,000 from the "Public Highways 1910" act, known as the Annapolis Boulevard fund, be applied to construction of the main State Roads system proper during 1914-1615, thus reducing the actual appropriation by half a million dollars.

"That of the $6,000,000 loan $2,000,000 shall be allotted among the counties upon the basis of country road mileage, as heretofore; $3,000,000 shall be a special appropration for the counties, to complete the main gaps in same, and for other purposes before set forth and that $1,000,000 be expended in Baltimore city in extending the main arteries of the system into the business center of said city."

In addition to the special loan recommendation, the commission urges that the General Assembly, by legislation, relieve the commission from further carrying out provisions of the Annapolis Boulevard Act of Assembly provide increased taxes for registration of motor cycles. The commission also points out the necessity of new legislation to effectively protect the interests of the state such as certain restrictions as to size, weight and speed of vehicles traveling over the roads.

Special legislation is being prepared by counsel for the commission covering these points and to give the commission police control over state highways.

THE AMERICAN HOME

WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The one subject on the mind of everyone these days is the high cost of living, and that leads us to remark that there are singular ideas current on the subject of the cost of home building. It is not strange that this should be so. For the bizarre and the eccentric invariably attract attention that the orderly and the sedate may not receive. Perhaps the most singular of all notions with regard to the cost of house, is that a beautiful home can be acquired at the most moderate conceivable cost, if one did but know how to do it. Doubtless we would all get rich if we could; and while the crop of millionaires has been abundant in America in recent years, none will dispute the fact that there are a few left who do not come in this category, and therefore the mere knowing how to do a thing is not nearly so important as actually doing it.

The clamor for small homes of moderate cost, yet equipped with every modern attraction and convenience, will not down. It is a delusion quite as widespread as the former notion that the earth was flat, and it is quite as difficult to get rid of. Very few people can actually point to such dwellings as really in existence, but immense numbers will tell you positively that the thing can be done.

The trouble with the small, cheap, but very attractive house proposition is the fact that the conditions under which houses are built are not understood or appreciated. The actual cost of building by no means represents the total expenditure that will be required in any building enterprise. There are a great many essential matters that enter into the cost of a dwelling that do not enter into the architect's charges. There is the land, for the first thing, the bare price of which may be a considerable item, while the cost of beautifying it may be considerable. The cost of furnishing also must be taken into consideration. All these items, and more, make the cost higher than the figures given by the architect. It is no wonder, therefore, that the handsome small house, the good-looking little house, the attractive small dwelling, is a rare and quite unknown quantity when the lowest possible cost is placed upon it.

One does not need costly embellishment strung, as it were, around the house to beautify it and adorn it. This experiment has been tried time and again, with disastrous results. But one does not need good materials and well drawn plans combined with good taste; and good materials command a price.

Now, every man who can possibly do so should build a home. It is the normal aspiration of the normal man; but the purpose of these remarks is to enable him to go about the enterprise, not with the notion that he will get his home for little or nothing. He will pay the price; and, having done so, he will be contented when he possesses a well-built home. Building materials are high in price now, and will remain so. If any man intends to build a home, he may as well begin now, for materials will be no cheaper.

The little house here shown is as low in cost as any design that could be selected. It is artistic and pleasing to the eye, and presents the aspect of coziness to the beholder. It is 25 feet wide and 30 feet 6 inches long. It can either be built of frame, or plastered on the exterior with cement mortar. It has a living room 14 by 12 feet, in which a fireplace is provided to add to the cheer of the occupants. At the right of this room is a chamber 12 feet long and 9 feet 6 inches wide. The kitchen and dining-room are combined in a room 13 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches in size. The bathroom is 6 by 9 feet in dimensions. On the second floor is a chamber 15 feet by 7 feet 6 inches; and back of this is a storage room 15 feet by 4 feet 6 inches.

In the building of this house, the design will be much enhanced by the selection of a lot that will afford a good amount of shrubbery.

MARKING END OF GREATNESS

Writer Draws on History to Prove That Morality Is the Foundation of a Country's Stability.

A bit of Roman history during the reign of Augustus is thus given by a contemporary: "The Roman people were growing rich and luxurious, morals were deteriorating and the birth rate falling. Literature was erotic, the stage depraved. Men preferred to be bachelors and women to be divorced." And the next thing, big, strong, grand Rome began to go down hill, where it finally went to smash. It was never any good after it lost its moral fiber. The ruin of a country or community is not brought about by a lack of money, business, industry, enterprise. These may attend, but the primary cause is the lack of morality. When that disappears all is gone.

This is no speculation or fine-haired theory—it is logic and history. Every man who is a representative of the immoral tendency is an enemy of the people. It is righteousness that exalteth a nation, which some people dispute, because the Bible says so. But it is inherently so. State it in the other way—that vice and wickedness exalteth a nation. How absurd is sounds; and how untrue it is as a mere assertion, and yet there are many, many people engaged in exploiting the latter proposition.—Columbus Journal.

Why the Wise Are Early Risers.

It is a curious fact in psychology that nobody can stay at the same mental and physical level for twenty-four hours together. In the morning you are more matter-of-fact, for instance, than later in the day.

It is in the morning that the best brainwork is done, too—brainwork of the sort that requires industry and clear thinking. And it is about eleven in the morning that your body reaches its highest point of energy. In other words, you are stronger, though almost imperceptibly, at eleven in the morning than at three in the afternoon. You reach that highest point twice in the day, for about five in the afternoon the muscular energy has risen again. But from five onward it declines steadily all through the evening, and on till between 2:00 and 3:00 a. m.

Red Heads, Read This.

It may be consoling to light-haired and red-headed people to read that out of 165 patients at an English insane asylum only one has red hair, and only four have light hair and complexion.

It used to be supposed that a pale complexion specially marked tendency to mental excitement and brain disorder. The statistics, however, show this to be an error. What is true of men is also true of women; they are, with one exception in fifty, dark haired and dark hued. It is sometimes the case that the hair turns white with insanity. Probably the error arose from this fact. The reason why dark people are more inclined to mental disorder has not been explained.

LONG SEASON'S GROWTH FOR STRAWBERRY

Late Fall Strawberries, Picked Late in November.

(By H. H. SHEPHARD.)

One of our neighbors who is an old-time and very successful strawberry grower advocates a very long season of growth the first year for the new plants. He sets out his strawberry plants as soon in March, or thereafter, as the ground will do to work.

This man has made his living, and almost a fortune, by growing strawberries and other small fruits. His berries run on the average from $400 to $500 an acre, the entire season's product being sold at the local town, about one mile from his farm. His berries are always in demand at the highest prices, because he always grows good ones.

The secret of his success with strawberries is in plowing the ground deep and early, with liberal fertilization in the form of stable manure. The manure not only furnishes plant foods, but also adds to the moisture receiving and holding power of the soil, which is very important during the fruiting season, when general conditions are dry.

The land for the strawberries is manured and plowed late in the fall or early winter. This brings up the deep soil minerals to be exposed to the elements during the winter for disintegration. During the winter the plowed ground is given a good dressing of stable manure, and this is followed in the spring with a light dressing of lime or wood ashes. Wood ashes should be applied just before setting out of the young plants in spring, as they have a tendency to liberate and waste valuable elements in the stable manure.

As early in the spring as the ground is dry enough to work the land is again plowed, disced and dragged down smooth and fine. Two plowings of the ground, one in late fall and the other in the spring, pay large dividends on the time used, and the man who expects a very large crop of fine berries must work his ground over several times. Three or four deep plowings of the soil for trawberries would be better.

In central and southern latitudes strawberry plants can be set out from March on through the spring and early summer. The earlier they are planted the more sure are they to live, as at that time the ground is well supplied with moisture, the days are cool and new roots soon begin to grow and take hold of the new soil. With later planting there is too much danger of the plants suffering for moisture, with consequent stunting of growth.

But the chief reason for fall plowing of the ground and early setting is that the plants will have full benefit of all growing weather from early in the spring till late in the fall. This not only insures a deep and strong root system for the plants, but perfect branching with solid matter hills or rows is effected, and a large number of strong buds are formed for the first crop the following season. The long season of growth makes large and strong plants, capable of developing a very heavy crop of the most perfect fruit.

SAYING THAT IS WORTH REPEATING

Intelligent Care of Land, Crops and Animals Is Secret of Success in Farming.

By H. H. SHEPHARD.

This may have been said before, but it is worth repeating: You cannot get something for nothing, even at farming, although they say that crops grow while the farmer sleeps. So do the weeds, and the animals grow hungry between night and morning. Intelligent care of land, crops and animals is the secret of success in farming. And if anything else should be added, it is that the farmer must be intensely in love with his work. He must see good things in the farming line in all of his visions.

Don't simply show your wife and children money in your pocketbook after making a good sale. That is mean and wicked. They helped to make that money as well as you. Give them a part of it now to spend in their own way while you can see them enjoy it, and perhaps share in their joy. If you save it for the children to spend after you are dead—you know the rest, but you won't know it then.

Cement is cheap this year, but with it and sand and gravel you can make some of the most valuable things on the farm. A good rule to make on the farm is that of building something of concrete every fall and spring. By and by, with little money and labor, your farm will become substantially improved, and these improvements will outlast you and your grandchildren. It is not economy to construct with any material that is not efficient and permanent.

There is one reason at least why every farmer should own a gasoline engine, and that is that the boys like to see it work and they learn many good things from it. The farm boy as a rule takes naturally to machinery, especially anything that moves and has the "get up and go" about it. And the small gasoline engine has them all beaten in this line a full country block. They teach farm mechanics in the schools, but why not make it possible for the boys to learn some mechanics first hand before leaving the farm?

About the funniest thing we have seen lately was a city woman wearing a hobble skirt trying to get in and out of our farm wagon. The assistance of two able-bodied men and one woman was required in the operation.

City-bred men are moving onto the farm in real good faith and buoyant hopes. Some of them will have as much to learn as the old-time farmers who went to the city a few years ago and put nickles into the slots of cable car tracks. It is about an even tie between the city man and the farmer when it comes to an examination on general facts in special lines. Neither scores the one hundred points mark.

A very saving and economical man in Missouri is past the marriageable age, and is what they term a bachelor. Having no wife and children he kills the time, so to speak, of evenings visiting neighbor farmers. Being too close in money matters to carry a lantern and burn up precious oil, he takes with him his white dog on these nocturnal trips. A halter strap is fastened to the dog's neck, the owner holding the loose end. The dog follows the beaten paths between the bachelor's farmhouse and the houses of the neighboring farmers, leading his master safely home on the darkest night. The oil companies of America should have this stingy farmer arrested, and compel him to purchase and use a good lantern and refined oil. He should be taught that the "other fellow" must live as well as he.

Speaking of making a living, the man who cannot make and save money at farming, gardening, dairying or any of the side lines to general farming is a fit subject for pity, as he could not make a living at anything. Foodstuffs of all kinds have become as marketable as flour, and at remunerative prices.

ADAPTABILITY OF SOY BEAN CROP

Irregularities of Season Will Often Cause Aftergrowth—Easily Harvested.

Soy beans are very similar to cowpeas with respect to season of growth and cultural requirements. Since the two crops occupy the same place in crop rotation, it is well to contrast their adaptability, says a bulletin of the Delaware station.

Soy beans mature uniformly, the pods ripening practically at the same time; cowpeas often bear ripe pods and blossoms on the same plant. Irregularities of season will frequently cause an aftergrowth of the plant, a condition which does not obtain with soy beans. This difference in maturing habit is distinctly in favor of the soy beans, inasmuch as the latter may be more easily harvested for seed or hay than the cowpeas.

Most varieties of soy beans grow erect or nearly so; cowpeas are viney and bear the pods so near the ground that it is less likely to injure soy beans—both in the spring and the fall when nearly mature—than cowpeas, which are killed by light forsts.

Soy beans are injured less by insect enemies and plant disease than cowpeas. If cut at the proper stage of maturity, soy beans make a richer hay than the cowpeas.

Feeding Fodder.

While fodder, when given out of doors should be fed in feed racks not on the ground it is imperative for the ground surrounding the racks to slope away in all directions and often it would be better still if tile drained.

Pig Is a Gentleman.

That the pig is naturally one of the finest "gentlemen" in the land and should be treated as such was the statement made by Dr. Austin Peters of Harvard. Doctor Peters was talking on the raising and care of poultry and swine.

"The pig is naturally a gentleman," said he, according to the New York [illegible] "It is man who has made him as he is. The popular idea that broken glass, empty cans and tin covers are appreciated as a diet by swine is one of the popular fallacies. Neither do they appreciate lemon rinds, orange peels and banana skins. The pig should have a clean, dry bed to sleep in; its pen should be kept clean, and it should be properly fed."

Removing Insect Pests.

Clean soap and water will remove scale and the white mealy bug from palms and ferns. The treatment must be applied often and the plants thoroughly rinsed with clear water afterward.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THERE ought to be one or two occasions in the year when unregenerate man is freed from the dietary restraints laid upon him by a hygienic helpmate, and may eat all kinds of pie and as much of such kind as he chooses.

PIE, THE POPULAR DESSERT.

In the following collection you will find some which you may not have tried:

Pineapple Pie.—Cream a tablespoonful of butter, add a cupful of sugar, and when well mixed the yolks of two eggs well beaten and a cupful of shredded pineapple; lightly fold in the well beaten whites of two eggs and bake in a single crust.

Amber Pie.—Take three-fourths of a cup of sugar, one-half cup of sour milk, the yolks of two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter creamed with the sugar, one-half tablespoonful of vinegar, a tablespoonful of flour, a teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon, allspice and one-half cupful of raisins. Make a meringue of the two whites of the eggs, adding two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake with one crust.

Chocolate Pie.—Cook together six tablespoonfuls of sugar mixed with four tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate; add a pint of boiling water, the yolks of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch. Flavor with vanilla and pour into a baked crust. Cover with a meringue made from the whites of the eggs.

Apple Meringue.—Fill a rich lower crust with seasoned apple sauce, flavor with nutmeg and bake. When done, spread with a meringue made with two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Bake a golden brown.

Cocoanut Pie.—Take four eggs well beaten, add a pint of milk and two-thirds of a cup of sugar, one cupful of cocoanut, one teaspoonful of vanilla, and bake in one crust. Sprinkle sugar over the top after baking.

Banana Cream Pie.—Make a custard of two eggs, a quarter of a cup of sugar and a pint of milk. Into this put the pulp of two bananas well mashed. Turn into a pastry lined pie plate and bake until well done. Cover with a meringue, if so desired.

Date Pie.—Cook a pint of milk and a third of a pound of dates in a double boiler 20 minutes. Strain and rub through a sieve; add two beaten eggs a fourth of a teaspoon of salt, a few gratings of nutmeg, and bake in a single crust.

Washington Pie.—This is such a favorite that it should be brought to mind often. Make a simple layer or sponge cake, and bake in two layers. Put it together with sweetened and flavored whipped cream.

A sunny disposition is the very soul of [illegible] enabling a man or woman to do double the labor that they could without it, and to do it with half the physical and mental exhaustion.

—William Mathews.

GOOD THINGS NEW AND OLD.

In making sponge cake, the eggs should be beaten very light and care should be taken not to lose that lightness when stirring in the sugar and flour. Here is one which is called

Never Fail Sponge Cake.—Beat together three eggs and a cup and a half of sugar until creamy, then add a half cup of cold water and two cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in two layers, and use any kind of filling desired.

Popovers.—Put a cup of flour, a cup of milk, two eggs and a fourth of a teaspoonful of salt into a bowl and beat five minutes. Have the muffin or gem pans smoking hot and well greased, with a red hot oven waiting, and you will have popovers which will pop over right into your mouth.

Two-Egg Sponge Cake.—Separate the yolks from the whites of two fresh eggs, beat the whites until stiff, and add half a cup of sugar. Beat the yolks five minutes without stopping, and add to them another half cup of sugar with two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Beat the two egg mixtures together and cut and fold in with the lightest hand a cup of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of baking powder and a pinch of salt, then add a half cup of hot water. Sprinkle sugar on top and bake 30 minutes. Invert the pan until cool.

For the Chafing Dish.—Beat four eggs together in the upper pan, season with salt and paprika, add four tablespoonfuls of chutney sauce. Mash with this two dozen sardines which have been skinned; mix with cracker crumbs until it can be molded into small pats, and fry a golden brown in butter.

I am surprised that intelligent men do not see the immense value of good temper in their homes, and am amazed that they will take such pains to have costly houses and fine furniture, and yet sometimes neglect to bring home with them a good temper. —Theodore Parker.

WHAT TO EAT.

Right living would eliminate a large per cent. of the ills of man. Overeating has been the cause of many ills and many deaths. To cut our food in half and multiply our exercise in the fresh air by two would unquestionably prolong our lives. Yet we go on eating food that is too rich, and too much of it, and we reap as we sow.

A soup, a salad, and the dinner is complete, says Savarin, one of the greatest authorities on dining; yet how many today would be satisfied with such a meal?

The chief value of soup made from broths or meat extracts is the toning the stomach for the heavier foods. When the nicely flavored thin soup gets into the stomach the gastric juice begins to flow; then when the heavy food follows the stomach is ready to take care of it. These thin broths of soups have little food value, but are great aids to digestion.

Heavy soups, like purees or cream soups, are of themselves a meal and with a simple salad and bread and butter make a most filling one.

Consomme is clear soup made from veal or beef. Bouillon is made from lean chopped beef. Use a quart of water to each pound of meat.

Bellevue bouillon is made from equal quantities of clear chicken broth and clam broth, seasoned with celery seed and pepper. Serve in cups with bouillon spoon.

Garnish the top of each cup with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Chowders are thick soups made from fish oysters, clams or meat. One of the most wholesome and popular, as well as inexpensive, is Codfish Chowder.—Cut in dice a quarter of a pound of fat salt pork, put it into a deep kettle and brown; add three sliced onions and stir until well colored, then add a half dozen potatoes sliced, and cover with boiling water. When the potatoes are tender add a quart of milk, a half pound of shredded codfish which has been soaked in water, and on each plate place a milk cracker which has been scalded with boiling water and drained. Season with salt, if needed, add a dash of red pepper, and serve piping hot. This makes a good dish for a cold winter night.

Fresh fish may be added, if so desired but it should be put in to cook when the potatoes are added.

SERVING THE OYSTER.

The common way of serving the oyster is in a stew, and often a very indifferent dish it is, too, for an oyster stew to be palatable must be carefully made and well seasoned. An oyster cocktail or oysters on the half shell are the favorite first course of the dinner menu of most men.

Oyster Cocktail.—This is one of the best ways of serving this dish. Mix a tablespoonful of tomato catsup, half a teaspoonful of vinegar or lemon juice, two drops of tabasco sauce and salt to taste. Serve in cocktail glasses or in halves of green peppers placed in a bed of ice. The oysters from six to eight on the half shell.

Roasted Oysters.—These are delicious when the nice, fresh, well-flavored oysters may be procured. Buy the oysters in the shell, scrub them and place in a dripping pan and cook in a hot oven until the shells open. Season and serve in the deep halves of the shells.

Broiled Oysters.—Clean and dry the oysters in a towel. Lift with a fork by the tough muscle, and dip in melted butter, then in cracker crumbs which have been well seasoned. Place in a buttered wire broiler and broil over a clear fire until the juices flow, turning while broiling. Serve with parsley or lemon butter.

Oysters in a block of ice is a favorite way of serving for a dinner. Melt a hollow in a block of ice with hot irons, put in the oysters, place the ice on a platter covered with a napkin and garnish with parsley and lemon.

Escalloped oysters are always liked. Prepare them with but two layers of the oyster or the center layers will not be cooked and will spoil the whole dish.

Six Brains a Year.

Here's something to be thankful for. It has been estimated by a distinguished German scientist that we get a complete new outfit of brains about every two months. The duration of a nerve's life is about sixty days. Each nerve cell has its own independent functions, subordinate to the higher functions of the whole brain en masse; and the latter acts as a sort of boss or overseer to the individual actions and life of each separate cell. Every cell is destroyed and renewed every two months, so we each get six brand new brains per year.

The Khyber Pass, from the time of Alexander the Great, has been noted as the great military and trade gateway into India from the Asiatic countries to the east. The pass begins near Jamrud in India, 10½ miles west of Peshawar, and twists through the hills for about 33 miles in a northwesterly direction till it debouches at Dakka, in Afghanistan.

Jones Was Classed as an "Otherwise."

In the lobby one overheard a conversation between the fat man and the thin man.

"What sort of a fellow is Jones to get along with?" asked the fat one.

"He's an otherwise," said the thin one, sourly.

"What do you mean by an otherwise?"

"I'll tell you. When he's talking to a Democrat, he's a Republican. When he's talking to a Republican, he's a Democrat. When he's talking to a capitalist, he's a Socialist. And when he's talking to me, he's just a darned fool!"

Up to the Minute Prayer.

Even in the prayers of little children an occasional bit of up to dateness crops out.

Little Elizabeth had finished the recital of "Now I lay me down to sleep" at her mother's knee after a day of motoring over country roads that had been accompanied by more than the usual number of mishaps. With these in mind Elizabeth added this to her customary supplications:

BAD CASE OF DANDRUFF

Bissell, Ala.—"I had a very bad case of dandruff on my head. I was tormented by itching and my hair began to come out by the combfuls. I almost became frantic, fearful that I would lose all of my hair which was my pride. There were some pimples on my scalp and I scratched them until they made sores. My hair was dry and lifeless.

"I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent to my druggist for three cakes of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed my scalp with warm water strong with the Cuticura Soap and dried, afterwards applying the Cuticura Ointment, working it in the scalp slowly with my fingers. After using them for several days my hair began to stop coming out. The dandruff all disappeared and in less than four weeks a cure was accomplished permanently." (Signed) Miss Lucy May.

WILSON'S MESSAGE ON THE TRUSTS

Monopolists Should Be Held Individually Responsible and the Punishment Should Fall Upon Them

NEW ARTICLES OF OUR CONSTITUTION OF PEACE

It Will Be Understood That Our Object Is Not to Unsettle Business or Anywhere Seriously to Break Its Established Courses Athwart—On the Contrary We Desire the Laws We Are Now About to Pass to be the Bulwarks and Safeguards of Industry Against the Forces That Have Disturbed It.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Following the custom revived by him, President Wilson read his message on Trusts in the Senate Chamber before the assembled Senators and Representatives. It is, in part, as follows:

Gentlemen of the Congress:

In my report "on the state of the Union," which I had the privilege of reading to you on the 1st of December last, I ventured to reserve for discussion at a later date the subject of additional legislation regarding the very difficult and intricate matter of trusts and monopolies. The time now seems opportune to turn to that great question not only because the currency legislation which absorbed your attention and the attention of the country in December, is now disposed of, but also because opinion seems to be clearing about us with singular rapidity in this other great field of action. In the matter of the currency it cleared suddenly and very happily after the much-debated act was passed; in respect to the monopolies which have multiplied about us and in regard to the various means by which they have been organized and maintained it seems to be coming to a clear and all but universal agreement in anticipation of our action, as if by way of preparation, making the way easier to see and easier to set out upon with confidence and without confusion of counsel.

What we are purposing to do, therefore, is happily, not to hamper or interfere with business as enlightened business men prefer to do it, or in any sense to put it under the ban. The antagonism between business and government is over. We are now about to give expression to the best business judgment of America, to what we know to be the business conscience and honor of the land. The Government and business men are ready to meet each other halfway in a common effort to square business methods with both Public Opinion and the Law.

Fortunately no measures of sweeping or novel change are necessary. It will be understood that our object is not to unsettle business or anywhere seriously to break its established courses athwart. On the contrary, we desire the laws we are now about to pass to be the bulwarks and safeguards of industry against the forces that have disturbed it. What we have to do can be done in a new spirit, in thoughtful moderation, without revolution of any untoward kind. We are all agreed that private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. And our programme is founded upon that conviction. It will be a comprehensive, but not a radical or unacceptable programme and these are its items, the changes which opinion deliberately sanctions and for which business waits;

It waits with acquiescence, in the first place, for laws which will effectually prohibit and prevent such interlockings of the personnel of the directorates of great corporations—banks and railroads, industrial, commercial, and public service bodies—as in effect result in making those who borrow and those who lend practically one and the same, those who sell and those who buy but the same persons trading with one another under different names and in different combinations, and those who affect to compete in fact partners and masters of some whole field of business. Sufficient time should be allowed, of course, in which to effect these changes of organization without inconvenience or confusion.

In the second place, business men as well as those who direct public affairs now recognize, and recognize with painful clearness, the great harm and injustice which has been done to many, if not all of the great railroad systems of the country by the way in which they have been financed and their own distinctive interests subordinated to the interests of the men who financed them and other business enterprises which those men wished to promote. The country is ready, therefore, to accept, and accept with relief as well as approval, a law which will confer upon the interstate commerce commission the power to superintend and regulate the financial operations by which the railroads are henceforth to be supplied with the money they need for their proper development to meet the rapidly growing requirements of the country for increased and improved facilities of transportation. We cannot postpone action in this matter without leaving the railroads exposed to many serious handicaps and hazards, and the prosperity of the railroads and the prosperity of the country are inseparably connected.

The business of the country awaits also, has long awaited and has suffered because it could not obtain, further and more explicit legislative definition of the policy and meaning of the existing anti-trust law.

Surely we are sufficiently familiar with the actual processes and methods of monopoly and of the many hurtful restraints of trade to make definition possible, at any rate, up to the limits of what experience has disclosed. These practices, being now abundantly disclosed, can be explicitly and item by item forbidden by statute in such terms as will practically eliminate uncertainty, the law itself and the penalty being, adequately plain.

And the business men of the country desire something more than that the menace of legal process in these matters be made explicit and intelligible. They desire the advice, the definite guidance and information which can be supplied by administrative body, and interstate trade commission.

The opinion of the country would instantly approve of such a commission. It would not wish to see it empowered to make terms with monopoly or in any sort to assume control of business as if the government made itself responsible. It demands such a commission only as an indispensable instrument of information and publicity, as a clearing house for the facts by which both the public mind and the managers of great business undertakings should be guilded, and as an instrumentality for doing justice to business where the process of the courts or the natural forces of correction outside the courts are inadequate to adjust the remedy to the wrong in a way that will meet all the equities and circumstances of the case.

Inasmuch as our object and the spirit of our action in these matters is to meet business half way in its processes of self-correction and disturb its legitimate course as little as possible, we ought to see to it, and the judgment of practical and sagacious men of affairs everywhere would applaud us if we did see to it, that penalties and punishments should fall, not upon business itself, to its confusion and interruption, but upon the individuals who use the instrumentalities of business to do things which public policy and sound business practice condemn. Every act of business is done at the command or upon the initiative of some ascertainable person or group of persons. These should be held individually responsible and the punishment should fall upon them, not upon the business organization of which they make illegal use.

Other questions remain which will need very thoughtful and practical treatment. Enterprises, in these modern days of great individual fortunes, are often times interlocked, not by being under the control of the same directors but by the fact that the greater part of their corporate stock is owned by a single person or group of persons who are in some way intimately related in interest. We are agreed, I take it, that holding companies should be prohibited, but what of the controlling private ownership of individuals or actually corporative groups of individuals? Shall the private owners of capital stock be suffered, themselves in effect holding companies? We do not wish, I suppose to forbid the purchase of stocks by any person who pleases to buy them in such quantities as he can afford, or in any way arbitrarily to limit the sale of stocks to bonafide purchasers. Shall we require the owners of the stock, when their voting power in several companies which ought to be independent of one another would constitute actual control, to make election in which of them they will exercise their right to vote? This question I venture for your consideration.

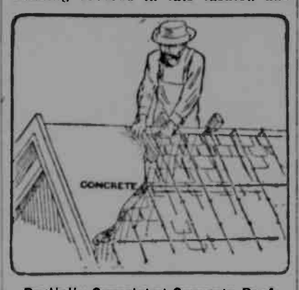
There is another matter in which imperative considerations of justice and fair play suggest thoughtful remedial action. Not only do many of the combinations effected or sought to be effected in the industrial world work an injustice upon the public general; they also directly and seriously injure the individuals who are put out of business in one unfair way or another by the many dislodging and exterminating force of combination. I hope that we shall agree in giving private individuals who claim to have been injured by these processes the right to found their suits for redress upon the facts and judgments proved and entered in suits by the Government where the Government has upon its own initiative sued the combinations complained of and won its suit, and that the statute of limitations shall be suffered to run against such litigants only from the date of the conclusion of the government's action.

I have laid the case before you, no doubt as it lies in your own mind, as it lies in the thought of the country. What must every candid man say of the suggestions I have laid before you, of the plain obligations of which I have reminded you? That these are now things for which the country is not prepared? No; but that they are old things, now familiar and must, of course, be undertaken if we are to square our laws with the thought and desire of the country. Until these things are done, conscientious business men the country over will be unsatisfied. They are in these things our mentors and colleagues. We are now about to write the additional articles of our constitution of peace, the peace that is honor and freedom and prosperity.

Softening Effect of Sickness.

There is something in sickness that breaks down the pride of manhood; that softens the heart, and brings it back to the feelings of infancy. Who that has languished, even in advanced life, in sickness and despondency; who that has pined on a weary bed in the neglect and loneliness of a foreign land; but has thought on the mother "that looked upon his childhood," that smoothed his pillow and administered to his helplessness?—Washington Irving.

To Exploit Brazilian Forests.



The immense forests of rosewood and other hard and valuable woods found in the southern part of the state of Bahia, Brazil, which have never before had a thorough trial in commerce, have tempted three American companies to begin exploitation. Concessions have been obtained from the Brazilian government and operations begun on forest land abutting on small rivers flowing into the Atlantic.

BUILDING A CONCRETE ROOF

Excellent Suggestion for Farmers Found in Successful Experiment of Michigan Fruit Grower.

A good suggestion for farmers generally is contained in the successful experiment of a Michigan fruit grower in building a reinforced concrete roof and using ordinary barbed wire as reinforcing instead of resorting to the relatively costly material specially manufactured for that purpose. The building covered in this fashion had a strong and rigid frame, both in the body of the building and in the roof, which was of the gable type, and the concrete was laid directly on the shingles. Barbed wires, spaced 1 ft. apart, were first stretched over the ridge from eave to eave and drawn tight, and other wires, spaced 3 ft. apart, were then stretched lengthwise of the roof. The shingles made the bottom of the form, while 2-in. strips nailed around the sides of the roof made the sides. The concrete mixture consisted of five parts of screened gravel to one of cement, and the concrete was laid to a depth of about 3 in. After being troweled, the concrete was finished with a coat consisting of three parts of sand and one of cement, and later a coat of raw linseed oil was applied to make the surface waterproof. Only insignificant cracks have developed, and these are easily repaired by pouring in a mixture of oil and cement, says the Popular Mechanics. Such a roof as this is adapted only to cases where the frame of the building is sufficiently rigid to prevent distortion in the heaviest wind.

Paper Sponges.

Paper sponges, which are claimed to possess all the liquid absorbing capacity of the natural product, are now being made. The paper pulp is first treated with chloride of zinc until it forms a nearly fluid mass, to which common salt is added. This mass then undergoes a compressing and drying process in a special machine which, by means of rollers and plates, provided with a number of metal projections, produces in the mass the canals and cavities of the real sponge.

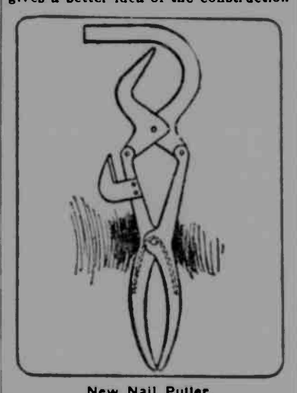
WATER-PROOFING OF CLOTH



Idea for Process Known as "Cravenette" Accidentally Obtained in a Yorkshire Dye House.

The water-proofing of cloth, so universal today, was unknown twenty-five years ago. In 1890, Thomas Fearnley Wiley, of Bedford, took out the first patent for the process known as "cravenette." He got the idea from an accident in a Yorkshire dye house. Certain materials had been wrongly dyed and the workmen were directed to wash out the surplus logwood color with alum. After the material had been dried the improvement was so marked that the dyer ordered a repetition of the alum washing. The cloth was sent to the wetting-machine, but the workmen found that they could not wet it. It passed through the water and came out dry. Thus was the discovery made that cloth could be water-proof and yet remain porous. The process used today is as follows: Cloths intended for rain-proofing are first freed from grease and are then saturated with the clear liquor obtained in adding together solutions of pure sulphate of alumina and acetate of lead. The lead is precipitated out and the acetate of alumina is died in the fabric. The cloth undergoes further treatment with wax, which is sometimes applied frictionally from a block under the pressure of a pneumatic roller. Under the method more generally used, the wax, or mixture of waxes, is melted by heat and applied in an infinitesimally fine film by the action of a ductor roller.

NAIL PULLER IS CONVENIENT

of the tool than words could do, but it operates in this way: The upper handiebar is raised and by the triple pivot connection raises the curved lever member. The claw member can then be inserted under the box lid and the latter pried up a fraction of an inch. The lid is then hammered down again and the heads of the nails remain just far enough above the surface for the claw, or the little lifter attached to the side of the device, to get under and uproot them.

Alaska's Mineral Wealth.

The United States geological survey has recently published a report on the mining industry in Alaska in 1913, by Alfred H. Brooks. The bulletin—No. 542—is one of a series published annually, treating of the progress of mining in Alaska and summarizing the results achieved during the year in the investigation of the mineral resources of the territory.

East Is West.

It isn't so very many years ago since China was regarded as a land apart, having nothing in common with Occidental civilization. Now it is coming with a rush into the western world.

Until recently all that was heard from that remote land—almost as remote in this age as in Marco Polo's—was about queus, and heathen idols, and bound feet, and hatred of "foreign devils." It is different now.

A Pekin suffragette goes up to lick the editor. Parliament is in session. It is in session for a year without doing anything. The government calls for prayers. People insist that the school system is out of date. The president announces his devotion to the constitution.

Best of Fire Alarm Boxes.

After work extending over two years, officials of New York city have devised a fire alarm box which has been dedicated to the use of New York without royalty, and it is expected that the cost under competitive bidding will not exceed $45. The price of fire alarm boxes during the last several years under competitive bidding has run from $75 to $175 each. The average price has been $125 each. The estimated saving, therefore, will be $80 a box. The fire department experts have finished their box just in time to meet the needs of the city, as only six per cent. of the boxes are modern, the rest being obsolete and many being in an unsafe and even dangerous condition.

WONDERED WHY. Found the Answer Was "Coffee."

Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it.

"After awhile I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. When it was made right—dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

"My health continued to improve and today I am well and strong, weigh 148 lbs. I attribute my present health to the life-giving qualities of Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 22. 1914.

GARRETT county was honored by the Maryland Conservative Association, at its meeting held in Baltimore last Thursday, when it elected ex-Senator McCulloh Brown president of the Association. An account of the meeting will be found in another column. The Senator has our hearty congratulations.

THE Good Roads Commission in its report to the legislature, asks for an appropriation and recommends certain amounts tor each of the several counties of the State. The amount asked in the regular appropriation on county road mileage basis for Garrett county is $14,600; special appropriation $175,000. total for the county, $290,000. Garrett county would approve the adoption of the above figures.

WE are compelled this week to issue a 12 page paper. It is a pleasure to accommodate the advertising public, but not at a sacrifice of the reading matter due our subscribers. THE REPUBLICAN is a paper of the people, for the people and with the people. It is our constant effort to produce a paper worthy a place in every home in Garrett county; a paper that will not only be interesting, but profitable as well, to each member of the home circle. By reason of the steady growth of our subscription list we are greatly encouraged to persevere in our efforts to make this paper all we claim for it.

THE premium list of the Garrett county fair will be open to the boys and girls of the farmer's family. The parents should talk this matter over with their children and get them interested, give them an acre of ground to cultivate in corn, potatoes and vegetables; get them to read up on these subjects, write to Hon. David J. Lewis, Congressman for this district, Washington, D. C., for bulletins of the agricultural department treating upon the cultivation of the above. He will gladly have them mailed to you or your boy or girl. There will doubtless be special premiums offered next fall to boy and girl farmers. George Coddington and sister, of near Oakland captured three or more prizes. Get the boys and girls interested in the farm life by this means.

A WELL MARKED GRAVE

Of Garrett County Pioneer of Whom Posterity Knows Little

Spirit, Frostburg, Md.

Along the National Pike in Garrett county, Maryland, are many old graveyards containg tombstones of pioneers whose deeds made the history of this region more than a century ago. Some of these ancient tombs are well marked and well preserved. Others have become well nigh or nearly obliterated and the very names of their occupants forgotten.

On the Stone House Farm at Little Meadows, three miles east of Grantsville, is the old Tomlinson cemetery where the bones of a number of noted pioneers repose. This cemetery is well preserved and the names of those awaiting the resurrection there are preserved in history. On the same farm on the other side of the pike is another burial place that is unique in location, but about whose occupants little is known. Only one grave here has a distinguishing mark, that of Patty Newman, who was evidently a person of some importance. Besides the monument erected to her memory a huge native boulder stands at the head of her grave as a grim sentinel keeping guard throughout the ages, as it were, over those whose bodies were committed to the earth at this place.

We are indebted to the artist-author-poet, Leo J. Beachy, of Mt. Nebo, for a communication throwing a little light on her history and asking for further information as to her identity. The local historians seem to have overlooked this pioneer celebrity. Perhaps some of our aged readers have some recollection of the woman or of her posterity. Mr. Beachy's contribution follows;

Dear Editor:—Herewith I inclose two pictures of the grave of "Patsey" Newman, or Patty Newman, which is located by a big boulder on the Stone House Farm, in about the middle of the last field south of the National Pike, not far from the Boucher school house on the original survey of Little Meadows which was surveyed A. D. 1773, and the patent was granted to Eben Shelby. From the little bits of tradition I have been able to gather so far, it seems that Patsy Newman was a maiden lady, however with somewhat of a family, or at least two children. Jacob Brown who writes of the Tomlinson cemetery on the same property on the other side of the pike, does not even mention Patsey's grave, nor name, in his "History of Garrett county."

The headstone is a common dressed, native, field stone, about three feet tall and a foot or fourteen inches wide, dressed with considerable care and lettered by a man that was evidently not an expert in the line of monument lettering. There are about twenty-four graves about the sama large boulder, but Patty's grave stone is the only one that is lettered. The head stone bears this inscription:

"In memory of Patty Newman who departed this life March26th, A. D. 1815, Aged 45 years."

The foot stone has on it the letter N.

The oldest citizens about here seem to know nothing of the whereabouts of her chilaren, it still living. Why the life history of what no doubt was a remarkable, character should go to oblivion and obscurity in a period of time less than 100 years, seems strange.

When Phineas Boucher was a boy he fetched in a conveyance from Sailsbury, Pa., to his home, a lady from Kansas by the name of Julia Deahl, and as they passed an old building or rather an old stone chimney and logs in the Flanagan fields north of the pike, she informed Mr. Boucher that here she often played in front of that old house with Patsey Newman as a girl playmate. The Flanagan fields were settled early in the 19th Century.

Yours truly,
L. J. BEACHY.

HOYES.

Our school is going along nicely, although the average was rather small during the last week on account of cold and stormy weather. This week the examinations are on.

Freeman Dewitt returned home Sunday after spending a month with his children and other relatives in Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Miss Olia Mattingly was a guest of Auburn Smith Sunday afternoon and evening.

Hamill Casteel and family were visiting at the home of J. A. Dewitt Sunday.

Charles Dewitt and family and Mr. and Mrs. Will Spoerline and baby all spent Monday with John Brenneman's at Thaverville.

Quite a number of persons from here have been attending the church services at Friendsville, among them being Thomas Bishoff, Asa Friend and Arthur Custer.

Albert and Will Enlow were out last Sunday making good use of the sleighing snow and took dinner with Henry Hauser and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Miller and children, of Stone House, accompanied by Miss Pearl Bishoff, were guests at the home of Thomas Bishoff last Thursday night.

Charles Guthrie and Ray Ringer, two of Cranesville's "ever cheerful people," were calling in Hoyes a few hours last Wednesday.

Asa Friend and family spent Sunday afternoon with D. O. Dewitt.

W. A. Smith and J. A. Dewitt attended the annual telephone meeting at Friendsville, when C. W. Friend was elected vice president in Mr. Custer's place, and Mr. Thomas, of Oakland, secretary in Mr. Guard's place. The other officers remained the same.

A number of ice houses have been filled in this community, the ice being only of ordinary thickness.

A. P. Enlow's new house is nearing completion, and is going to be a home to be proud of.

Rev. H. E. Friend drove to Sang Run, last Thursday and was accompanied home by his sister, Mrs. Louisa Dewitt.

Prof. A. W. Dewitt spent a few hours in Hoyes last Sunday. Clements Gochringer was his escort.

Mr. Thomas K. Carey's Wide-Tired Wagon

When Thomas W. Carey, of Garrett County, near Frostburg, received a set of "electric" steel wheels, with six inch tires, he immediately set to work to put them on his wagon to replace the old narrow ones he had been using.

He had only changed three of the wheels when he was called upon to haul a load of white oak lumber from the mill to Frostburg. This meant a trip over a new cut road from the mill to the county road; then to the National road; and down that to the town, thus making use of three kinds of surface, namely—the unprepared and untraveled ground of the woods, the graded and traveled earth of the county road and finally, the roughly macadamized and solid surface of the National Pike.

The part of the pike traversed crosses two mountains—"Great" and "Little" Savage, the former reaching an altitude of about 2,900 feet at the point crossed, and the grades being approximately 8 per cent.

Mr. Carey states that he loaded at the mill with 1,200 feet of white oak, weighing about 6 pounds a foot, which made his load, not including wagon, 7,200 pounds, or 3.6 tons, including wagon, about 4½ tons.

The only difficulty he encountered occurred in driving along the "woods road," where, he said, "the wide wheels rolled along hardly leaving a trace on the ground, but the one old, narrow wheel cut in at every soft place, and at several points nearly stalled the team."

He now claims, after several years experience, that the wide tire is far superior to the narrow on every kind of surface and for every kind of service; that, in going through the woods the wide wheels are stiffer and climb over stones and roots without glancing off and straining the spokes in the hub, as is done in the use of narrow wheels. They do not cut up the road, but make it better on every trip, make better footing for the horses and reduce the cost of maintaining road, team and wagon. Also that, in descending steep hills the rubber blocks wear much longer and less effort is required of the driver in holding the load by the brake.

Wide wheels are slightly heavier than narrow ones of same diameter, but this is more than offset by the fact that they do not drop into every rut and inequality of the road.

Wide tires do not get loose in dry weather, which saves expense for repairs. They can be used in all kinds of farm work, without cutting up the meadows or sticking fast in plowed land.

He claims that if wide tires were in general use (and by wide tires is meant those from 4 to 6 inches,) the cost of maintaining the county roads would be enormously reduced, and that the roads themselves would be in better condition than they now are.

I think that Mr. Carey's first experience with wide and narrow wheels on the same wagon at the same time, under the same load, with the same team, the same driver and the same road, constitutes one of the best and most practical tests that has come under my observation of the respective merits of the two tynes of wheel, and the fact that all the trouble in the woods was caused by the narrow wheel should be sufficient answer to those who, while admitting that the wide tires are the best for farm and general road use, still persist in claiming that they are not practical for use in the woods.

Wide wheels cost more but last longer and are cheaper to maintain than narrow ones. Government tests with wide and narrow tires, made with similar wagons, carrying the same load, hauled by the same team and with a spring balance attached to the pole of the wagon and to the double tree, to show at all times the exact number of pounds pulled by the team, by means of a pencil tracing a line on a revolving cylinder moved by clockwork, prove conclusively that the draught of the wide-tired wagon is very much lighter than that of the narrow, on almost all roads, and that the more trips the wide tired wagon makes the easier the haul becomes, owing to the improved condition of the road.

MR. D. E. BOLDEN NAMED SUPERVISOR

To Succeed Mr. W. W. Savage. Who Resigned to Take His Seat in Assembly.

By the resignation of Mr. W. W. Savage, which occurred on December 22nd, a vacancy was occasioned in the board of Supervisors of Elections for Garrett county which was filled on last Thursday evening by the appointment of Mr. D. E. Bolden, of Oakland, by Governor Goldsborough and the immediate confirmation of Mr. Bolden as a public official by the Senate in executive session.

Mr. Savage was compelled to resign from the position on account of the constitutional provision prohibiting him from holding two offices and in order that he could be sworn in as a member of the House of Delegates he forwarded his resignation as a supervisor to the Governor several weeks ago.

Mr. Bolden was a member of the board about three years ago and is very well acquainted with the workings of the office.

LIFE CERTIFICATES RECOMMENDED

School Board Asks That Parchments Be Issued Two Garrett Countains.

At a meetidg of the Board of School Commissioners held at the board room in the Court house on last Friday, much routine business was transacted.

Messrs. George W. Sterling of Mountain Lake Park, and H. W. Browning of Thayerville, were unanimously recommended to the State Board of Education for life certificates to teach. A requirment of the State school law is such that in order to secure a life certificate the applicant must have the unanimous support of all members of the Local School Commissioners, which in the case above cited such action was taken.

Commissioner Yost was directed by the board to produce the plans and specifications of the proposed new school building to be erected at Accident. The citizens of that community have pledged $1000 in cash and a loan of $1000 at 5 per cent. interest to be used by the Board in helping to erect the proposed school house, work upon which may be commenced in the spring. The Accident people are wide-awake to the necessity of better and larger school accommodations, hence their liberal donations to help the matter along. The people of that community want a high school established there, which can be maintained without any great degree of trouble, but with the present equipment this is impossible as there is barely room sufficient to accommodate the elementary scholars, notwithstanding the fact that the present school house was erected very recently.

An order was passed closing the State high schools on Friday, May 29th, and the elementary schools on Friday, April 3rd.

The vacant scholarship in Maryland Agricultural College was awarded W. C. Stanton, of Grantsville, at present a student in that institution.

SECURED LARGE CONTRACT

Oakland Heating Firm of A. D. Naylor & Co. To Plumb Kingwood Building.

On last Thursday Messrs. A. D. Naylor & Co., of Oakland, secured the contract to place the heating plant and other plumbing work in the George A. Herring building at Kingwood, W. Va., a structure of four stories, requiring more than 6500 feet of radiation. The contract price for the work is in the neighborhood of $3,000 and will require some weeks to complete.

Two other contractors placed bids for the work, one firm being $100 higher than the local people.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Rev. L. A. Rudisill left for Annapolis Monday evening and will enter upon the duties of the position to which he was recently appointed in the Maryland legislature.

Mr. Oliver Heyward, who has been with his family here since before the holidays, left for Philadelphia Tuesday.

Mr. Fouch, one of our telegraph operators, was notified of the death of his father, Mr. M. L. Maysellis, which occurred at his bome at Sleepy Creek, W. Va., last week.

Mrs. Ella Messenger, of Amblersburg, W. Va., was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Levi Huett last week.

Mr. H. N. Cuppett, of Terra Alta, W. Va., was here a few days ago.

Mr. T. P. Lipscomb had three mink traps stolen Sunday night.

Mr. Earl Enlow, salesman for a Pittsburgh coffee house was with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Enlow, several days.

The ice harvest has been on for the past two weeks. Sixty-seven 30-ton cars were loaded for the B. & O. railroad up to Tuesday when the rain and high water interfered. A force of men continued to store in the large ice house for local use. More ice has been stored for private use than for several years past.

Mr. L. T. Yoder came up from Pittsburgh yesterday on business.

The special services are still going on in the M. E. church. The bad weather has interfered somewhat with the attendance.

The Widdowson store room looks very pretty, and is well stocked with new goods.

Mr. E. Calvin Cuppett was visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Cuppett, a few days ago.

Order of Publica.

Sarah Abernathy, (widow), Wm. Abernathy, Sylvia L. Abernathy, Sarah E. Bosely, Martin Abernathy and Wm. G. Abernathy, Plaintiffs, vs. Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodore Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John A. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy, Defendants.

No. 1915 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, containing about 150 acres, of which Ezekiel H. Abernathy died seized and possessed, and for a distribution of the proceeds amongst the parties entitled to receive the same.

The bill states that the said Ezekiel H. Abernathy was in his lifetime possessed of a tract of land containing 150 acres, being a part of "Illinches Discovery," and which is located in Garrett county.

That being so seized he departed this life several years ago and left surviving him a widow, Sarah Abernathy, and the following children: Susan, a daughter, intermarried with Louis Grant; Rosetta, a daughter, who intermarried with Thomas L. Wildman; Sarah E., a daughter, who intermarried with Thornton C. Bosely, the said Bosely now being dead; Martin Abernathy, a son, whose wife's name is Eva G.; Theodora, a son, whose wife's name is Laura E.; William, a son, whose wife's name is Sylvia L.; John S., a son, whose wife's name is Elizabeth.

The Bill further states that the said Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodora Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John S. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy are non-residents of the State of Maryland; that said land is running down and depreciating in value; that the same is not susceptible of partition without loss and injury, and that in order to make division of the same it will be necessary that said land be sold and the proceeds divided amongst those interested.

The Bill prays for a decree for the sale of said property, that the proceeds be distributed amongst the parties entitled to receive the same, and for general relief.

It is therefore, this 16th day of January, in the year 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 10th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this Bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 9th day of March, next, to show cause, if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Irene Hayes, vs. Elza L. Hayes.

No. 1913 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, Irene Hayes, a vinculo matrimonii, from the defendant Elza L. Hayes.

The Bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the 25th day of December, 1901, and resided together as man and wife until October, 1907.

That the defendant without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than six years, and is deliberate and final.

That one son was born as a result of said marriage, to wit: Emmerson Hayes, on the 13th day of October, 1902.

That the defendant has failed, neglected and refused to contribute any thing toward the support of the plantiff ever since said separation.

The Bill further states that the defendant has been guilty of the crime of adultery since said marriage.

And further states that the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, and avers that the defendant is a non resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 13th day of January, 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in equity, that the plantiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 13th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of the Bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 2nd day of March next, to show cause, if any he may why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

She Knew Him.

"Good-by forever!" said the young man, coldly, as he prepared to depart. "I leave you now, never to return."

"Good-by," said the fair maid in the parlor scene. "But before you go let me remind you that you can telephone me in the morning ever so much cheaper than you can send a messenger, and you can buy me a box of chocolates with the difference."

Sprains.

The most important thing is absolute rest. Handle a sprain as little as possible. Immerse the foot in water as hot as it can be borne. Place a folded towel around the part and cover with bandage. Keep the foot elevated. In the case of a sprained hand or wrist apply a padded splint and put the arm in a sling.

The Road to Fame.

"Virtue is its own reward," quoted the good young man. "Yes," replied the black sheep of the family, "the prodigal son got more fame than his virtuous brother who stayed at home and behaved himself."

Transformation.

Summer Boarder—"What kind of fish are those, sonny?" "Mud suckers. But or, the bill of fare at the Eagle house they are mountain trout."—Life.

Woman's Leadership.

A woman is not a leader of man except in so far as she leads him by the little finger.—Exchange.

Never Again.

"That portrait doesn't resemble me at all!" "Pardon me, madam, but I once made a portrait for a lady that resembled her."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Old Coins.

We buy and sell old coins. Also have a few California 25 and 50 cent gold pieces. Warranted 12k gold. Make nice sonvenirs; price $1 and $1.50. Hyde's. Advertisement.

FOR SALE.

WHAT WOULD SOLOMON ANSWER?

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY JASON KEP

King Solomon is to wisdom what Honus Wagner is to base ball, only more so. When it came to deep thinking and figuring out answers, he was there with the goods every time. You just could not stick him on any old thing, and yet he admitted there were four things he could not understand. After looking the matter carefully I don't blame him or hold it up against him, for they are somewhat mysterious.

If I had the old boy here today, I could give him one which would make those four look like a last year's bird's nest for mysteriousness. I am going to spring it on you, and want you to try it out and see if you don't agree with me.

Call on every man in your community and ask each one to give you one plausible reason, one his conscience and reason will accept, why saloons should be permitted to exist in any civilized community?

They will tell you almost to a man, that there is not one solid reason why they should be permitted to exist and the strongest reasons why they should not.

Then why does a majority of the voters vote wet? Why do they vote for wet candidates?

What's the answer? Honest, now, would'nt Solomon be up against it?

It you have any doubts upon this matter, try it out with a bunch of your friends; begin with the man under your own hat.

You know it is the only business which will cause a father to sell his baby's shoes.

You know the saloon business injures its patrons and produces crime. You know that the United States Supreme Court in a decision stated, "A business which injures its patrons and produces crime, has no more right to a licensed existence than murder, rape, robbery or larceny."

You know it brings 152,000 poor souls to drunkards' graves each year in the United States, and brings want, misery, humiliation and despair to countless thousands of women and innocent little children.

You know they take an active part in politics and are ever ready with money, promises and threats, to debauch and intimidate our public servants.

You know that if the temptation was not before the face of hundreds of men in any community less money would be spent for booze.

You know science has condemned it, business has condemned it, labor has condemned it, and we a christian nation license it, take revenue from it, protect them and permit them to debauch, degrade and kill the manhood of our citizenship, and you fellow citizens by your vote enable them to continue the deadly work. You would be insulted if any one said you were not a good citizen. But are you?

It is a lucky thing for Solomon that he died when he did, for if he were living today he would have been forced to make it five instead of four.

Bogs as Nitrate-fields.

If peat is mixed with lime and sown with nitrifying ferments, its filaments become incased with masses of nitrates. Wherever there are peat-bogs it is possible to obtain nitrates equivalent in quality to those of the great nitrate deposits in Chile. The bogs, hitherto regarded as good for fuel only, are thus found to be undeveloped sources of wealth.—Harper's Weekly.

Siamese Clothes.

In Siam both men and women wear the "panung," which is described as a piece of silk or cotton cloth wound round the hips, the slack being rolled up, passed between the legs and hitched up behind in such a way as to give the appearance of a pair of loose knickerbockers. For waist coverings the women wear jackets or blouses and the men wear coats.

Relics of Roman Legion.

In the course of recent excavations at Chester, Eng., for the extension of a local hospital, the skeletons of 18 soldiers of the 20th Roman Legion, which once occupied Chester, were found, interred, with their heads toward the north. Roman pottery, bottles, files and sandals were also found, many of these relics being in a state of perfect preservation.

Dust Poisoned Pies Kill.

The coroner's investigation of the death of William Bowling of Lancashire, after eating pork pies in May last, was concluded when Doctor Harris, medical officer of health, stated that his opinion was that the infection of the meat in the shop was caused by dust blown in from the street.—London Mail.

Prayer Book Brings Fancy Price.

A prayer book in two volumes, which belonged to Mme. de Pompadour, realized $7,200 at auction recently in Paris. It is entitled the "Office de la Sainte Vierge," and contains drawings by Boucher. The work was issued from the Royal printing works in 1757.

Protest Against Social Ill.

Ordeal for Brides.

A peculiar and barbaric marriage custom of the Kabyle women of Africa consists in the martyrdom of the bride, who, clad in her wedding finery, stands through an entire morning against a pillar in the village square. Her eyes are closed, her arms pressed to her sides and she has only the narrow base of the column for a foothold. Meanwhile a ring of villagers criticise and commend on her appearance.

Writer's Characters.

As modern men and women, living in a time of transition, . . . I have drawn my characters often vacillating, torn between new and old. They are compounded of past and present opinions and standards, scraps of books and newspaper cuttings, fragments of men, torn shreds of holiday attire that now are rags, for this is how the soul itself is patched together.—Strindberg.

Grateful for Life Saved.

Thirty-five years ago a Swiss sailor saved the life of an English lad, a pupil at a boarding school at Vevey, who was drowning in Lake Geneva. The young Englishman was then without means, but he has since become a wealthy man. For a long time he tried to find his rescuer, and at last discovered him in the captain of a lake steamer at Villeneuve. He has sent him a bank note for a thousand francs ($200) as a reward.

Like the "Pili" Nut.

The "pili" nut tree grows in the southern part of the island of Luzon, and nowhere else in the Philippines. It is a large tree, and its seed is described as extraordinarily rich in flavor. All the Americans in the Philippines think it the finest nut grown. When the nuts are roasted, if a lighted match be touched to one of them, it will burn like a lamp, so rich is it in oil.

Art of Cookery.

"The art of cookery is as old as history; its development measures the development of civilization. More people are engaged in cooking all or a part of their time than in any other occupation. On the selection and preparation of food depends, more than on any other single factor, the health and consequent happiness and prosperity of mankind."—American School of Home Economics.

Proper Method of Writing.

A twisted spine or writer's cramp are the alternates between which the French government has to choose in establishing once for all the type of handwriting to be taught in the schools. Some years ago there was a unanimous outcry from the doctors against teaching children to write a sloping hand, the promised result being a race of hunchbacks.

GOD'S OATH BINDS HIS GREAT COVENANT

The Glorious Promises Made to Israel Still Future.

"I Have Sworn, Saith Jehovah, * * * That I Will Greatly Bless Thee, and I Will Exceedingly Multiply Thy Seed as the Stars of Heaven and as the Sand Which Is Upon the Seashore * * * and In Becoming Thy Seed Shall All Nations of the Earth Bless Themselves."

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 18.—Pastor Russell preached here twice today. We report his sermon based upon a preferred translation of Genesis 22:16-18.

The Pastor first gave a detailed account of the Abrahamic Covenant, which he claimed contains the Gospel in a nutshell. Then he reviewed the history of the Jews, Abraham's descendants, and showed that the Oath-bound Covenant which God made with their great ancestor nearly four thousand years ago has held them separate from all other peoples.

If it should seem strange that the Almighty should condescend to make oaths to His creatures respecting His gracious gifts, said the Pastor, let us remember that God knew that the Promise attested by the Oath would linger for thirty-nine hundred years without fulfillment. This Divine Oath-bound Covenant has been Israel's Gibraltar. It is the foundation of their nationality, upon which are built all the hopes that thus far have preserved them as a people—the natural heirs of that Covenant.

Jacob's Promises All Earthly.

From Genesis to Malachi, declared the Pastor, nothing in Scripture implies a change of nature from human to spiritual. Nothing intimates that man will ever become an angel. The prophetic promises, on the contrary, tell of restitution to human perfection and to Eden restored—world-wide.

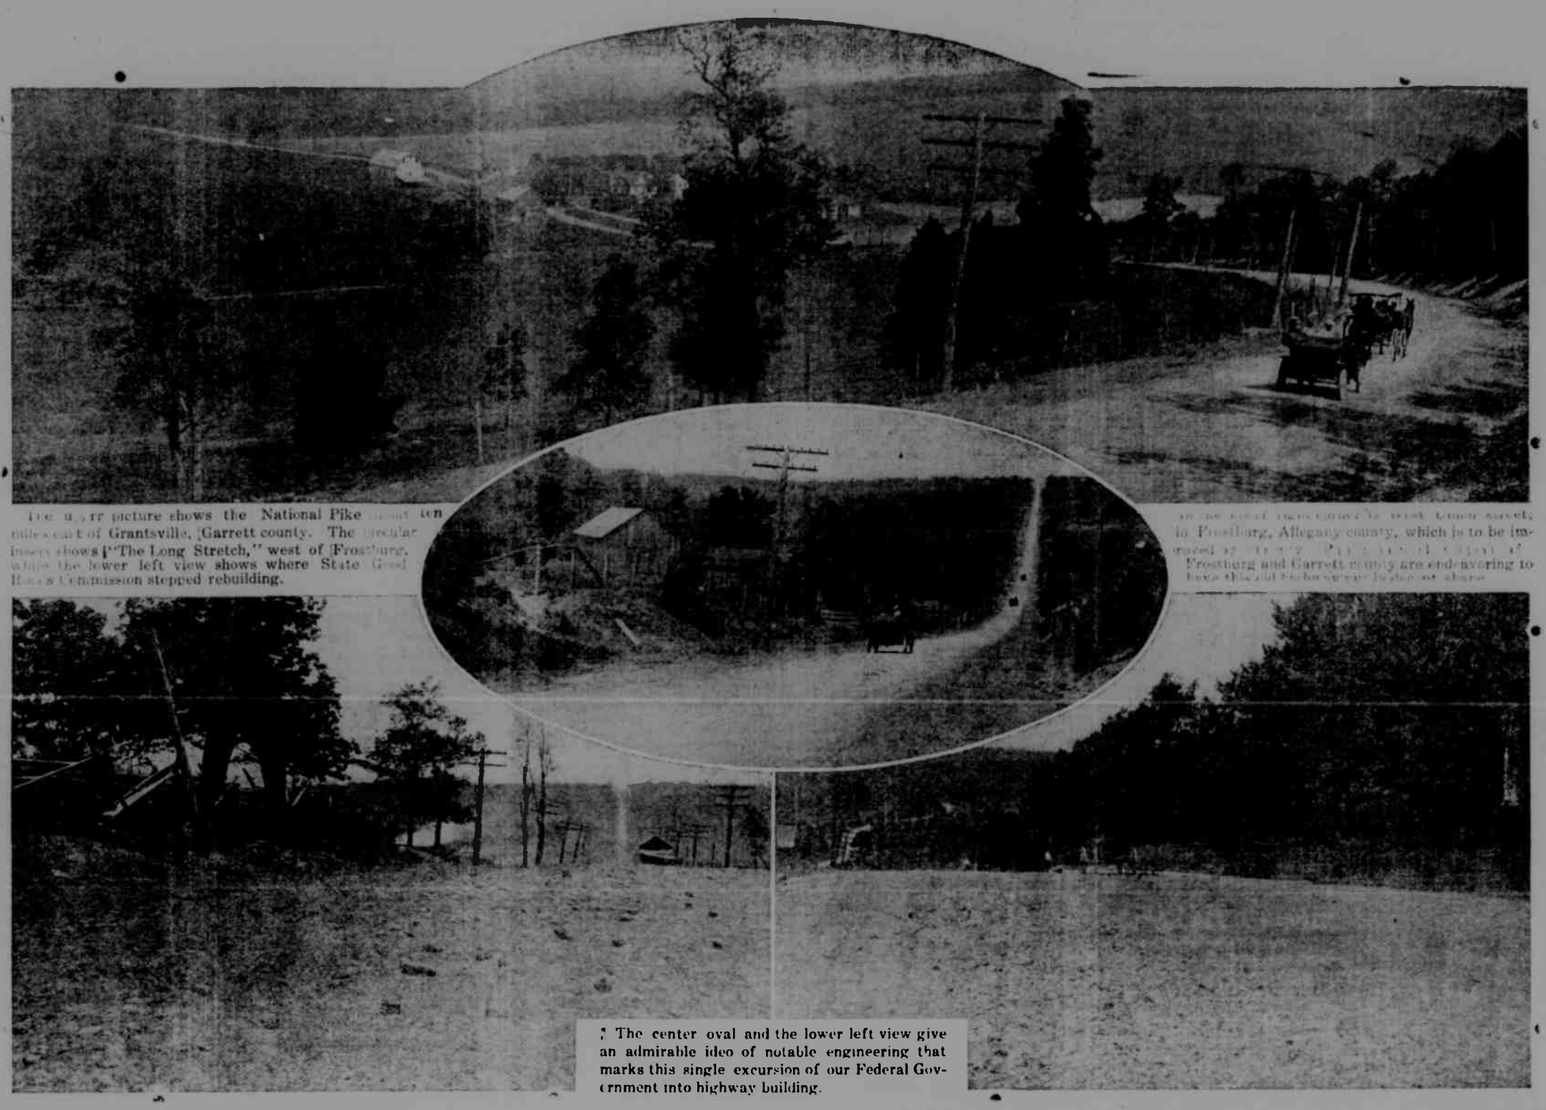
The Pastor then showed that the Jubilee system of the Law of Moses typified Restitution. In the fiftieth year every slave was liberated, and every piece of property reverted to its original owners. God thus pictured man's return to harmony with Himself—man's liberation from the bondage of Sin and Death, his restoration to the image of his Creator, from which he fell through sin.

Then the Pastor briefly reminded his hearers of the wonderful word-pictures of Restitution drawn by Israel's Prophets. Had we the time, he said, it would afford great pleasure to discuss the prophecies respecting the future conditions of humanity, the fulfilment of which is just at the door. The desert shall blossom as the rose; all blind eyes shall be opened and deaf ears unstopped; and the knowledge of the glory of God shall cover the earth.

The speaker also showed that according to the Scriptures the future prospects of Israel are wonderful. Messiah's Reign is the time for which Israel has so long waited and during which that people will have the Divine blessing and become the channel of blessing to all the people of earth.

A Heavenly King of Glory.

The Pastor next discussed popular fallacies respecting Messiah. Some have imagined Messiah's Kingdom will be an earthly one and Messiah Himself a great man. But this is a mistake. The great King will be, not a man, but a spirit being, Jehovah's honored Agent, whose glory and honor will be far above that of angels.



In Daniel 7:13, 14, Messiah is pictured as coming in the clouds of heaven. To Him the Ancient of Days will give the dominion and government, and all peoples, nations and languages shall serve Him. But we are not to expect Messiah to come as a man and conquer the world with cannon and dreadnaughts. God has another method by which earthly powers shall melt before Messiah's glorious Kingdom.

Another description of Messiah's Heavenly Kingdom conquering the world is given in the 97th Psalm. Like David's and Solomon's of old, Messiah's Kingdom will be Jehovah's, but will be higher than theirs—the spiritual, the Heavenly Kingdom. This Psalm the Pastor then discussed, verse by verse. Destructive judgments as a fire will sweep unrighteous institutions from the world, whether these be backed by Jewish or Gentile capital or arms. God's lightnings—His revelations—will enlighten the world. Society as at present organized, symbolically called the earth, will reel and tremble. The "mountains" and "islands" will melt like wax at His presence.

From the Heavenly ones will come the Message of God's righteousness; and all mankind shall see the glory of the Divine character. All worship of idols of every sort shall be ashamed. Those worshiping men or stocks and bonds, houses, money, will break the yoke of all riches for which they cannot account according to the Golden Rule.

The Divine predictions of Messiah's Kingdom indicate that it will have a glory and a power superhuman, in the light of which Solomon's glory will fade. It is for this Messianic Kingdom that God's people have long prayed, "Thy Kingdom come; Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in Heaven."

ALONG THE OLD NATIONAL PIKE

The center oval and the lower left view give an admirable ideo of notable engineering that marks this single excursion of our Federal Government into highway building.

The [National] Road is the only highway of its kind ever wholly constructed by the government of the United States. When Congress first met after the achievement of independence and the adoption of the Federal Constitution, the lack of good roads was much commented upon by our statesmen and citizens generally, and various schemes suggested to meet the manifest want. But it was not until the year 1806, when Jefferson was President, that the proposition for a National Road took definite shape. ..... Tradition, cheerfully acquiesced in by popular thought, attributes to Henry Clay she conception of the National Road, but this seems to be an error. The Hon. Andrew Stewart, in a speech in Congress, January 27, 1829, asserted that "Mr. Gallatin was the very first man that ever suggested the plan of making the Cumberland Road." The road as constructed by the authority of Congress, begins at the City of Cumberland, in the State of Maryland, and this is the origin of the name Cumberland Road. All the acts of Congress and of the Legislatures of the States through which the road passes, and they are numerous, refer to it as the Cumberland Road. The connecting link between Cumberland and the city of Baltimore is a road much older than the Cumberland Road and the two togethet constitute the National Road. ..... From the time it was thrown open to the public in the year 1818, until the coming of railways west of the Allegany mountains, in 1852, the National road was the one great highway, over which passed the bulk of trade and travel, and the malls between the East and the West. Its numerous and stately stone bridges, with handsomely turned arches, its iron posts and its old iron gates, attest the skill of the workmen engaged in its construction, and to this day remain enduring monuments of its grandeur and solidity, all save the imposing iron gates Many of the illustrious statesmen and heroes of the early period of our national existence passed over the National Road from their homes to the capital and back, at the opening an closing of Congress. Jackson, Harrison, Clay Sam Houston, Polk, Taylor, Crittenden, Allen, Shelby, Scott, Butler, the eccentric Davy Crocket and many of their contemporaries in public service were familiar figures in the eves of the dwellers by the roadside ..... As many as twenty four-horse coaches have been counted in line at one time on the road and large broad-wheeled wagons covered with white canvass stretched over bows, laden wit merchandise and drawn by six Conestoga horses were visible all the day long at every poin and many times until late in the evening, besides innumerable caravans of horses, mules, cattle and sheep. ..... The road was justly renowned for the great number and excellen of its inns or taverns. On the mountain division every mile had its tavern. Here one coul be seen perched on some elevated site, near the roadside, and there another, sheltered behind a clump ol trees, many of them with inviting seats for idlers, and all with cheerful fronts toward the weary traveler. The sign-boards were elevated upon high and heavy posts, an their golden letters winking in the sun, ogled the wayfarer from the hot roadbed and gave promise of good cheer, while the big trough, overflowing with clear, fresh water, and the ground below it sprinkled with droppings of fragrant peppermint, lent a charm to the scene that was well-nigh entrancing.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Mormonism.

To the Editor of the Republican:

The spread of the satanic cult is remarkable. Its underlying principle is polygamy. False teachers and lying ministers claim that polygamy has been abandoned but their statements are false. Many converts are yearly gained from all parts of our land, but its chief recruiting places are the foreign countries. England more than two years ago rose up in protest against them and demanded of the Home Secretary immediate restrictive legislation. They carry on a regular traffic in young girls little better than white slavery. Liverpool is the center of operations for these ministers of satan. They have large settlements in Canada and Mexico and multitudes of converts in many countries of Europe. Germany has done the sensible thing in prohibiting them from working in her territory. If any are found preaching or teaching in her borders they are expelled. They have over 631,000 members in the United States. Their aim is to control this continent first and ultimately to rule the whole world.

They claim the right to give laws and commandments to individuals, churches, rulers, nations and the world; to appoin, ordain and establish constitutions and kingdoms; to instruct, warn or reprove by the Word of the Lord, which is the word as revealed by the Mormon priesthood.

They teach that "all merely human religions are political institutions. All republics, states, kingdoms, empires, must be dissolved, in order to make way for the universal and eternal government of the saints of the Most High." (Mormons.) They exercise church authority in political matters.

They secured the admission of Utah as a State in 1896.

They were able to retain in the United States Senate, by a party vote, their senator, Reed Smoot.

They have been able to prevent the securing of an anti-polygamy amendment to the Constitution of the United States. It is simply paganism with Christian names.

The mere statement of some of its doctrines is enough to cover it with infamy and consign it to its proper place, perdition. They teach that there are many gods; that God is an "exalted man and a polygamist;" that the men ot today may become gods by living up to the Mormon principles, including polygamy. They believe that their church is the only true church; they teach baptism for the dead, by proxy, for the salvation of relatives who died without the faith; that one who leaves the Mormon church is eternally lost unless his blood be shed in order that he be saved in the next world; he must be killed outright to insure his salvation. They believe that Jesus Christ was a man and became God by practicing polygamy; (horrid blasphemy); that sin is necessary to development and progress. Adam, who was God the Father manifest in the flesh, "sinned that man might be;" that Christ, "our Elder Brother," the son of Adam, God by natural generation, paid the penalty for original sin, but we must work our own salvation for our own sins, by being baptized into the Mormon church, obeying the priesthood and paying tithes to the Mormon church. They teach that women can enter heaven only as sealed to some devout member to the Mormon church for time and eternity.

They still believe in and practice polygamy, though its practice has been suspended, according to the testimony of its leaders at Washington. The command allowing polygamy is still printed in the church books, but the order suspending the practice does not appear even in the newer editions.

One who has studied the questions and knows the truth says: "No student of polygamy as a doctrine and practice of the Mormon church can reach any other conclusion than that it is simply held in abeyance at the present time with the expectation of a removal of the check now placed upon it.

"A search of the various steps leading up to the Woodruff Manifesto shows that even that slight concession to public opinion was made, not because of any change of view by the church itself concerning polygamy, but simply to protect the church members from the loss of every privilege of citizenship."

The States should adopt an amendment to the Constitution making the practice of polygamy and polygamous co-habitation an offense under the Federal law, thus removing it from the State courts. Of course the Mormon church is opposed to such action by the United States congress. The hierarchy denies the existence of polygamy, in the face of these facts, and she does it by the authority of the Mormon Doctrine and Covenants:" Section 19 and 41: When the Mormons are commanded by "direct revelation" to disclaim their teachings to all people who are not Mormons. The reasons given for such falsehoods are in these words: "For it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom should be given to them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine."

To sum up their doctrines we may say that their real belief is: (1) Many gods. (2) There are polygamous or so-called human beings who have grown divine. (3) Adam is the god of this world. (4) These gods have fleshly bodies. (5) They have children forever. (6) The Holy Spirit is a substance. (7) These gods are subject to the laws of matter. (8) Sin is a necessity. (9) Christ is the son of Adam, God and Mary. (10) He is a polygamist. (11) The atonement does not save souls. (12) Must be baptized to be saved. (13) Blood atonement, i. e., the right to kill a man to save his soul. (14) Baptism must be performed for the dead and the living. (15) They get the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of the men who have been ordained to administer it. (16) Salvation by faith is evil. (17) The priesthood is a part of God

It is dreadful for any one to oppose this doctrine for its authority is unlimited. The subject must surrender his his private judgment.

They teach that all ministers and Christian churches are frauds and any who receive baptism from them shall be damned.

They claim to have visions, revelations, to speak in divers tongues, interpret tongues, to heal disease and work miracles.

Their sacred books are the Bible, which is of least value, the Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrines and Covenants, Pearl of Great Price and Sayings of Joseph the Seer. These are their guides of faith and practice. They say the Bible is of little value, that the priesthood can make scriptures. The priesthood has the only right to govern all peoples, governments and nations. They plainly teach that there is no safety under the government of the United States. They are damned if they reject polygamy.

As to the origin of man: He was born in the spirit world and came here for a body. "We came to this earth that we might have a body. The great principle of happiness consists in having a body. The devil has no body, and herein is his punishment"—Jos. Smith.

They tithe. Well, tithing is all right and scriptural and the church has fallen short in this duty, but it is not done with the Mormon mothers. They say it must be done so that they will not burn at his coming. Records are kept of all who tithe and these tithing-books are judgment-day books.

Organized Mormonism is a secret, treasonable political machine, working for the control of the United States government. The best talent of the hierarchy is devoted to this end.

When congress tried to exterminate polygamy by the passage of the Edmonds-Tucker law the Mormon leaders saw they must secure statehood and thus get the control of polygamous living out of the hands of the government. They got a revelation to suspend the practice, so they claimed, then persuaded the government that they had cut it out and pledged their people to exercise the right of franchise without the dictation of the priesthood and thus obtained statehood under false pretenses. The state was Democratic. Roberts, a polygamist, was elected to congress by a good majority. His election aroused the country and in answer to petitions that flooded congress he was sent home. A constitutional amendment forever prohibiting polygamy was about to be presented and the country was ready to adopt it. At this critical moment two Morman apostles and a Jack Morrison, (one playing Mormon for political promotion), appeared in Washington City. They had an interview with Mark Hanna and several leading Republicans. The amendment that was to wipe out this disgrace from the fair escutcheon of our nation was put to sleep and no public notice was given of its death. Next year Utah, the solid Democratic state, gave a sweeping Republican majority. We can form our own conclusions. It will uproot our government at the earliest moment possible. What is the duty of all citizens toward this lying, apostate hierarchy, this enemy of our government and our homes. Get the facts, and I have given you some of them, and every one I have given you can be proved from their own writings and sacred books. This nation is sleeping over a volcano which will, ere they are aware, burst forth with all its vile and putrid eruptions. Take notice and act accordingly. The solid vote of the Mormon church will be given to the political party that will do its bidding. The Christian people of Utah have not forgotten the spectacle of the President of the United States parading the streets of Salt Lake City on the Sabbath day, led by Senator Smoot, and his address at Provo, in which he said: "I congratulate you on every evidence that you are in community of law, abiding by the laws of the country." It flushes every cheek with shame to think of it. It isn't any wonder he went down in ignominious defeat. God lives and He will hold the citizenship of this nation responsible for their dealings with this God-defying, damnable heresy which ignores all law except its own, degrades womanhood, blights home and would make a hell on earth to gratify its lust.

I thank you for your space.

Yours truly,

HAM.

Congratulating Playright Rasche.

A recent issue of the Kingwood Argus contained the following relative to Prof. Leo J. Rasche, formerly of Oakland, who recently and without a moment's warning to his old time friends or members of his family, broke into the theatrical business and has succeeded in placing before the public two plays, one of which was produced in the Maryland Theatre Saturday night. Of the other let the Argus have its say, as follows:

Leo J. Rasche, news editor of The Grafton Sentinel, has recently made his debute as a legitimate playright. The title of his product is "A Mixture of Mixups," and, as the name implies it is full of amusing situations induced by a continual mixup. It is full of rich humor and delicate situations and is a success. A road company is now producing the play in this State and previously toured Indiana and Ohio. Mr. Rasche is a gifted and talented writer of news, and now he has arrived as a writer of plays. He has likewise won his spurs as an eloquent and brilliant orator all of which bespeaks better and larger things for our brotner of the press. Congratulations.

BARTERING OF BETTY

By ANITA CAVENAUGH.

"Just why," queried Billy as meekly as his 178 pounds would permit, "are you jilting me? Here is your ring. I bought it today." He tossed the jeweled circle on the table before them.

"Oh, Billy, what a beauty? May I try it on for a minute?"

"For as long as you like. No other woman will ever wear a ring of mine." There was bitterness in his young heart.

"I wish you could put it on, Billy, just as if nothing had happened."

He saw the tears glittering on her lashes and suddenly caught her hands in his own.

"What is it, Betty dear? What's gone wrong since last night? Be honest with me, girl!"

Betty glanced about her apprehensively. "Somebody will hear."

"I took great care to bring you straight to my den."

"For heaven's sake, Betty, why this suspense? Let the ax fall. Have you discovered that you don't care for me, after all?"

"No, Billy. I love you better than anything else in this world."

"That settles it," said Billy, slipping the circle of big diamonds on her finger. "Neither man nor devil can take you away from me now."

Betty looked down at the auburn head bent over her hand. "Don't, Billy!" she cried sharply. "Don't make love to me. If you do, I never can give you up, and father says—"

"So—your father objects."

"Only on principle, Billy."

She took the ring from his finger and handed it to him solemnly.

"He says that I am keeping you from getting a good business start, that you have no head for figures."

"In other words, he thinks I'm no man, just a plain boob."

"No, he believes that you are clever, but he says you never take anything seriously, that you are only in love with me temporarily. You won't want me after you get me," sighed Betty.

Billy lookked at her, and his pulse throbbed as he caught her and held her close to him. "I am going to show father a thing or two," he said. Hearing footsteps, he released her.

A man supported himself, swaying by the curtains in the doorway.

"I beg pardon," he said thickly. "Didn't mean to disturb you and the lady. I—I was just looking about, yeu know—"

As he spoke, Billy covered him with the little pistol he had taken from the table drawer.

"Up with your hands! Quick about it!"

The stranger's expreasion changed perceptibly.

"I've had a little too much. That's all. Don't make a row. I'll go now."

"Not with the property of my mother's guests in your pockets. Your drunken ruse does not work with me. Betty, please touch that bell by the window."

When the servants had answered the summons, and the thief lay bound on the floor, Billy proceeded to search him

"There's father's watch," screamed Betty. "The one grandfather gave him. And mother's horseshoe of diamonds! What a bold thief!"

The police made a quiet entrance to take their prisoner. Billy and Betty went downstairs to return the spoils. Everybody was busy playing bridge. Not one of them had discovered any loss.

"What time have you, daddy dear?" asked Betty stopping by her father's chair.

There was consternation on his face when he felt in an empty pocket.

"Why, I—I," he floundered miserably, not caring to announce a loss in his friends' house.

Billy held up his valuable old watch. "How many of you have lost jewelry tonight?" He opened a box full of pins, trinkets and a string of pearls worth a king's ransom.

"My pearls!" shrieked Mrs. Stanley Weyland.

"My horseshoe pin!" cried Betty's mother.

"My emerald bracelet," moaned Kitty Melears. "It's the one you gave me, Dick."

"Quiet," ordered Billy. "I have everything. There's the thief!"

He pointed to the stairway where two policemen could be seen leading away their prisoner.

"How did this happen, young man?" Betty's father was perturbed. He was annoyed that any man could take his watch without his knowledge. He had prided himself all his life on his ability to read character. "The fellow did not look like a thief."

"People, like things, are not always what they appear," suggested Billy meaningly. "I may not look like a business man myself but I am going to make you look to your laurels in that Snyder-Mynatt suit tomorrow. And I suppose I might as well tell you since you'll have to know it anyway, I am going to marry Betty."

"Upon my soul, you astonish me, sir!"

"My dear girl," whispered Betty's father to her, "don't tell Billy what I said about him. I can't afford to have him for an enemy. Tell him that I will be proud to welcome him into my family. Tell him anything you like. So he's the young scoundrel who is about to beat me out of that fifty thousand in the Snyder-Mynatt case. I won't put up with it. He ought to leave business for us older lawyers and have a good time. He's too young to take life seriously yet."

OPTOMETRIST

IS Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 30 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 20 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientific accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

(f.o.b. Detroit)

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country

See This Innovation

A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.

They were sold on these startling facts:

That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.

That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.

That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.

That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.

Think What This Means

Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.

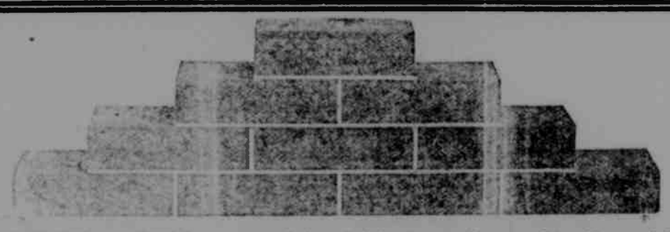
Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far undersells any Four in its class.

You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.

A Distinguished Car

In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.

Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.



Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.

And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.

Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

LAWTON'S GARAGE
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

W. H. KAHL & SONS have started their brick plant and are making Pressed Brick and Building Blocks of the highest grade at the lowest price. We can guarantee them for all purposes that they can be used, such as Brick Buildings or brick and blocks combined. Ornamental Brick can be seen at their plant. We can color them to suit as desired at a small additional cost. We have a nice pile of them now on hand, selling price $12.00 per M.

¶ Never be afraid to buy a pressed cement brick or block that comes of the home press.

1st. Are superior to tamped brick.
2nd. Are equal to pressed clay brick.
3rd. Compete with pressed clay brick in price.
4th. Better than common clay brick.
5th. Compete with common clay brick in price.
6th. Combine the advantage of concrete and clay
7th. Lay faster than other brick.
8th. Are used by U. S. Government.
9th. Lay easier than other brick.
10th. Perfectly true.
11th. Perfectly uniform.
12th. Specified by architects.
13th. Uniform'y dense.
14th. Clean, sharp corners on edges.
15th. Beautiful texture.
16th. Law absorption.
17th. Absolute fire proof.
18th. Do not deteriorate.
19th. Harden with age.

Be Sure You Get These Two Points:

¶ FIRST.—A building must have 253 12 foot stories to secure enough weight to cause these brick to crush under their own weight.

¶ SECOND.—This is the practical way in which any competent architect would figure the load these brick will carry. He would allow a factor of safety of four; consequently he would specify these brick for a building SIXTY-THREE (63) Stories high. Do they build that high in your locality?

Temperance

HAVELOCK IN GRAPHIC STORY

General Sir Henry Tells of Generous Deeds of Soldiers Who Were Without Alcoholic Drink.

The following extract, which is taken from the "Narrative of the War in Afghanistan," by General Sir Henry Havelock, that gallant and glorious soldier of whom one of his contemporaries said that he was "every inch a soldier and every inch a Christian," provides very comforting and encouraging reading to those who have read the excesses of British and other troops of war in the old drinking days before the Army Temperance association was existent or even thought of.

Commenting on the forbearance of the troops at the taking of Ghuznee, in 1839, Sir Henry wrote:

"Though Ghuznee was carried by storm after a resistance stout enough to have roused the angry passions of the assailants, the Afghans were everywhere spared when they ceased to fight. Let me not be accused of foisting in unfairly a favorite topic, or attempting to detract from the merit of the troops, when I remark how great a degree the self-denial, mercy and generosity of the hour may be attributed to the fact that the European soldiers had received no spirits since July 8, and had found no liquor among the plunder of Ghuznee. No candid man of any military experience will deny that the character of the scene in the fortress and citadel would have been far different if the soldiers had entered the town primed with arrack, or if spirituous liquors had been discovered in the Afghan depots. Since, then, it has been proved that the troops can make forced marches of 40 miles, and storm a fortress in 25 minutes without the aid of rum, behaving after success with a forbearance and humanity unparalleled in history, let it not henceforth be argued that distilled spirits are an indispensable portion of a soldiers' ration."

This sane deduction of an experienced leader of troops in the field is quite in keeping with the findings of the present day, which amply witness the truth that troops fight better, march better, endure better, and are healthier, happier, and stronger without alcholic beverages.

BEER HABIT SHORTENS LIFE

No Man Who Drinks Much of the Malt Beverage Is the Equal of the Man Who Lets It Alone.

Dr. S. S. Lungren, one of the leading homeopathic physicians and surgeons in the country, who has been practicing in Toledo for a quarter of a century, says: "Beer drinking shortens life. Physicians decide that the heart's action is increased 18 per cent. in its efforts to throw off alcoholic stimulants introduced into the circulation. The result is easily figured out. The natural pulse is, say, 76 per minute. Multiply this by sixty, number of minutes in an hour, and by 24 for the hours of the day, and add 18 per cent. to the sum total, we will find that the heart has been compelled to do extra work during that time in throwing off the burden of a few drinks (4.8 ounces of alcohol) equal to lifting 154½ tons lifted one foot high. The alcohol in the beer causes a dilation of the superficial blood vessels, as it does in all of them. This gives the ruddy look, which is really an unhealthy congestion there and everywhere—heart, brain, stomach, lungs, liver, kidneys—it breaks down, weakens, enfeebles, invites attacks of disease, and makes recovery from any attack or injury precarious and difficult. Everywhere it is degeneration. No man who drinks much beer is the physical and mental equal of the man who abstains."

Love's Open Vision.

A loving soul is superior to circumstances and gets gain from adversities and disappointments. We are familiar with Paul's saying that "all things work together for good to them that love God;" but perhaps we do not realize as we should that this result is not an arbitrary reward, but is conditioned upon the characters of our hearts. The love of God cannot make all events blessed for us till it dwells within us. God loves everybody; but the blessedness of being served by all events can be apprehended only by those who love him. Love finds the combination that unlocks every treasury of good. To be spiritually minded is both life and peace. We need not be the slaves of circumstances, but make them what we will. Their results depend on what we are. In every world the loving heart will find heaven.

Can't Afford to Drink.

I never drink. I cannot do it on equal terms with others. It costs them only one day, but it costs me three; the first is sinning, the second is suffering, and the third is repenting.—Sterne.

Dangerous Prescription.

"In prescribing alcohol for the cure of a disease, you set up one a thousand times more dangerous than the one for which alcohol is prescribed."—Dr. C. J. Russell.

Wide Choice of Thermometers.

In America is used the thermometer of Fahrenheit, a German; in Russia that of Celsius, a Swede, and in Germany they use that of Reaumur, a Frenchman.

Part of the Profession.

When a man makes politics his profession he begins to cultivate the habit of seeing only one side of a thing.—Chicago Record Herald.

Mr. John Felty, one of Garrett county's former residents, spent Sunday in Oakland with his family. Mr. Felty's lumbering operations located at Rowlesburg, require his presence there except on Sunday which he spends with his family here.

Prof. C. Edward Bender went to Baltimore last Thursday night to attend the annual meeting of the heads of the State High Schools, which was in session in that city Friday and Saturday, Prof. Bender returning home to Oakland Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Dixon recently entertained quite a number of their friends at their handsome home on Second street. About twenty guests were present, lunch being the chief attraction. Late in the evening delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. Scott Gilpin, of Swanton, was in Oakland Saturday and while in town he called at this office and added his name to the constantly growing subscription list of The Republican. Mr. Gilpin can entertain you with great hunting stories, especially coon stories.

Editor Leo J. Rasche, of the Grafton Sentinel, Grafton, W. Va., spent Saturday evening in Oakland where he witnessed the staging of his play, "Experiences in a Hotel," which was presented to an Oakland audience for the first time. The play was greeted by a fairly good-sized audience.

E. A. Weimer is selling overcoats at one third off regular prices, and lots of cold weather to come—good time to buy. Advertisement.

Dr. C. J. Kraft, who recently came to Oakland for the purpose of practicing his profession, has secured as his office the building occupied by Dr. J. Lee McComas when he was actively engaged in medicine. Dr. Kraft's family arrived Thursday evening and they are occupying one of the Sincell cottages on Liberty street.

Mr. Charles S. Davis, of J. M. Davis & Sons, hardware merchants, left Oakland last night for Cleveland, Ohio, where he expects to renew contracts for the manufacture of the Davis Steel Range for the ensuing year. From Cleveland Mr. Davis will go to Pittsburgh to attend a meeting of the hardware associations of that city.

Tuesday night at the Maryland Theatre one of the finest feature moving picture shows to be seen in the country was produced for the benefit of the local people, the title of the five reel show being "A Prisoner in a Harem." Those who fail to attend the Maryland at stated intervals when such shows are produced miss a rare treat.

Last Friday when our citizens were hugging their stoves to keep warm and when 10 inch ice covered the ponds and lakes, Mr. Charles Davis, of the firm of J. M. Davis & Son was closing a contract with a large ice cream freezer company for 100 freezers to be delivered next spring. Charley must expect a hot summer.

Mr. P. E. Finzel, for several months past engaged as a tie inspector by the Baltimore and Ohio Railway company, but who along with a number of other men engaged in the same line of work, were laid off prior to Christmas, has been appointed teacher of the Jennings school and has assumed his duties. Mr. Finzel is an excellent instructor.

A Woman's Suffrage meeting, at which about fifteen ladies were present, was held at the home of the editor on last Thursday night, when Miss Trax, representing the State organization, made an address, setting forth the objects of the organization, which was followed by a lively discussion in which nearly every lady present joined. A permanent organization may be formed as a result of this informal meeeting.

We publish in this paper today the reports of the condition of several Garrett county banks, showing the financial status of those institutions at the close of business on January 13th, at which time a report was called for by the Treasury Department at Washington. The reports we print today show that Garrett county's banks are in a healthy state and that the residents of the county, reflected by the statements of the banks, are prosperous and are constantly adding to their bank accounts.

Last Friday County Treasurer J. B. Emory sold at tax sale five pieces of realty located in Garrett county upon which the taxes were due and in arrear. Two pieces were sold to individuals, while the County Commissioners, on account of there being no bidders, were awarded the other three tracts. Ex-County Treasurer R. L. Fries will offer several tracts and parcels of land at tax sale tomorrow, the sale to occur at the front door of the court house at ten o'clock in the morning. Some good bargains may be secured in the purchase of these lands by parties interested sufficiently to attend the sale.

Former State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, of Garrett county, was elected on last Thursday president of the Maryland Conservation Association, which organization was permantly formed at a meeting held by those interested in the conservation of forests, water ways and other natural resources. Senator Brown's election as the executive officer of this forganization, which had been recognized by the National Government as one of the best features of educating the public to the importance of conserving our natural resources, recognizes his ability as a forester and one who will devote much of his time to the labors of the office.

Mr. L. A. Rudisill, whose appointment as messenger in the Maryland Senate was announced in these columns last week, and which appointment was secured by the efforts of Senator Speicher, left Oakland Monday night for the commonwealth's seat of government, Annapolis, where Mr. Rudisill will be engaged during the balance of the Legislative session. Mr. Rudisill's appointment is a just recognition of the service he rendered during the campaign, and which came to him unsought. Nevertheless he has expressee his appreciation of the favor conferred and will no doubt render excellent service to the members of the Senate.

Mr. Wallace Brown, son of ex-Sheriff and Mrs. Austin Brown, arrived home from Anaconda, Montana, last Friday morning, coming in a day or more ahead of the time he was expected. Mr. Brown was a patient in a hospital in Anaconda for two or three weeks before he left that point for home and is still in a very weak condition. The many friends of this young man were glad to welcome him home again. He went to the gold fields of Nevada from Oakland early last spring in company with Messrs. George Weber and Francis Gonder, the former being now located within a few miles of Anaconda, while the latter remained in Nevada, where he has interests in a promising gold mining proposition.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

Mr P. T. Garthright, who was paralyzed on the 13th of June, 1913, is still confined to his home, at Mountain Lake Park, and is not able to dress or undress himself, makes an earnest appeal to all who know themselves indebted to him in any way, by book account, note or judgment, to make an earnest effort to help him in this time of his great need. Mr. Garthright has no income whatever and must depend upon the collection of amounts due him to provide his daily bread and meet his personal obligations. If you cannot pay the full amount due me, please send me as much as you can. I can use any kind of farm produce. I will greatly appreciate a prompt response to this appeal. I am only pleading for a portion of my own, in all kindness, and believe me, as ever, a friend to the needy, and rejoicing in affliction, trusting and hoping in God for a better home than earth can give, through the merits only of Jesus.

I cordially invite every one to call and see me at my home.

Most sincerelly,
P. T. GARTHRIGHT.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers

Good Roads Committee in Congress favorably reported a bill for $25,000,000 federal aid for good roads, conditioned upon equal appropriations by the states.

Rev. W. W. Morris, who was the popular pastor of the Grantsville circuit of the Methodist church, the past few years, but now stationed at Bruceton, W. Va., has received twenty new members into the church. He and family received a liberal donation recently.

Kline, the underselling merchant of Cumberland, again uses The Republican to advertise great reductions in certain lines of goods. This is the third page advertisement of this firm to appear in this paper in the past few weeks. A glance through the paper will convince the most skeptical of the popularity of The Republican as an advertising medium. The paper "is a business getter." A hint to the wise is sufficent.

Rev. W. W. White is conducting revival services at Blaine. He was assisted for three days last week by Rev. H. A. Brown, presiding elder.

C. J. Yoder, of Grantsville, took in the poultry show at Frostburg last week. He reports the exhibition of poultry very fine.

Mrs. Ed. Dasher, and two children who had been visiting relatives in Parsons, W. Va., has returned to her home in Kitzmiller.

Mrs. Fred Livengood, Grantsville, has as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Hilliary Broadwater, of Union Bridge, Md.

George Layman, of Newell, Iowa, is visiling his sister, Mrs. Ralph Engle, at Grantsville.

Grantsville last week was the scene of many sleighing parties. Frostburg, Sailsbury and Boyton, Pa., and other places furnished several parties, and our own people had out their sleighs. Everybody seemed to be having a good time. The National Hotel and Hotel Victoria furnished supper to quite a large number of the visitors.

The seventh boy has arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Urban Stanton, of Grantsville. There is only one girl in the family.

Gilead Broadwater, one of Grantsvilles progressive merchants had business in Frostburg last week.

Hon Thomas J. Johnson, of Garrett county, was in town yesterday. Wednesday he sent to the Poultry Show a mammoth turkey, and as there are few of that family on exhibition, he is almost sure to win a first prize.—Frostburg Correspondent, Cumberland Times.

William Welch, formerly of near Sunnyside, this county, died at his home in Keyser, W. Va., January 14th, from the effects of a fall he had Jan. 3d. The funeral services were held in the Keyser Lutheran church Saturday and interment took place in Queen Point cemetery. Two children are residents of this county, Porter Welch and Maggie Welch.

About 50 school children, of Salisbury, Pa., took a sleigh ride to Grantsville recently and had a delightful ride and a joyous time as might be expected.

Mrs. Sara Roberta Getty of Grantsville, was recently called to Friendsville, by the death of her brother-in-law.

Miss Rose McMahon, of Garrett county, Md., and William B. Wagner, of Salisbury, Pa., were married Jan. 10th. They will reside in Boyton, Pa.

Oakland High School Notes.

Some very interesting talks have been given by the following: Bernadette Hart, "Parcel Post Bill," Bernard Faherty, "The value of an Educaton," Guy Ashby, "The Importance of a Business Education."

Gladys Browning has been sick for the last week but is now able to be with us.

The O. H. S. girls basket ball team will play the Terra Alta girls in Brown's Hall, Saturday, Jan. 24th.

Prof. Bender attended the State High School Teachers Association at Baltimore, Jan. 16th and 17th. While there he visited the Eastern High School. He gave us a very interesting account of his visit to the Eastern High School, Monday.

Rev. William Shearer gave us a talk on "The Bethleham Star" at our exercises last week.

We were surprised and pleased to receive the following letter from Mr. R. E. Sliger, of this city:

Mr. C. EDWARD BENDER, City,

DEAR SIR:—It is my desire to offer a gold medal, suitably inscribed, to the Class of 1914 of the Oakland High School, who excells as determined by the teaching force of this school, in the following qualifications necessary for well equipped young men:

I. Scholarship. Under this shall be considered the grades of the young man as set forth in the record book of grades covering the last two years of the work of the school.

II. Literary Society Work. Under this shall be considered the ability of the young man to express his thoughts in public, as well as the ability to properly prepare such thoughts.

III. Athletics. Under this shall be considered the interest and ability of the young man in the athletic events of the school, necessary for proper physical developement.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) R. E. SLIGER.

We appreciate very much the interest shown by Mr. Sliger in the school.

Two Weak to Wear Coat—Couldn't Speak Above a Whisper Emulsion Cured Him.

John D. Bear, Elkton, Va.

Dear Sir: Eight years ago I was a great sufferer from weakness, weak lungs and pleurisy and coughed night and day and raised and expectorated a quart in 24 hours. I had as many as four or five night sweats in one night, my pulse would run as high as 140 and my temperature was about 103. I was so weak I could hardly walk to the diningroom. I had no appitite and everything I saw nauseated me. I couldn't stand the weight of my coat on my shoulders, and could not speak above a whisper at times. I was in one of the best sanitariums in the South, but seemed to be growing worse every day and was about to give up when a friend asked me to try Emulsion. I did so and had taken it but two days when I began to improve. My appetite improved, and I felt stronger, I coughed very little, my lungs stopped hurting me and it was not long until I could walk two miles a great deal easier than I could walk around the sanitarium before taking the Emulsion. I took 18 bottles and today I am a well man and owe a great deal to Emulsion.

Sincerely,
C. T. HARNSBERGER.

Anyone who doubts the genumess of this testimonial will please write to Mr. Harnsberger, at Elkton, Va., who will take pleasure in replying.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

SENATE OF MARYLAND.

Thursday.

After a brief session the Senate adjourned until noon Tuesday. Twenty-four senators were present, the three absentees being Shepherd, of Dorchester; Collier, of Talbot, and Chesley, of St. Mary's.

A message was received from Governor Goldsborough, containing the report of the Board of Public Works, which was read and referred to the Committee on Finance, hereafter to be appointed.

A message was received from Governor Goldsborough urging the passage of legislation to put into effect the constitutional amendments which were voted upon last fall. Senator Harper moved that the Senate go into executive session. The motion was carried.

The following nominations were confirmed.

V. E. Bolder, of Garrett county, to be supervisor of elections of that county, succeding T. W. Savage, resigned.

Mrs. Irma Scheidt, to be notary public for Cumberland.

The following orders were passed:

By Senator Hammond, of Howard: That the President order the secretary to furnish a sufficient number of backings for Senate bills.

By Senator Hammond: That the secretary furnish 25 files to hold the bills.

By Senator Hammond: That the secretary be given 200 copies of the permanent rules when they are printed.

By Senator Benson, of Baltimore county: That the secretary of the Senate have two screens placed at the main door of the Senate.

By Senator Hammond: That the secretary be furnished 50 files for the purpose of holding Senate bills.

HOUSE OF DELEGATES.

Thursday.

While the election of the state treasurer took up a large part of the session of the House, time was allowed for the enactment of various details of routine business and for the reception of messages from the Governor and the Board of Public Works. Ninety-eight delegates were present when the House was called to order. Messrs Webster, of Dorchester; Gatch, of Baltimore county; Reviol, of Baltimore city, and Price, of Worcester, being absent.

After prayer by Chaplain Alexander Galt and roll call, Mr. McNabb, of Harford, moved that the House proceed to the nomination of state treasurer, which was ordered.

On motion of Mr. Cummings, of Montgomery, the state librarian was ordered to furnish the House with 25 files for holding bills under uniform backings, and ordered that six typewriters be obtained for the use of House stenographers. Three hundred copies of the new House Rules were ordered printed. Eighteen keys to the committe room of the Baltimore city delegation were ordered delivered to the members. Five copies of House bills and two copies of the House Journal were ordered delivered to the librarian of Baltimore city in the City Hall, and a similar number of both to the Bar Library in the Baltimore City Courthouse.

On motion of Mr. Veasey, of Worcester, the Speaker was empowered to appoint successors to all House employes who resign during the session of the legislature.

A message from the Executive Office, signed by the Secretary of State and approved by the Governor, notified the House that the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company had agreed to provide adequate increased telephone service for the House and Senate members for a flat rate for the session of $1,700. This was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, to be appointed.

A message from the Governor called to the attention of the House the necessity of legislation to make effective the recently adopted Constitutional amendments. It was referred to the Judiciary Committee, to be appointed.

A message from the Board of Public Works in regard to contracts for printing for 1914 was referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. Altfeld's Progressive Bills.

Delegate E. Milton Altfeld, of the city delegation, has in preparation two bills which are in line with progressive legislation in other States. The first bill provides that children, when able to do so, shall be compelled to take care of their destitute parents, thus saving the State the expense of their care. The second bill will so amond the law as to increase the age at which girls in Maryland may marry to 16 years. Maryland and Louisiana are the only two States in the Union in which the legal marriageable age is 12 years.

Suffragists' Crusade.

The House of Delegates adopted an order introduced by Mr. Wilkinson, of Baltimore, giving the Equal Suffrage League of Maryland the use of the House Chamber on the evening of January 20 for a public meeting, of which Mrs. Donald Hooker and other female suffrage leaders will speak.

The Hagerstown Independent Band has been organized, with C. E. Shafer as president.

Charles Crawford was fined $25 and costs for killing two dogs belonginging to C. W. Davis, of Cecil county.

Benjamin Bayne, of Cecilton, who was accidentally shot in the neck while gunning, will recover.

Earl B. Woods, superintendent of the Montgomery county schools, has resigned on account of ill health.

Chief Judge William T. Clark, of the Cecil County Orphans' Court, is seriously ill at his home, near Northeast.

UNCLE SAM AS FARMERS AGENT

Unique Bill Introduced By Senator Borah.

PROPOSES CLEARING HOUSE

Says Trusts Have Done More For the Farmer Than the Government. Calls Competition Mother Of Waste.

Washington.—A popular government institution for the scientific marketing of farm products, to be known as the Agricultural Capital, to be separate from any existing branch of the government, was proposed in a bill by Senator Borah.

Designed primarily to eliminate middlemen and reduce the cost of living, to arrange transportation facilities and otherwise improve conditions of the farmers and consumers, the bill aroused considerable interest among senators by its radical suggestions, and was referred to the Agricultural Committee.

The institution would be controlled by a board of 15 directors. It would be made up of county organizations requiring at least 50 farmers in each county to form a branch association, each to conduct the marketing of all the crops of its members under rules and regulations to be drawn by the general board, which would be elected by the individual members every five years.

Earnings in excess of expenses, when it should become self-sustaining, and 3 per cent. would be returned pro rata to the members. Each branch organization would be controlled by a board of trustees and a general director and would serve not only as a clearing-house for marketing and standardizing the farmers' products, but would also be authorized to loan capital to its members and to assist in the production of crops.

Senator Borah explained that he had not written the measure, but had introduced, it together with a memorial at the request of E. H. Rettig, a farmer of Opportunity, Washington.

In the memorial Rettig submitted that farmers were neglected by the government and he made the declaration that the big trusts had done more good for the public than the government.

Asserting that competition is the mother of waste, Mr. Rettig said: "The law of business success is co-operative.

"Think of the stupidity of our national government," he continued, "encouraging its citizens to produce wealth and after it has been produced insisting on these same citizens contesting against each other for possession of the things they have produced.

RETAIL GROCERS ORGANIZE.

Form Association In Pittsburgh To Lower Cost Of Living.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Retail grocers of the Pittsburgh district met here and formed a jobbing association, through which they hope to eliminate the middleman and thus lower the cost of living. The leaders claim they will be able to make a reduction of from 10 to 20 per cent. in grocery goods by buying in wholesale quantities. Besides Allegheny county, grocers from 19 counties of Western Pennsylvania, five in Eastern Ohio and four in West Virginia joined the body. The association is capitalized at $1,000,000.

KILLS HIS FOSTER SISTER.

Boy Says the Gun Went Off During Struggle.

Easton, Pa.—Josephine Yutz, 12 years old, was shot and killed by John Harrison, 16 years old, on a farm near here. After his arrest the boy said the girl scolded him for shooting at cats in the barnyard and in an attempt to take the weapon away from him it was accidentally discharged. The shotgun with which the shooting was done was a Christmas present to the boy from Edward Transue, who had adopted the boy and the girl when they were very young.

FARMER SLAIN IN BARN.

Neighbor Who Named Him In Divorce Case Held.

Chardon, O.—Will Eggleston, 47, a farmer, was murdered here when he was surprised in his barn and shot. Sheriff H. J. Ballard and deputies arrested Edward Zimmer, a neighbor farmer, who was accused by Eggleston before he died. The officers attribute the deed to jealousy. Zimmer's wife recently sued for divorce and in the hearing of the case Zimmer testified that Eggleston was responsible for his family troubles.

WANT "T. R." AS COLLEGE HEAD.

University Of Washington Alumni Begins Campaign.

Seattle.—A meeting of the graduates of the University of Washington, including four former presidents of the student body, was held to set in motion a campaign for the election of Theodore Roosevelt as president of the university. The new board of regents is seeking a president and will hold its first meeting this week.

TO AID THE NATION'S BLIND.

Miss Wilson Arranges For Inter-State Exchange Of Literature.

Washington.—Under the direction of Miss Margaret Wilson, who has succeeded her sister, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre, as an officer of the National Library for the Blind, arrangements have been made for an inter-State exchange of literature printed for the blind. According to announcements made public the library will honor applications for literature from blind people throughout the country.

GEN. HUERTA MAY LEAD HIS ARMY

Reported to Be Preparing to Quit the Capital.

REALIZES IMPENDING DANGER

Particularly Mentions General Mercado, Who Fled From Ojinaga, Leaving That City To General Villa's Rebel Force.

Mexico City.—Relatives of the dictator admit that Huerta is getting ready to go away and said the report was that he intended to take charge of the federal troops in the north and attempt to regain Chihuahua City, now in the hands of the rebels.

In an interview, Huerta intimated that he would take the field personally against the constitutionalists. In his conversation with Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge d'affaires, at General Joaquin Maas' funeral Huerta complained bitterly against some of his generals, who, he said, were inefficient and open to suspicion of disloyalty. He particularly mentioned General Mercado, who fled from Ojinaga, leaving that city to General Pancho Villa's rebels.

Mercado, who was sentenced to be shot by Minister of War Blanquet, was accused of being a traitor and of refusing to fight, accepting bribes instead to escort wealthy Mexicans to the American border.

When it was rumored that Huerta was preparing to leave the capital many curious persons watched his movements as far as possible. There have before been circumstantial reports that Huerta was about to go away, but nothing came of them. Also, it was remembered that every Mexican ruler who has reached the end of his rope has left the country by way of Vera Cruz or lost his life in attempting to leave. Huerta, though, is essentially a fighting man. He has talked all the time of it being his duty to pacify his country. It would cause little surprise among the Mexicans and foreigners if he does take the field at the army's head.

COST OF THE REFUGEES.

Uncle Sam's Bill For Entertainment About $45,000 a Month.

El Paso, Texas.—Arrangements for caring for General Salvador Mercado and his 4,300 federal soldiers, who ran into the United States after being defeated by the rebels at Ojinaga, Mexico, were completed at Fort Bliss. The defeated Mexican soldiers and the 1,500 civilian refugees who accompanied them arrived here by ten trains from Marfa, Texas, to which point they are marching from the border.

The feeding, tenting and clothing of the exiled Huerta forces will be at the expense of the United States government. Estimates were that it would cost $45,000 a month to provide for the self-invited guests. Brigadier General Hugh L. Scott has ordered rations to be distributed at the rate of half a carload a day.

DIES SUDDENLY IN CHURCH.

Henry W. Griffith, Secretary Of the Norfolk and Western.

New York.—A man believed to be Henry Walton Griffith, of Philadelphia, secretary of the Norfolk and Western Railroad, died suddenly in All-Angels' Protestant Episcopal Church, on West End avenue. Cards bearing Mr. Griffith's name and an income tax receipt made out to him furnished the means of identification. The body was removed to a police station.

NINE BUILDINGS DESTROYED.

Ice Plant and Homes Prey To the Flames In Troy.

Troy, N. Y.—Fire destroying the big ice and coal plant of Haughney & Co., and eight other buildings, most of them residences. The inmates, scantily clad, were forced to flee from their homes and many of them lost their belongings. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

EGGS FROM CHINA.

Six Hundred Cases Enter San Francisco; Duty Free.

San Francisco.—Six hundred cases of eggs from Shanghai, China, were included in the cargo of the liner Siberia, which just arrived here from the Orient. These eggs were admitted duty free under the new tariff act. Under the 5-cent tariff 4,000 cases of eggs were [illegible] in San Francisco last year. Local merchants say the total importation will reach 20,000 cases during the ensuing year.

BILL TO AMEND THE SHERMAN LAW

Restraint "In Any Degree" Illegal Under Stanley Measure.

ABOLISHES "RULE OF REASON"

Kentucky Congressman Introduces Anti-Trust Amendment After a Conference With President.

Washington.—Representative Stanley, of Kentucky, after a conference with President Wilson, introduced an amendment to the Sherman law, which would make illegal the monopolization or restraint of trade "in any degree." It is designed to eliminate the "rule of reason" laid down by the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case.

The amendment also would invest the circuit courts of the United States with jurisdiction to restrain and prevent violations of the act, irrespective of the Attorney-General. It was drawn to meet the wish of the President, expressed in his last message to Congress, to reduce the debatable area surrounding the Sherman act. Representative Stanley discussed the measure with the President and previously had corresponded with him at length on the subject.

The Kentucky Congressman, who was chairman of the special committee which investigated the United States Steel Corporation, does not offer the measure as an Administration amendment, but believes it will be of service to the committees of Congress which will draft the anti-trust legislation.

Would Amend Two Sections.

The Stanley bill would amend the second and fourth sections of the Sherman law. In Section 2, into which the Supreme Court injected the "rule of reason," the words "in any degree" are inserted, so that the section would read:

"Every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person or persons to monopolize in any degree any part of the trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court."

Discussing that portion of Chief Justice White's decision which relates to unreasonable restraint of trade, Representative Stanley said that he had always regarded it as unnecessary to the decision and therefore not the law.

"Many, however, believe," he continued, "that the effect of this decision is to render illegal only such combinations in restraint of trade as are unreasonable. The insertion of the words "in any degree" with the other provisions will save the law as amended from any such interpretation and will render all restraints of trade illegal.

FOLLOWS MORGAN'S LEAD.

John Claflin Decides To Retire From All Directorates.

New York.—John Claflin, head of the dry goods firm of H. B. Claflin & Co., and president of the Chamber of Commerce, has decided to withdraw as a director in every financial institution on whose board he is a member. Mr. Claflin, in explaining his decision, said he was too busy to attend to the duties involved and has notified the financial institutions of which he was a director that he would decline a re-election.

ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS GAME.

Would Let People Vote On Equal Rights Question.

Boston.—The Massachusetts Association Opposed to the Further Extension of Woman Suffrage filed a bill with the clerk of the House which proposes that the question of votes for women be submitted to the people for a vote.

TO BE SURGEON GENERAL.

Wilson Selects Col. W. C. Gorgas, Of Panama Canal Fame.

Washington.—President Wilson has practically selected Col. William C. Gorgas, of the Panama Canal Commission, for surgeon general of the Army. The Colonel's friends expect his nomination to go to the Senate very soon. Colonel Gorgas attracted world-wide attention for his sanitation work in Cuba and later practically made the building of the Panama Canal a possibility by sanitating the isthmus.

ON A ROCK IN WASTE OF LAVA

Thirty-three Starving Japanese Refugees Are Found.

RESCUED BY NAVAL CREW.

They Hid In a Cave During the Eruption and Afterwards Climbed On the Rock and Sought To Attract Attention.

Kagoshima, Japan. — Telegraphic communication betwen this city and the north has been restored. The officers of the cruiser squadron sent by the Japanese government have taken charge of the situation and are rapidly restoring a semblance of order along the waterfront. Many of the people of Kagoshima have returned to the city. All their houses are in ruins and the returning refugees are compelled to camp in the open spaces. The warships brought a large stock of food and supplies, which are being freely dispensed.

The property loss in this city is immense. The clearing away of ashes and debris has not gone far enough to allow even an approximate estimate of the loss of human life.

A group of 33 refugees was rescued from amid a great waste of steaming lava at the foot of the volcano of Sakurajima. Their escape was little short of miraculous; with their rescue no living being remains, so far as known, on the entire island of Sakura.

The rescue was effected by a boat's crew from the Japanese flagship. As soon as the cruiser squadron arrived here crews were sent out to circle the island of Sakura, on which the volcano is situated, three miles out in the bay. The contour of the island has been entirely altered during the last week.

The sailors did not risk landing on account of the terrific heat and noxious gases, but made a systematic scrutiny along shore. The entire island was covered with smoking ashes and hot lava.

All was desolation and no sign of human beings was seen until late in the day, when an officer in one of the launches noticed something being waved in the air at a short distance from the shore. A detachment of men, heavily bundled to protect them from the heat, was landed. After a hard struggle they succeeded in making their way through soft warm ashes breast high until they reached a great rock. Sheltered behind this rock they found 33 people, still living, but coated with thick dust and weakened by starvation and thirst. Among the rescued was a school master who had borne with him from his school house the portrait of the Emperor; the village policeman, who had saved the records of the station house and the postal clerk, with a small bag of mail.

The refugees were taken on board a warship and provided with food and drink. They explained that they had hidden in a great cave near the shore until the rain of ashes was over and had then tried hour after hour to attract attention.

1,141 KILLED IN MINES.

Pennsylvania Casualties For 1913 In Coal Fields.

Harrisburg, Pa.—There were 1,141 mineworkers killed in and about the mines of Pennsylvania in 1913, according to a report just made public by James E. Roderick, chief of the State Department of Mines. Of these 615 were killed in the anthracite regions and the remaining 526 in the bituminous districts.

Pennsylvania's total cost production for the year is estimated by Chief Roderick at 258,000,000 tons, which exceeds the record of 1912, when approximately 244,000,000 tons were produced. The production of anthracite is estimated at 90,000,000 tons and the bituminous at 168,000,000.

The number of employes in the anthracite field is given as 180,000 and in the bituminous 185,000.

PEACE ADVOCATES' HOPES.

Think Beginning Of International Disarmament Near.

Washington.—The beginning of international disarmament would be the certain result of conclusion of the peace treaties now being sought by the United States, declared Representative Flood, of Virginia, to diplomats from virtually every civilized country in the world, gathered at a banquet in their honor of the House Committee on Foreign Relations, of which Flood is chairman. The dinner was served in the White Marble Hall of the Pan-American Building.

TO STANDARDIZE RADIUM.

Federal Bureau Gets Tiny Particle For Experiments.

Washington.—A tiny particle of radium, upon which the Federal Bureau of Standards will base its experiments in an effort to standardize radium in the United States, was received from Paris. It weighs 20 milligrams and cost $1,500. Only 30 grams of this substance are known to be in existence. The experts of the Bureau of Standards will experiment on radium in the same way that they have established weights and measures of less precious metals.

$700,000 RED CROSS MEMORIAL.

Building Will Be Erected On Capital's "Marble Row."

Washington.—Another notable addition to the national capital's beautiful "marble row" on Seventeenth street and almost within a stone's throw of the White House will be the magnificent Red Cross Memorial to the women of the Civil War, the site for which was announced by Secretary Garrison, of the War Department, chairman of the commission to select the location for the memorial.

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

Dun's review says:

"Bank clearings at the leading cities in the United States again make an indifferent comparison with those of a year ago, the total this week amounting to $3,012,848,071, a loss of 9.7 per cent., as compared with the preceding year. The most unfavorable exhibits appear to be made by the cities of the East."

Prince Edward Island is virtually the pioneer in rural mail delivery among the Canadian provinces. Eighty-six routes have been established in the island since the plan was undertaken in 1909-10.

DOCTORING A PROFITLESS FARM

By GEORGE H. DACY

Preparing the Ground by Taking Out All the Old Roots.

IF you were a countryman whose farm was not paying very well and an agricultural expert came along and said: "Let me show you how you can double and triple your present income," if the man looked sane and intelligent, you would doubtless jump at the chance. Furthermore, if he made good on his assertion he would win your everlasting gratitude and perhaps you would recompense him with a little cash bonus. Now this is just the opportunity that the farm management department of the Missouri Agricultural college is offering to the farmers of the "show me" state.

The department says: "Ask for our aid and we will show you how to tonic your sickly bank accounts and how to increase the profits of every branch of your farm." Even the most skeptical who, to begin with, made fun of the proposition have been silenced because the Missouri farm management department has made good on all its assertions.

Today some 500 local farmers are annually recording greater profits on the credit side of their ledgers as a result of following the advice and plans mapped out for them by the department.

An experiment in growing cow peas with corn on one of the demonstration farms. The peas will fatten from six to 10 western lambs at a profit of $10 per acre.

The department was organized in 1906 under the direction of Prof. W. J. Spillman of the United States department of agriculture, and F. B. Mumford, dean of the Missouri Agricultural college. For four years its work was confined to an accurate study of local farm conditions—a resume of the knotty problems of the Missouri farmer and how he could be best aided in solving them.

Then when the force was thoroughly conversant with the "star boarder" farms of the state and had planned an efficient campaign whose object was to eradicate the evil features of the unprofitable farm, they offered to help the general farmer re-map his system of management, his crop rotations, his methods of marketing his produce, and to adapt his line of farming to the region in which he resided.

Confidence in Organization Grows.

It was a case of "first come, first served," and after these business management doctors had cured a few severe cases of "loafer" farms and made them profitable and more productive, applications requesting aid came in like hot cakes from countrymen in all portions of the state.

As an illustration of what these expert farm managers could accomplish in rehabilitating a good farm which was run down, due to mismanagement, take the case of "Jim" Brown, who was considered one of the best farmers in his district; yet he, on the quiet, appealed to the department for aid.

A representative visited the farm and found it apparently in good condition, supplied with good buildings, and annually yielding bumper crops of grain and roughage, 30 bushels of wheat, 60 bushels of corn and two tons of hay to the acre.

It was a different story, however, when the expert examined the live stock. The dairy cows were scrubs of the worst variety, with staring coats and every rib showing, and with udders not larger than a man's two fists.

The swine and horses were also inferior specimens of twentieth century live stock, while the supply of farm machinery was in no sense modern and efficient. Here was a case of a countryman who was exerting all his energies toward the production of profitable crops, only to feed them to unprofitable live stock.

From 12 cows he obtained only enough milk to supply the need of his family of six persons. The department showed him where the leak was, and explained to him how he could harmonize all his operations and render his farm more fertile and profitable by maintaining better live stock. He acceded to their advice and today is gaining a profitable livelihood and yearly fattening his bank account under a standardized system of management.

Farmers Take Kindly to the Plan.

The popularity of this movement to rejuvenate sick farms increased to such an extent that a year ago the department organized the Missouri Farm Management association, the pioneer society of its character in America, the members being recruited from among the ranks of the owners of unprofitable farms who desired to nurse all the operations on their acreages back to a wage-earning condition.

The object of this association was to organize and combine the farmers of Missouri who were interested in practical system of farm management. It aided the department in so much as the countrymen who needed and wanted help were centralized in the organization, while it aided the farmers in so far as the department experts promised to visit and replan each place in turn. Two hundred earnestly interested farmers joined the society the first year, while at present the enrollment is double that number. Each countryman pays $1.25 membership fee, the funds being used to aid the department in its work.

Farmers Co-Operate With Department.

After his farm has been inspected by the department, in case a member of the society follows out the suggestions of the experts (although he is not in any way bound to carry out these suggested changes) he becomes a co-operator. The majority of the co-operators adhere strictly to the advice of the department.

Each year the department selects the best co-operative farm in each county and makes it a demonstration farm which conducts local experimental work under the direction of the experts. In the case of the demonstration farm, the department assumes the initiative and devotes as much attention to the place as is necessary to make it pre-eminently successful, and spares no pains in assisting the operators of these farms to bring them to the highest possible state of fertility and to the maximum point of profitableness.

On the other hand, co-operator must take the initiative in all phases of his work, although he receives aid and assistance from the department experts when he stumbles onto a knotty problem. At present there are 75 co-operative and five demonstration farms in the state, and each summer, public meetings are held on the places of the demonstrators, where typical and illustrative results have been obtained.

Farmers from all parts of the country are invited to attend these meetings at which prominent agricultural experts and authorities on farm management discuss the various lines of farming practiced in Missouri. At noon, a basket lunch is served by the ladies of the county in which the gathering is held, and in the afternoon the men visit each individual field, study the crop, and informally discuss the efficiency of the methods of seed bed preparation, planting and cultivation which have been practiced in the development of this crop.

Removing With Dynamite Some of the Largest Roots.

These meetings have been fittingly termed "Show Me Institutes on Legs," and are really regular motion picture shows minus the nickel.

Woman's Work Included in "Doctoring."

While the men are busy with their field study, their wives under the direction of an expert in home economics occupy themselves with the problems of the farmhouse. Efficient methods of replanning the home, home decoration, modern methods of cookery, the elimination of wastes and the utilization of by-products, handy aids in the kitchen, and the beautification of the farm yard are explained and discussed in detail.

The woman expert in charge of this work occupies herself throughout the year in visiting and remapping the systems of home-management practiced by the housewives who request her aid. She is a sort of a traveling home economics department which works according to the theory that if you cannot bring the farmer's wife to the college then take the college and science to the kitchen of the housewife.

She plans out the management of each home as practically and systematically as the home pocketbook will permit.

The Missouri farm management department also maintains a farm accounting branch which teaches the state farmers how to maintain a practical and business-like system of records and accounts.

One Missouri farmer last winter lost $300 on work stock alone, due to the fact that he had more animals than he could keep busy. It is really a question of each farmer studying out how many head of animals he can profitably maintain, and then not exceeding this number. The same thing is true of the scrub cows which eat up the profits of the other farm departments.

The work of the Missouri farm management department is state-wide in scope and is efficient in solving the problems of the five-acre farm, the 500-acre farm, or the farm whose owner merely desires to keep the wolf from the door, or to save his place from being burdened with a mortgage.

In a word, the department is devoting just as much attention and study to replanting an unprofitable ten-acre truck or fruit farm as it is to remodeling an 8,000-acre stock farm.

The Concrete Examples.

Among the practical results which the department has obtained in its first aid work to the farmers is the case of a 140-acre farm which, the first year it was worked, yielded ten bushels of corn, 15 bushels of potatoes, and one-fourth of a ton of hay to the acre.

The managerial experts recommended the use of better seed, the fall distribution of 15 tons of manure to the acre, and modern methods of culture; this farmer followed these directions and the second year afterwards he harvested 40 bushels of corn, one and three-quarter tons of hay, and 100 bushels of potatoes to the acre on the fields on which these crops were grown.

He was a man of very limited capital and the season he requested departmental assistance his assets amounted to $2,000, while his liabilities totaled $1,800. At the end of the second year following, he was out of all danger of debt and had a tiny sum stored away in the bank.

Another notable illustration of managerial efficiency resulted where a hog raiser on a rough, 160-acre farm shifted his troubles to the shoulders of the expert managers who set him right on his feeding system and got him to study market conditions and requirements, so that he last year realized $1,200 from the sale of his swine, whereas previously his high mark for hogs for a single year was $500.

Although ordinary work stock are not supposed to yield much of an annual profit another farmer cleared $300 in one year from his work animals subsequent to consulting with the departmental experts who advised him to decrease the number of work animals which he kept and to work the horses and mules more during the winter.

A city man, inexperienced in farming, struggled along for five years just about making ends meet and then he employed the assistance of the farm experts who diagnosed his troubles as a poor rotation, the use of scrub seed, and the under-feeding of his market animals.

He followed their directions, improving his methods, and now is gaining a profitable return from his made-to-order farm.

The farm has materially gained in fertility, it has increased in annual crop production and this year it paid off its back indebtedness and begins a new season with a clean slate.

Indian Legend of Interest.

When the Creek or Muskogee Indians adopted into their tribe the remnants of other tribes which were nearly extinct many superstitions were found among them. One of these tribes was the Tuckabatches. The legends of the Creeks state that the Tuckabatches brought with them seven plates, the origin and object of which have puzzled scientific men for centuries. The Tuckabatches claim that these plates were given them by their ancestors. They were not to be handled by all persons, only by particular men, and those chosen by the chief or micco of the tribe. Five of the plates were of copper and two of brass. The copper plates were about 18 inches long and seven inches wide; the brass ones being round and 18 inches in diameter, having two characters on them similar to the letters A and E connected. The plates were kept buried under the house of the chief and are believed to be still in existence.—Tallaquah (Okla.) Democrat.

Getting Things Ready.

Novelty Is Lamp-Shade Dress

AMONG the odd and novel ideas introduced in styles by Poiret last fall a few survived their introduction, among them the minaret dress, of which an example is shown here. A narrow skirt, under a wired tunic, which extends about to the knee, characterizes this mode. Americans called it the "lamp-shade" style, which title fits very well and explains more than "minaret."

The tunic or overdress, wired at the bottom to hold it away from the figure, is usually of transparent or semi-transparent material—Chiffon or lace, for example. The magnificent beaded and embroidered nets for very elaborate dresses have been much liked. But for the ordinary evening gown of crepe, satin charmeuse and other light fabrics, the tunic is of the same material as the skirt, and the bodice is made of lace combined with some of the material in the skirt.

In the gorgeous gown pictured here (an extreme of the style) the bodice is hardly more than a broad sash of lace wrapped about the figure and tied in a big butterfly bow at the back. A narrower scarf of lace passes over the shoulders and supports the sash. There is a small embroidered panel of beaded net finished with three large tassels at the middle front of the bodice, supported by invisible wires, probably about the edge. These large tassels are featured this season—another one of the successful ideas of the designer.

This bodice is not to be considered as an example of the usual bodice worn with the minaret gown. It shows the extreme which one may expect in some stage gowns. The sash, made of a scarf of lace, is an excellent idea, but the lack of any other draping over the shoulders than a crisp of light lace makes the bodice impossible for Americans. They have used these sashes in tulle and lace, with the big bows at the back, sparingly, and never without other drapery.

The features embodied in this gown have been repeated and developed in other ways very successfully. Skirts of moire, with tunics of chiffon edged with marabout or fur, are very successful. Also skirts of satin or crepe-de-chine with chiffon tunics, and soft lace bodies with draping and over-sleeves of chiffon are beautiful and effective.

Velvet dresses repeat the idea employing the velvet for the lower part of the skirt and silk for the upper part. Bodies of chiffon over silk and net are in the same color as the skirt with gulmps and undersleeves of white lace.

The head dress worn with the costume pictured is one of the prettiest which has appeared among the very elaborate styles introduced early. It is less pretentious than many designed for the opera and it appears among others that have been successful in bidding for favor.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

FANCY MARABOUT SET MUCH USED INSTEAD OF FURS

ALMOST as warm as furs and far less expensive, marabout sets have been growing in favor with women in the milder climes, and with those who wear furs only when the weather is very cold. They are very cozy, the feathers seeming to generate warmth, but they do not actually keep away the cold as well as furs do.

Marabout has been dyed in many colors this season and made up with short curled ostrich flues into very handsome sets. Women like them because they are very becoming accessories and do not need to be discarded indoors when one is to make a brief stay. The cape or stole thrown off the shoulders, and the muff carried in one hand, help out the toilette immensely. Even when a coat is removed, these with hat and gloves are retained on numbers of demi-dress occasions.

The neckpieces and muffs are made up of strands of marabout and strands of ostrich tacked together. Sometimes two colors, as black and white, natural and white, or white and the pastel shades, are combined. Natural color—a taupe gray—is the great favorite and a wonderfully beautiful color. Neckpieces are usually straight scarves, rather long, although there are capes and stoles in some variety.

The muffs are made up in plain shapes, not draped or in eccentric pattern, which have been popular in furs.

A good marabout set will last several seasons and promises to be increasingly popular. It is much better than any of the very cheap furs, in appearance, and quite as durable. If one wants the comfortable appearance and the real comfort of a neckpiece and muff, and a measure of elegance in the effect, marabout is much to be preferred to furs at the same price.

Black Is Serviceable.

Everything tends to make the black dress more attractive than it ever has been before. There is, to begin with, the new suppleness of the fabrics and their greater variety and decorativeness, too, and then the supreme grace of the draperies and the further possibility of letting the corsage of even the day dress merge into a soft-semi-transparency of chiffon or net, underlined with flesh pink, which would at one time only have been considered permissible in the evening toilette; the deep opening of the neck, too, and its finishing with a fold or frill of white, all combined to make the black dress entirely becoming to all complexions and ages.

So do not on any account miss your chance of looking your best in black this season—though, please understand, it is by no means suggested that you should give up colors, but only that you should take advantage of the possibilities of the black dress, which is such an obviously desirable and necessary possession for one and all of you, and which, being really as serviceable as it is smart, is a specially valuable asset to the woman who has to make both ends of a small allowance meet around a large number of necessities.

Sewing Room Hint.

When you are making a jacket and want to fit it on a stand, even if the stand is made to your measure, don't forget to put a fully trimmed bodice on the stand before you, put the jacket on it, for, of conrse, the jacket should be fitted so that it can be worn over any bodice without being tight; many amateurs fit their jackets on the stand, forgetting to put the bodice on first. The same may be said about winter bodices, that are to be worn over thick vests or slip-bodices, if thick underclothing is to be worn, it should be put on the stand before the bodice is fitted.

An odd idea in collar and cuff sets just out is to weave a Cupid's head in [illegible] portion of the design, the regulation pattern extending to the edges of the collars and cuffs.

CALLED FOR MUCH PATIENCE

Making of Arrow Heads Brought Into Requisition All the Art and Skill of the Indian.

Not all Indians can make arrow heads. This art was the special function of the older and more skillful men. Ishi seems to have been closely associated with the usual customs, he preserves many of the more highly developed arts and crafts.

In the manufacture of arrow heads, flint and obsidian were used by the Yanas.

Obsidian is volcanic glass, occurring in parts of California in the shape of dark opaque bowlders of small size. When splintered either by stone mallets or by another rock it appears as brownish or dark gray glass, uneven in color.

Ishi breaks these bowlders by hitting them with another rock. Having obtained fragments varying from 2 to 4 inches long to 1½ inches wide, and about a quarter of an inch thick, he is prepared to flake his haka or heads.

The first flakes are large and freely made, calculating to give by wide transverse lines of cleavage, and to establish the fundamental outlines of the point. Later these flakes are smaller and more like finishing touches. The tool he now uses is not horn but iron or soft steel.

Smaller tools are made of wire nails driven into wooden handles 6 inches long. These are filed to a flat rounded point, something like a blunt screwdriver.

In working the obsidian this edge is held vertical to the stone and the shaft of the flaking tool in the plane of the left palm. Apparently the soft metal permits the glass to make a small dent in it which engages the two and allows pressure being applied to the edge to be flaked.

As Ishi develops the form of his arrowhead to a graceful acute angle, he changes to a finer flaking tool, and resting the stone on his protected thumb, he then makes the little indentations near the base, which permit the sinew to hold the head of the arrow. Never once during this process does he hit or beat the obsidian. No rough force is required, just patient, artful dexterity and strength of fingers.

Activities of Women.

In the Colorado state penitentiary there are only 87 women as compared to 803 men.

No woman under forty years of age is allowed to drive her own motor car in Paris.

Mme. Pallier recently made a flight of 174 miles in an aeroplane, which is a new record for women.

Miss Annie J. Cannon, the most distinguished astronomer in the world, is cataloging 240,000 new stars.

Paris women are wearing half veils, which is regarded as a reversion to the Turkish habit.

Over 1,500 women weavers in Paterson, N. J., mills have decided to ask for shorter working hours and if they do not receive what they want they will go on a strike.

So that she will be able to learn the methods of just how the schools are run, Mrs. Lola Morgan, recently elected a school director in Norwood, Ohio, will attend school every day with her children.

The school children of Lane county, Oregon, will be taught road building, and Miss Goldie Van Biber, who will direct the work, will have charge of 700 square miles of country through which roads will be built.

Fastest Travel on Record.

The researches made by physicists of all centuries have proved that the hertzian waves move with the same speed as light, that is to say, at about 186,000 miles a second.

Three French scholars, Mr. Abraham, professor at the Conservatoire des Arts et Metiers; Major Ferrie and Mr. Dufour, have, under the auspices of the bureau of longitudes, just determined the speed of propagation of the hertzian waves between Paris and Toulon. Part of the result has been calculated, and the speed found is 295,900 kilometers to the second, with a difference of less than one per cent. for each determination, in comparison to the average.

They intend to measure this speed between the Eiffel tower and the station of wireless telegraphy at Washington, while the longitude of the capital of the United States is being determined.

Messrs. Abraham, Dufour and Ferrie propose to continue their experiments and to study the speed of the propagation of hertzian waves between two points separated by the sea.

Tea and The.

At a tea given at the Ruhl in Nice to the officers of the Mediterranean fleet, E. Royal Tyler, the well-known author, said, nodding toward a sign, "The Dansant," which might be translated "Tango Tea."

"A French maid, when I refused tea the other afternoon exclaimed:

"'But monsieur is not like his fellow countrymen, then!'

"'Not like them? How so?' said I.

"'Why,' said the maid, 'I picked up one of your American novels the other day, a Howells novel, and, though I can't read English, I saw that there was nothing but "tea," "tea," "tea" on every page. Now, people who talk so much about tea must be inordinately fond of it, n'est ce pas, monsieur?'

"She thought, you see, that our article 'the' had the same meaning as the' in French."

Expression Is Old One.

The expression "the devil to pay and no pitch hot" is of nautical origin, according to Brewer's "Dictionary of Phase and Fable," which says: "The devil is a seam between the garboard-strake and the keel, and the 'pay' is to cover it with pitch. In former times, when vessels were often careened for repairs, it was difficult to calk and pay this seam before the tide turned. Hence the locution, the ship is careened, the devil is exposed, but there is no hot pitch ready, and the tide will turn before the work can be done. (French payer, from paix, poix, pitch). [illegible] is used in quite another sense, meaning: 'Here's a pretty kettle of fish,' 'I'm in a pretty mess,' etc."—A. T. C.

Fresh Air and Catarrh.

Against this cause of catarrh (warm houses and foul air) there is only one protection, and that is the gods of the field and the woods, the west wind and the sunshine. Spend as much of your time as possible out of doors—and that ought to be always two-thirds of it in childhood—and resolutely bring the outdoors indoors at every hour of your working and sleeping day.

At the same time insist upon the most rigorous and scrupulous cleanliness of clothing, hands and person; of floors, carpets, walls and hangings—anywhere, in fact, where dust or dirt can lodge and germs can and do lodge. The more spotlessly clean and flooded with sunlight any house and its occupants can be kept, the more nearly germ free will they be.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson in Common Diseases.

Peculiar Welsh Superstition.

Women like rabbits are of ill omen to the miner. In many places, particularly in Wales, if a pitman meets or sees a woman on his way to work he will turn back, for such an encounter is held to forebode evil not only to the man himself, but all his associates. At Oswestry some years ago a woman was employed as messenger by one of the collieries, and in the course of her duties met many of the colliers on their way to work. The men immediately told the manager that they could not run the risk of ill luck entailed in meeting a woman on the way to the pit, and threatened to strike if she were not dismissed.

Fairy Tales Continued.

Red Ridinghood grew up and married a rich man. The other day she came back from Europe. Instead of a red ridinghood she wore an immense imported hat and her aigrettes were seized by the custom officers. Was not that exciting?

Cinderella's after life was humdrum. Her married life was more or less happy and she had many children. She uses the glass slipper now to spank them with.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

BRIDGE CLAIMS ANOTHER VICTIM TRIS MORNING

Flagman Albert Beck Knocked From Engine and As Result Will Die.

Flagman Albert Beck, a young man living at Keyser, W.Va., made his first, and unfortunately, his last run as an employe of the B. & O. Railroad this morning. At the time this is being written the young victim of an overhead bridge is lying at the point of death in Oakland.

Coming west on a light engine as flagman this morning about eight o'clock, after entering the service of the B. & O. last night, Mr. Beck was struck on the head by the overhead bridge on Alder street in Oakland, and fell to the track unconscious. He was conveyed to the B. & O. station where he was attended by Dr. Broadwater, who upon making an examination of his injuries found that he had suffered a fracture of the skull at the base of his brain and gave it as his opinion that the injured man could survive but a few nours.

A Fox Hunt.

On last Friday morning Mr. Benjamin Harvey, Charles Martin and the writer, accompained by three hounds, started for a fox chase on the mountain and we soon had a red one going some. After about two hours we succeded in bagging our game. Mr. Harvey, owner of Sandy, inquired how he came in the end of the chase. When told at head of the procession in great enthusiasm declared he would not take 50 for that dog.

P. T. LIPSCOMB.

Mr. Charles S. Davis returned to Oakland last night from a business trip of ten days which was spent in Cleveland, Ohio, and Pittsburgh Pa.

Dancing Academy.

A diversion that should find much popularity among the dance lovers of Oakland is the beginning of a term of a dancing class of the Floraine Dancing Academy, which will open Friday night in the hall of the First National Bank building. The class will run from 7.30 until 9 o'clock, and will be followed by assembly dance until 11.30 o'clock.

The instructors of the school are Messrs. Harry Fitzinger and Edwin [illegible], well known devotees of the dance of Grafton, W. Va., and the academy will doubtless prove popular.

SENATOR H. J. SPEICHER'S ANTI-CIGARETTE BILL

Introdnced In The Senate Last Wednesday.

The anti-cigarette bill, introduced in the Senate on Wednesday last by Senator Speicher, reads as follows:

An Act to add two new Sections to Article 27 of the Code of Public General Laws of 1904 to follow Sections 32 under the new subtitle "Cigarettes," to be designated as Sections 32-A and 32-B.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That two new Sections be and are hereby added to Article 27 of the Code of Public General Laws, titled "Crimes and Punishment," under the new sub-title "Cigaretts," to follow Section 32, to be designsted as Sections 32-A and 32B, and to read as follows.

32-A Any person who shall furnish to any minor, by gift, sale or otherwise, any cigarette or cigarette paper, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than twenty-five dollars for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense shall be liable for a fine of not less than one hundred dollars or more than three hundred dollars and to undergo an imprisoment in the jail of the proper County for a period of not less than thirty days or more than six months, and on failure to pay fine and costs of prosecution, shall be required to work the same out on the public roads.

32-B. Any minor being in possession of a cigarette or cigarette paper and being by any police officer, constable, juvenile court officer, truant officer, or teacher in any school asked where and from whom such cigarette or cigarette paper was obtained, who shall refuse to furnish such information, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any alderman, magistrate or justice of the peace, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than five dollars or more than ten dollars, and on failure to pay the fine and cost of prosecution, shall be sentenced to be confined in the jail of the proper county for a period of not less than ten days or more than thirty days.

Sec. 2. All Acts and parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed, and this Act shall take effect from the date of its passage.

Miss Margaret Hawley, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will arrive in Oakland tomorrow to be the guest for some time of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Ely at their home on Third street.

LACK OE ACTION IN THE LEGISLATORE THIS WEEK.

Not Much of Real Interest Transpiring —Local Measures Have Right of Way.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Jan. 28.

Citizens of Garrett county may be asked at an early date to decide by a referendum vote whether they desire the establishment of a poor farm and almshouse in the county. Delegate Harvey is preparing a bill providing for the creation of a county poor farm and the measure will probably be so amended as to permit the voters to decide the question for themselves. The idea of the bill is to create a rural community where the indigent poor may virtually support themselves by farm work and by which little financial aid will be needed from the county except for the original purchase of the plant. Whether such an idea can be really worked out to make the farm self-supporting remains to be seen.

In connection with this idea it is interesting to remember that the Board of State Aid and Charities in its recent biennial report has suggested to the General Assembly that the board be given absolute jurisdiction and supervision over all county poor farms and almshouses.

Responsibility for final passage of the Speicher local option bill will probably rest with members of the Garrett delegation in the House. Senator Speicher has carefully guarded his bill and yesterday by skilful maneuvering had the bill sent to be engrossed for the third reading tile and its final passage.

The Senator pulled the trick in the face of several citizens of Garrett, who are reported to have come here to lobby against the bill. The latter when introduced was sent to a select committee composed of Senator Beck of Kent, Senator Snader of Carroll and Senator Speicher. When the latter got wind that adverse interests were here to work against the bill yesterday he obtained a favorable report on the measure from his committee and had the bill brought up before the Senate. The favorable report was adopted without a dissenting vote. The whole thing was done so quickly that opponents of the bill did not realize what had taken place. Sentiment among members of the Senate is that the bill should be passed because it is purely a county measure and does not effect the people anywhere else than in Garrett. Therefore the bill's chances of passing the Senate are excellent and the situation is that the Garrett delegation will have to pilot the bill through the House after which a signature by the Governor is virtually certain.

Senator Speicher introduced today his regular bill appropriating $4,000 to the schools of Garrett county and this bill will have practically no opposition. Next week the Garrett Senator will introduce his measure providing for the extension of the corporate limits of Oakland.

There has been a hot race among two members of the Garrett House delegation for the honor of being the author of the anti-cigarette bill for minors, which is a state-wide measure. Senator Speicher introduced a similar bill last week and the measure is still in the Hygeine Committee. Likewise the two bills of the Garrett delegation are in the hands of the House Hygeine committee. The penalties prescribed by all these bills for violations of its provisions are so drastic that there will be bitter opposition to all the measures. There is also a strong probability that none of the bills will pass except in amended torm.

The general tone of the Legislature has fallen flat during the past few days. Few bills of a momentous and state-wide nature have been introduced so far. The Democratic state platform committee has sent in its first batch of bills but none of them have been reported from committees as yet. These bills include proposed constitutional amendments abolishing the fee system throughout the state, two bills providing for nomination of United States Senators, one by extension of the county unit system and other by direct mass vote, and still another bill to place the penalty on the vote buyer alone. The question of mass vote or county unit system of nomination will precipitate a bitter fight later on in the session. The woman suffrage bill has been introduced in the House and will soon be reported, but the measure stands no chance of passage by the lower house, though it will receive a larger vote than two years ago.

The State Roads Commission bill has been introduced in the House and the Senate will also receive a bill within a few days. Tonight the Gorman Democratic state platform committee will meet here to consider road legislation and workmen's compensation. Half a dozen bills providing for the latter are ready for introduction, but all of them have been held back pending a recommendation by the majority's platform committee.

To day Senator Speicher introduced a measure amending the Fifth District liquor law whereby it shall become unlawful for a saloon to be maintained within two miles of a school house and church.

FORMER OAKLANDER KILLED.

George Wiseman, Western Maryland Conductor, Lost His Life Tuesday.

George Wiseman, a native of Oakland, but moved from here a number of years ago to Elkins, West, Va., was killed on the Western Maryland Railway at Fairfax, West, Va., Tuesday afternoon about five o'clock.

The deceased was employed by the railway company as a conductor on a freight train and had just stepped from his caboose to the adjoining track when he was run down by a passing freight.

The body of the deceased was taken to his home at Elkins where he leaves a family of several children.

BOND.

The good citizens of Bond have noticed a scarcity of chickens of late, but since the three ministers have done so much good in their recent revival, there have been no complaints.

F. O. Glotfelty of Oakland, was seen in Bond on Thursday of last week.

L. F. Dorr, bookkeeper for Dimeling & Bloom, spent the week-end at his home in Clearfield.

Sam Swager has been fulfilling his duties as a truant officer and is keeping the youngsters out of the weather and n school where the able and efficient Miss Lohr can better administer a little learning.

Orville Stark and wife received quite a scare as well as sustained considerable damage last week when their house caught fire from a defective flue. Quick work by Ed. Miller and his yard crew soon had the blaze under control.

The Rev. McCamic had a narrow escape from serious injury while alighting from the passenger train at Bond station last week. As it was his fall down the hill resulted in a shaking up and a few minor bruises.

Elmer Broadwater visited in New Germany last week.

Mr. DeanBloom, of Dimeling & Bloom, transacted business in Philadelphia last week.

Geo. Drew & Co. are planning on starting a roller skating rink in the opera house in the near future. The venture should prove a success, judging from all past amusements furnished by the proprietors.

Patrick J. Laffey spent Sunday at his home in Frankville.

Mr. Stack O'Haver is overhauling his Brush runabout in preparation for the roads next spring.

We were glad to see the large turnout at Sunday school last Sunday. Church in the evening was also well attended at which Rev. Green preached.

Mr. Micheal Malone, from Niagara Falls, N. Y., is spending a few days in town trying to interest some of our people in real estate in that city.

Misses Jennie Boyer and Della Howell enjoyed a fine sleigh ride up Savage river last Sunday.

Extraordinary Attraction At The Maryland.

The management of the Maryland Theatre closed a contract recently by which one of the greatest moving picture features of the age will be presented to the audiences of that popular house on Friday evening of this week, the attraction being entitled "The Crusaders and the Redemption of Jeruaslam." This is a five reel feature and it is well worthy the patronage of the public generally.

Basket Ball Saturday Night.

What promises to be one of the fastest games of basket ball yet played on the local floor is booked for Saturday evening when the Pittsburgh Collegians will be pitted against the local team.

Yesterday was an ideal spring day, the themometer having mounted well up in the seventies.

Abe Martin says, "You don't have t' peddle a good thing."

Mr. Fred. T. Martin, who has been ill for some months past, being a patient in a Grafton hospital, was brought to his home in Oakland yesterday afternoon. While Mr. Martin's condition is no worse than it has been for a short timy, he is very weak.

Mrs. Scott T. Jones and Miss Grace Jones went to Baltimore this morning to remain several days.

Mr. William Miller spent Tuesday in Annapolis where he is interested in some legislative matters.

Mr. D. M. Lower, of near Wilson W. Va., was in the city yesterday on business.

On account of a lack of help in The Republican office this week, the paper is not up to its usual standard. One of the compositorial staff it ill and the work in our book and job printing department is such that the time of several of our employes is required in this branch of the establishment. Mr. Rudisill's absence is also greatly felt.

SANCTUARY FOR GAME HIS SCREME

Patapsco Preserve of 4.000 Acres Proposed by W. McC. Brown.

A game sanctuary of 4.000 acres, or very little less, in the heart of the game district of Maryland was the practical probability placed before the Maryland State Game and Fish Protective Association at its meeting in the New Howard Hotel, Baltimore.

At the request of the president, Dr. B. Holly Smith, President W. McCulloh Brown, of the Maryland Conservation Association and member of the State Board of Forestry, told what parts of this big preserve had already been secured and what would soon be added to it.

Mr. Brown also said that the Forestry Board had the power to make all rules for the preservation and of appointing men with the authority to make arrests and exercise the functions of game wardens on this land, provided it met their expenses and salaries.

One of the members asked Mr. Brown if this would or could be made into a game sanctuary. Mr Brown replied that sufficient power is already in the hands of the men who will control the big tracts of land and that they would gladly take such a step, provided sufficient funds were in sight to meet the expenses of salaries and upkeep. He suggested that if the Game and Fish Association wanted it badly it could guarantee the salary of a permanent game warden.

The idea took immediately with the members and so soon as the reservation has been gotten into shape and all the purchases made this Maryland Game Sanctuary of abont 4,000 acres of the best game breeding land along the Patapsco river will be pushed rapidly.

Mr. Brown also told of the big meeting to be held February 24 and 25 in McCoy Hall, at John Hopkins University, by the Conservation Association, with the support of all similar organizations in the state, at which men of national repute in the different departments of conservation would deliver lectures. There will probably be four sessions, with one devoted to an illustrated lecture on the conservation of game and fish.

One of the interesting features of the evening was the presence of Deputy Federal Game Warden D. C. Speenberg, who broke up the notorious game violations on the Susquehanna flats, Barnegat Bay and other noted hunting places for wild water fowl. Though he had not intended halting long in Maryland his attention was called to reports of shooting with heavy guns on the South river recently and of a few proposals to test the constitutionality of the law.

Mr. Speenberg took note of South river, and stated that a thorough test of the Federal law's constitutionality would take about $10,000 and five or seven years.

Though Talbot Demead, chairman of the legislative committee, was absent on account of a slight illness, it was stated that the law for a State-wide gunner's license of $1 and a uniform game law for the entire state would be pushed through the Legislature if possible.

As an evidence of the growth of the association, 70 new members were proposed and admitted at the meeting.

BITTINGER.

Everybody, except the confirmed cigarette smoker, are speaking very approvingly of Senator Speicher's anti-cigarette measure.

The M. J. Miller & Sons booze wagon visited this district last Saturday, and the people are crying how long must this traffic go on in a local option territory.

B. H. Wiley deputy treasurer, of Oakland, spent Sunday at his home here, returning to his duties on Monday.

A sled load of young people from this village attended church at Jennings on Sunday evening.

Donald Simpson, of the Backwoods settlement, was a pleasant business caller in this hamlet one day last week.

Miss Myrtle Wiley went to Cumberland last Monday and will spend some weeks in that city, visiting relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Bittinger, of near Jennings, spent part of last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wiley here.

Charles Buckle purchased a fine young driving horse last week and perchance some young lady will be well pleased and will enjoy many sleigh rides.

Deputy Sheriff George A. DeWitt purchased yesterday the old Shaffer or B. C. Feather farm lying immediately west of Oakland, the consideration being in the neighborhood of four thousand dollars. The property can be made one of the most productive pieces of realty in this community and is so closely situated with reference to town that its value as atrucking farm is considerably enhanced.

PARALYZED THIS MORNING.

Mr. Alphens Hinebaugh Is In a Serious Condition as a Resnlt.

Mr. Alpheus Hinebaugh, one ot the oldest residents of Oakland, suffered a stroke of paralysis some time during the night and was found in an unconscious condition this morning when members of his family went to his room to call him.

Mr. Hinebaugh's condition is considered by the attending physican, Dr. Broadwater, as serious. His entire left side is affected and he is speechless.

Oakland High School Notes.

Speeches were made by the following of the Senior class in the last two weeks: "Use of canary birds in escuing entombed minors," by Frederick Thayer; "Centralized School System," by Edward Chance; "Discovery and use of Radium," by Hellice Rathbun; "Study of English in England Schools," by Rhoda Welch.

Mrs. Stella Stern, a former student, visited the Senior class Friday.

Frederick Thayer was absent several days last week.

For the month of January the following students have made not less than 80 per cent. in each subject studied and 95 per cent. in conduct: Freshmen; Lillian Helbig, Pauline Jones, Winifred Weimer, Otis Harris, Dewey May, Felix Robinson, Julius Littman, Marie Finzel, Mildred Dixon; Sophomores: Clara Bush, Bertha Miller, Ada Murphy, Carrie Thrasher Mildred Thrasher, Edward Lewis; Juniors: Cheston Browning Dottie Doman, Grace Laffey, Edwana Peddicord, Leah Sincell, Russell Cuppett, Harold Dawson, Delbert Davis, Robert Garrett, Ross Isenberg, Playford Naylor, George Queer, Frederick Thayer, LaMark Ward; Seniors: Guy Ashby, Edward Chance, Bernard Faherty, Percy Thayer, Hellice Rathoun, Edna Shank, Rhoda Welch, Robert White.

The feeling of good fellowship among the students and teachers is of the highest type, The spirit of co-operation and earnest work prevails. "Onward" is our motto.

Left His Mark.

The First State Bank at Grantsville has in its collection of curios a piece of tree trunk upon the bark of which are carved the initials of a boy who lived there forty-nine years ago. The inscription is "C. J. M., 1865," and the lettering stands out plainly as the day it was carved, nearly half a century ago. The tree was a beech and was recently cut upon the farm of J. S. Miller near Bittinger, Md. It is believed by some to be the initials of one C. J. Miller who afterwards married a Miss Gnagey and moved to Ohio. If so, the gentleman in question will be doubtless interested to learn of the preservation of this relic of his childhood days.

Garrett County Postoffice Tests To Be Held March 14.

The Postmaster General has ordered a civil service examination of fourth-class postmasters in Maryland, to take place during March next. Eighty-nine such offices are located within the Sixth Maryland District, fourteen of them in Garrett county. The examination for these offices will be held on March 14th, at Oakland and Frostburg. It is open to all persons residing within the mail delivery of each respective office, of Accident, Bittinger, Bond, Crellin, Deer Park, Dodson, Friendsville, Grantsville, Hoyes, Jennings, Kitzmiller, Mt. Lake Park, Selbysport, and Swanton.

The salaries of these offices depend on the business done; when it rises above $250 a quarter, a new postmaster is appointed by the President. Persons wishing to take the examinations should write the Civil Service Commission for blanks and instruction papers, or to Congressman Lewis at Washington; or they may be had at the postoffice affected. Only the offices named will be examined.

The examinations, according to a semi-official announcement at the Postoffice Department, will be the controlling factor, absolutely, in the appointment of these fourth-class postmasters. The man who makes the highest average, no matter what may be his politics, will be given the job.

Heretofore, the postmaster has been designated from the first three men on the merit list, the Congressmen being given the privilege of selecting the man. Mr. Burleson will change all this. He will name the man who makes the highest mark.

As will be noticed quite a number of Garrett county points are omitted, these having been filled at previous examinations conducted by the local secretary of the civil service commission. Ottaway has a new postmaster in the person of Miss Craig, who recently took charge of the office while that of Bloomington was also recentiy filled.

Other points omitted from the list are Avilton, Sang Run, Altamont, Sines and McHenery.

Bought a Home.

The Framingham Evening News of last week prints in its real estate column an item of interest to our readers, relating to Rev. J. A. McClelland, who was pastor of the Presbyterian church here and whose many friends will be pleased to learn that he is prospering in his new field. The News says:

"During the month just closed Mr. Leavitt has sold for F. W. Andrews, a modern house at 162 Hollis street, to the Rev. John A. McClelland, pastor of the Hope Presbyterian church, who will take possesion in the early spring. Rev. McClelland has already made many friends in Framingham and his work is meeting with results that are most promising."

THE AMERICAN HOME

WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

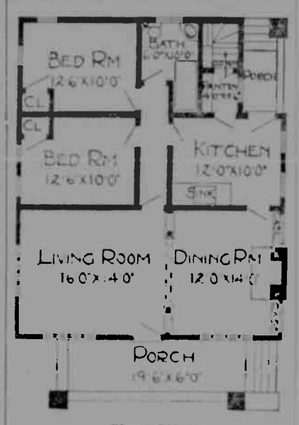
A few years ago a "cement house" was felt to be an "uncertain quantity!" and here and there, even to this day, we find a few lingering remnants of the old prejudice against this type of construction. But now that the manufacture of Portland cement has been mechanically and scientifically perfected, and experience has taught the world absolutely safe and reliable methods of using it in the mixing and structural application of concrete, people everywhere are coming in increasing numbers to recognize that the cement house may be just as attractive as any other, just as dry and healthful and light and cheery, and may possibly be in the long run just a little bit the most economical.

In the accompanying perspective and floor plan we illustrate a very attractive little house design especially adapted to cement stucco construction, a type of construction which is forging its way into increasing favor because of its pleasing appearance when appropriately designed, and its comparative cheapness. This house is of the characteristic western bungalow style. It is very compact and convenient in arrangement, all space being used to good advantage. Five good-sized rooms are provided, besides bath room and pantry, each room being very well lighted and each bedroom having a capacious closet.

Many practical builders have said that the bungalow is a fad, no doubt good enough, it is true, for southern California or the southern states, such as Florida and Louisiana, but in the main not suitable for practical building throughout the country at large. It has been affirmed that the cost of the bungalow style dwelling is far in excess of that of the ordinary type two-story house providing the same accommodations.

Criticisms against the bungalow have been due, not so much to the real characteristics of the style itself, as to the over-enthusiasm of its devotees, who have advocated it for purposes and locations for which it was never intended.

Designed originally for summer cottage work and for spacious building sites, preferably of a hilly nature, there have been too many instances where this type of dwelling has been squeezed into a narrow city lot and put in between high houses of two or three stories, much to the detriment of the typical bungalow style. Much very peculiar art has been perpetrated in the name of the bungalow, and it has to account for many freakish dwellings for which it is not in any way to blame.



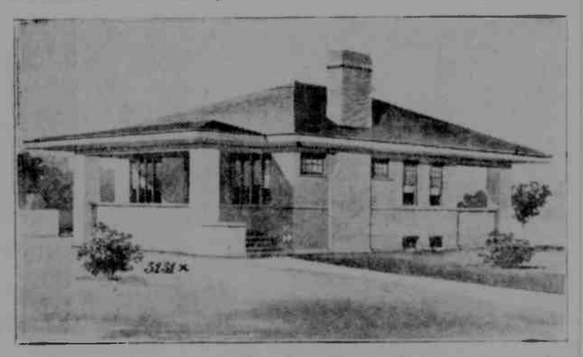
We have never happened to see a bungalow style office building, nor do we remember having heard of one; still, what is almost as bad, the bungalow style church is quite a common thing in many of our cities and suburbs. These are uses never contemplated by the originators of the bungalow in this country, and should not be charged up against the style. The bungalow, rightly understood, is an artistically designed cottage, and with in that sphere has some exceedingly creditable features of work to show.

The estimated cost of the house here shown ranges from $2,800 to $3,000, depending to some extent on the locality and on local market conditions of material and labor. The design has that simplicity and directness which are the keynotes characteristic of the bungalow style of house. At a cost no greater than for a plain, unornamented cottage with the same accommodations, a real home-like, cozy and attractive dwelling is secured.

The porch, as can be seen, is a prominent feature adding to the external appearance; and the same is true of every typical bungalow. This one is 6 feet wide by 19 feet 6 inches long, extending along almost the entire front of the dwelling, supported by massive pillars, and the coping of the inclosing wall affording a convenient scheme of further adornment by the use of flower boxes and vases. It forms not only the main decorative features of the front of the building, but serves the extremely practical end of being the outdoor living room for the family in summer weather.

Entering the house, we find the entire front portion given up to a living room, 16 by 14 feet, opening directly into a spacious dining room, 12 by 14 feet, the latter having a large mantel and fireplace adding much to the pleasing home-likeness of the interior. Both of these rooms are nicely lighted, and provide the accommodations for the necessary furniture for convenient housekeeping. The broad space in the dining room near the kitchen door is just the location which a built-in sideboard or buffet should have to be most convenient and ornamentally located. There are numerous stock designs for built-in sideboards, as well as for other pieces of built-in furniture, which can be had at very small cost.

The kitchen connects directly with the dining room, giving convenient service, and the pantry is also conveniently located near the back porch entrance and the cellar stair way. A hall leads directly from the living room back to the bath room.



Floor Plan.

Doors lead into this hallway, affording easy access also from kitchen and bedrooms to the bath room.

The bedrooms in this cottage both lie on the same side of the house. Each is 12 feet 6 inches by 10 feet, and well lighted, the closets forming a feature that will be much appreciated by the housewife.

The exterior material for this bungalow is Portland cement stucco, which lends itself readily to a great variety of schemes of ornamentation. The body of the wall may be either wood or steel framework or it may be built up of brick or concrete block or hollow tile. If built of molded shapes, the stucco may be plastered on directly; but if of framework, the stucco must be carried by lathing, preferably of wire mesh or of one of the forms of expanded metal lath, which must be fastened firmly to the frame, but sufficiently loose to allow for expansion and contraction, thus preventing the formation of cracks. The exterior finish may be of rough plaster effect, or pebble-dash, or may embody a color scheme secured by the use of colored aggregates exposed by brushing and acid-washing, or obtained by mixing mineral colors with the mortar or by the external application of appropriate color finishes. The use of mosaics of colored tiling or angular fragments of vitreous material, is another possibility that offers itself. The massive chimney leading up from the grate at one end of the dining room is in itself an important element in the exterior scheme of artistic ornamentation.

The Stork Brings Shoes.

A certain Kansas shoe firm has evolved an advertising scheme which at once contains an element of human interest and good business pulling powers. This house watches the local birth record carefully, and sends to each mother the following letter:

"We've heard the good news, and understand the stork left a "million-dollar" package at your home recently. That's fine—you have our congratulations.

"We sincerely hope the little stranger keeps well, grows strong and healthy, and proves to be a priceless addition to your family.

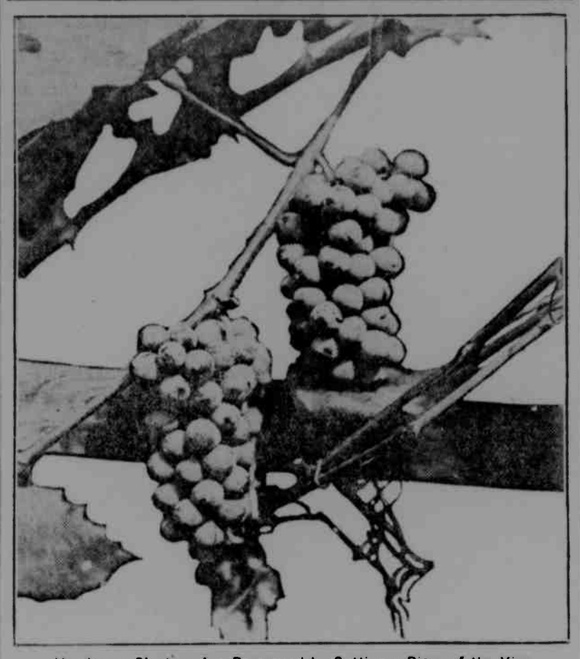
"May we have the pleasure of presenting you with its first pair of shoes? Cordially yours,

BLANK & CO.

"P. S.—Please bring this letter with you and receive baby's first shoes, with our compliments."

The results of this scheme have been astonishing, it is said.

Back to the Earth.



"If we are good we will come back to earth a number of times."

"Some people prefer to take no chances on that possibility."

"How's that?"

"They prefer to lead double lives now."—Kansas City Journal.

KEEPING GRAPES FRESH DURING WINTER

Handsome Clusters Are Preserved by Cutting a Piece of the Vine.

(By MRS. J. B. GLITZKE.)

If you have a cool, dry cellar or fruit-room and the best-keeping varieties, the question of keeping grapes in the winter is a simple one. At the great vineyards the grapes are brought in from the vines in long, shallow picking-boxes, holding perhaps forty pounds, which are stored one above another in the fruit houses and left there until wanted for market or other purposes.

Months after they come out as fresh as when picked. If the room is damp, or the grapes placed in too large or deep boxes, they will mold.

Thick skinned grapes like the Catawba, Isabellas, or Wilder keep best, while such tender skinned ones as the Concord are the poorest; yet I have kept Concords up to January by packing them in market baskets in dry sawdust.

A simple method is to place grape leaves between layers of grapes as you pick them, or sheets of paper. These keep the clusters from pressing against one another too closely, thus preventing mold and decay.

Handsome clusters are preserved by cutting a piece of the vine with each and placing one end in a bottle of water, also by covering the stem of the cluster at the point were cut with wax.

Remember to avoid too dry, too damp and too warm rooms. Grapes should be kept as near the freezing point as possible, and not freeze. Of course all this is a little trouble, but you will feel well repaid for it when you serve delicious grapes at your Christmas and New Year's dinner.

One grower keeps grapes in the following way. Pick them on a clear day, using grape-scissors so as not to handle much, removing all imperfect berries and placing in clean, dry, earthen jars in layers a bunch deep and filling the jar in this way.

Put a double sheet of paper over the top layer, and over this the cover of the jar. Strong, unbleached cotton is pasted entirely over the cover so that no air can possibly enter. When this covering has fully dried and hardened, the jars are buried on a dry knoll below action of frost, a stake being driven in over each jar to show where it is when wanted.

Catawba, and similar thick-skinned grapes keep well in this way.

HOW TO SUPER A COLONY OF BEES

Among Other Things See That Each Honey Box Is New and Clean With a New Starter.

(WARD H. FOSTER, Bee Inspector, Colorado Agricultural College.)

The super, or case that holds the pound section honey boxes, should be placed on the hive before they get the lower hive filled with honey. See that each honey box is new and clean with a new starter of comb foundation securely placed in the center of the top of each box. If you sell honey for shipping it is highly important to have a narrow strip of thin comb foundation at the bottom also. The best filled sections are secured where wooden separators are used between the rows of honey boxes. Look into the boxes twice each week to see that none of the starters pull off when the bees begin to draw off the wax. If they do drop down or come loose, remove the honey box and put in another starter or a new ready prepared box. The starter can be fastened by using a warm knife dipped in soap suds, pressing the edge of the wax starter into the wood. When the super is half full of honey, put another super on top and as soon as the bees begin working in it place it below the first super which will probably be ready to remove a few days later.

Injurious to Apples.

Do not use red cedar as a wind break tree near an orchard. It gives a harbor to one stage of the apple rust which is very injurious to apples.

COMPLETE ERADICATION OF DODDER PEST

Dodder—Is a Leafless Annual With Very Slender Red or Yellow Stems. Is a Degenerate Parasytic Twiner. Dodder Is Common in Low, Weedy, Places, and Is One of Our Greatest Pests.

The Missouri experiment station has found as the result of analyzing a great many samples of alfalfa that as much as 28 per cent. of these samples contain dodder while in the case of red clover seed 16 per cent. of the samples carried a percentage of dodder.

Dodder grows in a peculiar way and instead of feeding upon the soil like other plants, it lives upon the juices of the legume. In appearance it is a "yellowish leafless vine." It entwines the legume plants and if it is not checked it will entirely destroy the crop.

The destruction of this pest means that a drastic measure must be applied, namely, the cutting of the infested portion of the field and the burning of the product when it has become dried out. It is suggested by Prof. J. C. Hackelman of the Missouri station, that where the patches are small it will pay to scatter straw over the surface before burning in order to insure complete eradication. Special attention is called to the fact that the removal of infested hay from one part of the field to the other can only result in contaminating a larger area.

Ducks and Geese.

Ducks and geese will stand rather low temperatures if they are sheltered from the wind and the floor is well bedded with clean dry straw. They should be given their liberty whenever they choose to go outside. Their shelter should open toward the south. A house of this style is a splendid shelter for ducks and geese and costs very little to build. The ducks and geese run together in the house except at feeding time, when the ducks are fed at a separate trough.

Spray for Insects.

For a spray to be applied to nests and roosting places to kill insects, mix three parts of kerosene to one part of crude carbolic acid of 95 per cent. strength. Stir this mixture before it is used. It also may be used as a paint as well as a spray.

Covering for Cement Floors.

Cement floors in the poultry house should be well covered with straw. The bare floor is too hard and too cold.

The KITCHEN CABINET

WE CALL him strong who stands unmoved—
Calm as some tempest-beaten rock—
When some great trouble hurls its shock;
We say of him: "His strength is proved."
But when the spent storm folds its wings,
How bears he then life's little things?"

WINTER SALADS.

One really has a large field to work from during cold weather by using canned vegetables. There is hardly a meal that all the food is consumed, and a few peas, with the sauce removed, added to the same amount of peanuts and half as much in quantity of chopped sour pickles with a salad dressing, makes a good salad.

A good salad dressing which is reliable and which can be varied as to seasonings is the following. Beat four eggs until foamy, add a half cup of sugar and then turn in a half cup of hot mild vinegar, stirring in a double boiler with the egg whisk all the time it is cooking. The dressing will be creamy, rich and delicious. The amount of dressing needed may be used with whipped cream for fruit salad, with the addition of a little salt.

Hazel Nut Salad.—Shell and blanch filberts or hazel nuts and chop rather fine; do not grind. Then add a cup of grated pineapple, two chopped apples, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a little powdered sugar. Let stand, and serve with salad dressing added just before serving.

Marshmallow Salad.—Cut ten cents' worth of fresh marshmallows into quarters with the scissors, add a half cupful of nuts broken in small pieces, the same amount of dates seeded and cut. Pour over a cupful of sweetened whipped cream, stir and mix well, then add a few maraschino cherries.

Date and Cottage Cheese Salad.—Remove the stones from dates and fill with sweetened cottage cheese. Roll the dates in chopped nuts, then in salad dressing and again in nuts. Garnish with candied cherries.

Sweetbread Salad.—Cut cold sweet breads into small pieces and set on ice. Arrange a bed of lettuce and dispose the sweetbreads in it mixed with nuts. Pour over any boiled dressing and serve very cold.

Cold cooked beets cut in even cubes and mixed with nuts and salad dressing which is colored with the beet liquor makes a most appetizing salad. A little celery and apple may be added for a change.

Any kind of cold cooked fish or canned salmon makes a good salad. Mix with celery, chopped sour pickles and salad dressing.

Balzac says: "If there is anything sadder than unrecognized genius it is a misunderstood stomach."

THE OYSTER.

Huxley's definition of the oyster is "a delicious flash of gustatory lightning." He, with nearly all lovers of the bivalve, will admit there is no cooking which improves it. It is at its best in its own liquor, fresh on the shell.

For stew the oysters should be carefully handled, to remove all bits of shell or a pearl, perhaps, then washed and scalded in their own liquor until the ruffles curl. Have the milk hot, add the seasonings to the oysters, and pour over the hot milk; reheat and serve at once. To have a good stew one must have good rich milk and be lavish with the butter.

Oyster Kabobs.—Put into a stew pan a small chopped onion, add a tablespoonful of butter, and cook the onion until it is yellow; add a tablespoonful of flour, a few chopped mushrooms, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley and enough of egg yolk to make the mixture stick to the oysters when rolled in it. Put a half dozen oysters on a skewer, then dip the skewer into bread crumbs and egg until well covered. Then fry in deep fat. Serve a skewer to a person.

Pigs in Blankets.—This is not a new way of serving oysters, but it is one which is well liked. Wipe good sized oysters, season and wrap with a thin slice of bacon, skewer with a toothpick and bake in hot oven until the bacon is crisp.

Oysters Boiled.—Throw the oysters in the shells into boiling water and let them boil for five minutes, then take up carefully and serve with melted butter.

Oyster Rarebit.—Break into small pieces a half pound of rich cheese, put into a sauce pan with a tablespoonful of melted butter and set on the back part of the range and slowly melt. Cook a pint of oysters until plump, then drain and keep them hot. Beat the yolks of two eggs, add the oyster liquor and the oysters, and stir in the melted cheese. Serve on the untoasted side of a piece of browned toast.

Any cooked oysters, wheher escalloped, stewed or otherwise cooked, will make a good salad when chopped and mixed with vegetables of various kinds. When cooking oysters escalloped, it is well to remember that more than two layers of oysters will never cook well, the inner layer being undercooked.

The entire object of true education is to make people not merely do the right things, but enjoy them—not merely industrious, but to love industry—not merely learned, but to love knowledge—not merely pure, but to love purity—not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice. —John Ruskin.

THE HOMELY TURNIP.

There is no more delicious, sweet, juicy vegetable, if taken fresh from the field, than the turnip, and its tender crispness is enjoyed eaten from the hand, as is a carrot. If the vegetable is well masticated they are every bit as good as a radish in the menu.

If the turnip is not tough and full of fiber, it is most deliciously served boiled and mashed, with plenty of butter for seasoning.

Slices of boiled turnip fried until brown make a good accompaniment to sliced cold roast.

English Turnip.—Pell, slice and cut in dice sufficient turnip, then boil in salt water, season with butter, pepper and salt, and serve hot. Any of the turnip which is left may be combined with potato and served with dressing on lettuce.

Turnip Straws.—Cut the turnip on a vegetable slicer into straws, cook in salted water until tender, then saute in butter until brown. Use as a garnish for roast or turkey.

When mashing turnips add to the butter, pepper and salt, a tiny pinch of mustard, and lastly a few tablespoonfuls of cream. The addition of mustard must be done with great care. The French people are fond of turnips prepared this way.

Turnip in White Sauce.—Cut turnip in cubes or dice and boil until tender, then serve in a rich white sauce made of a cup of thin cream, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour. When the butter is bubbling hot add the flour, and when that is well mixed add the cream and a half teaspoonful of salt.

Turnip Fritters.—These are as good as parsnip fritters and make an agreeable change. Take a small amount of mashed, seasoned turnip, drop into a fritter batter until coated, then fry in deep fat.

There is no preservative and no antiseptic, nothing that keeps one's heart young like sympathy, like giving one's self with enthusiasm to some worthy thing or cause. —John Burroughs.

A FEW FROZEN DISHES.

Frozen dishes are quite as popular in the winter as in the warm weather. Here are a few worth trying:

Coffee Frappe.—To a quart of coffee infusion add six tablespoonfuls of sugar. Strain through a cheese cloth and pour into the freezer. As it thickens add the beaten whites of two eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and continue to freeze. Scrape down, remove the dasher and pack to ripen for an hour or more.

Maple Mousse.—Whip a quart of cream until thick. Break the yolks of three eggs into a bowl and beat until light, then add gradually one cupful of maple sirup. Mix well, then stir gradually into the cream. Pour into the freezer without the dasher, cover and pack in ice and salt for four hours.

Lemon Sherbet.—Boil together two quarts of water and a pint of sugar; cook until clear, skimming if necessary. Squeeze the juice from six lemons, add a little of the grated rind. When the sirup is clear pour in the lemon juice, add a tablespoonful of gelatine which has been softened in a quarter of a cup of cold water, cool and freeze. The whites of two eggs may be added in place of the gelatine if so desired. The ice does not melt so readily and has more body if gelatine or eggs is added.

Lemon Milk Sherbet.—Take the juice of three lemons, two cupfuls of sugar and a quart of rich milk; strain the lemon juice, add a bit of rind, if it is liked, and when the sugar is dissolved, freeze.

Another, fully as good as the above, is three oranges, three lemons, a pint of cream and sugar to sweeten.

California's Mountains.

Things are wonderful principally by comparison. There are 60 or more lofty mountain in California rising more than 13,000 feet above sea level which are not considered sufficiently noteworthy among all the surrounding wealth of mountain scenery to have even received names, according to the United States geological survey. Any one of these mountain peaks, if situated in the eastern part of the United States, would be visited by thousands of people yearly. But California has 70 additional mountain peaks more than 13,000 feet high which have been named, or 130 in all, as well as a dozen rising above 14,000 feet.

CALLED FATHER OF SCIENCE

Truly Wonderful Thinker and Inventor Was Archimedes, Famous Through the Centuries.

On December 10 of the year 212 B. C. perished the great Archimedes, murdered by a brutal, ignorant Roman soldier, as he sat with bowed head in his house at Syracuse thinking out the mighty problems of science.

Archimedes was born at Syracuse, Sicily, B. C. 287, and was therefore at the time of his death seventy-five years old. He was the greatest man of his day, and will ever rank as one of the profoundest thinkers and reasoners of all time. In mathematics and natural philosophy he had no peer on earth, and it is not too much to say that he is fairly entitled to be called the "father of science." He would have discovered the differential calculus had algebra been known in his day, and he came very near doing so even as it was. He anticipated the astronomical system subsequently worked out by Copernicus. He laid the foundation of hydrostatics. He invented the method for the determination of specific gravity. He formulated the true theory of the lever and uttered the ever famous words, "Give me whereon to stand and I will move the earth." In theoretical mechanics no advance was made upon his ideas during the eighteen centuries between him and Leonardo da Vinci.

It was Archimedes who invented the endless screw, the most important mechanical contrivance known to science. From the teeming brain of the old Syracusan came also the idea of the screw pump, the hydraulic engine and the burning mirror. He was the creator of the catapult, the artillery of the olden time, whose dreadful bolts were the terror of ancient armies. He invented another engine, the ponderous claws of which, reaching over the walls, lifted up ships and their crews and then suddenly dropped them into the sea, while with his great "sun glasses" he was able to set on fire such of the enemies' ships as could not be reached with the grappling machine.

It took the world 2,000 years to produce the equal of the mighty intellect that was brutally snuffed out by the blow from the mace of that brutal Roman soldier.

Baths of Sea Sand.

The very latest beauty bath is that composed of hot sea sand. Some famous beauties have the sand brought direct from Coney Island or Long Island in barrels.

These baths are fairly expensive, but then it is claimed that they do infinite good to a certain quality of skin—that white skin which so often accompanies red-gold hair and a peach complexion.

The hot sea sand bath is prepared in rather a peculiar way. A large sheet is placed on the floor and covered thickly with smoking hot sand. Then the "patient" is wrapped up in the sheet and quietly massaged. After five minutes the "patient" is rolled over and over a dozen times and then again massaged. By this time the sand is cool and the operation finished, unless a very enthusiastic beauty lover has the courage to begin all over again.

After the sea sand bath is over a strong hot sea water bath is taken, and this is followed by a delicious douche of cold, faintly scented water. Next comes the cup of coffee accompanied by a roll and then—half an hour's repose!

Lesson in English.

Many travelers have the unfortunate failing of attributing ignorance and backwardness to everyone who wears the strange garb and observes the strange customs of a foreign land. Often, as in the case of the tourist in China that the New York Tribune tells of, there is a rude awakening.

When his steamer touched at Hongkong, the tourist was delighted to see a Chinese woman in the costume of her country come on board ship. She was the first Chinese woman that he had seen in the native dress, and he determined to take a picture. Advancing to within a few feet of the little woman, he leveled the camera at her, and began to exclaim loudly in amateur pidgin English:

"Me takee picture! Can catchee? Can catchee?"

The Chinese woman looked at him in deep disgust, and replied in perfect English:

"You can catchee, but you may not."

Turning, she walked away. She had been graduated from an American college the year previous.

A Fair Offer.

It was at the moving-picture show. In front sat a young woman, very pretty and modishly costumed, with her son, a youngster of perhaps six years. Just behind sat a young man—a good-looking young man—a well-dressed man. The young man watched the young woman very much more closely than he did the screen across the stage. For the first quarter of an hour he did not dare to speak to her. But she was so attractive that he cudgeled his brains for some excuse to begin a conversation. At last he hit upon the idea of pretending he was a stranger—a foreigner—in need of information. He leaned over and said in his best French:

"Pardon, madame, may I address a few words to you?"

The six-year-old escort turned around with a courteous inclination of his curly head.

"If you wish, sir," said he, "I will translate for you. My mother does not understand French."—New York Evening Post.

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

WOMAN IN BAD CONDITION

Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Montpelier, Vt. — "We have great faith in your remedies. I was very irregular and was tired and sleepy all the time, would have cold chills, and my hands and feet would bloat. My stomach bothered me, I had pain in my side and a bad headache most of the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me lots of good and I now feel fine. I am regular, my stomach is better and my pains have all left me. You can use my name if you like. I am proud of what your remedies have done for me."—Mrs. MARY GAUTHIER, 21 Ridge St., Montpelier, Vt.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

Mr. Altfeld's New Bill.

Mr. Altfeld, of the city delegation, introduced a bill by request, authorizing building and loan associations to invest their funds in interest-bearing securities.

Panama Exposition.

Mr. Cummings introduced a bill in the House appropriating $5,000 for the expenses of a commission to arrange a proper representation of Maryland at the San Francisco Exposition.

The Public Schools.

The State Board of Education met and discussed the several bills which have been prepared carrying out its recommendations for greater efficiency in the primary schools and more stable qualifications of teachers. Governor Goldsborough has given his approval to the bills.

For Cigarmakers.

For sanitary reasons Senator Curran would make it unlawful for any one engaged in the manufacture of cigars to stand or sit upon any mould, form or press used in making cigars while these are being manufactured. The minimum penalty for violation is fixed at $100 for the first offense and $500 for the second.

The Liquor Question.

St. Mary's county joined Garrett county in asking for a county-wide vote on license or no license for sale of liquor. Mr. Jones was the author of the St. Mary's county bill, which was referred to the Committee on Temperance. Thus far no bills have been introduced to prohibit the shipment of liquors into "dry" counties.

Governor's Expenses.

In conformity with the law Governor Goldsborough submitted to the House a statement showing how he had expended during the past two years the contingent fund of $20,000, $10,000 per annum, placed at his disposal by the General Assembly. The total expenditures were $17,214.82. One of the items is $2,887.45 expended with employment of Burns detectives, who investigated the lynching of a colored prisoner at Brooklyn, Anne Arundel county, on Christmas morning, 1911.

Board Of Forestry.

A bill introduced by Senator Benson confers more extended powers to the State Board of Forestry. It authorizes the appointment of a forester who has had not only practical but technical training, and, instead of limiting the salary to $2,000, permits the board to fix the compensation. He shall appoint, subject to the approval of the board, such assistants as may be necessary, whose pay shall also be fixed by the board. Authority is also given to employ such labor as is necessary to develop and protect State reserves under their jurisdiction. In addition to timber culture the practical utility of water conservation is also to be demonstrated. Provision is also made for tree planting and care of trees.

To Stop Pot Hunting.

Senator Mudd has prepared a bill which concerns hunters for game for commercial purposes. It prohibits the sale within or without the State of partridges, pheasants and woodcock killed or otherwise taken within the boundaries of this State. The measure is along the lines of the New York game law and has for its object the breaking up of pot hunting and the preservation of game birds. There is no interference with shooting by sportsmen in season.

"Unless some such law is passed," said the senator, "these game birds will be exterminated. Already there is a scarcity caused by the slaughter by pot hunters who sell their feathery victims here and elsewhere."

The law is to apply throughout the State and at all times.

To Abolish Fee System.

President Price introduced in the Senate five constitutional amendments prepared by the Gorman committee for abolishing the practices in vogue under the fee system.

The measures apply to the following offices:

Registers of Wills.
Clerks of the Court.
State's Attorneys.
Sheriffs.

Payment of all fees into the State Treasury with provision that the payments for clerical hire and other expenses shall be made by the State, instead of the fees being retained by the officials and the expenses deducted before they are turned in, is a feature of all the amendments.

Under "miscellany" salaries are limited to $5,000. This fixes the pay of Sheriffs. The constitutional limitation is now $3,000, but the Sheriffs of Baltimore city are supposed to have made their offices net them about $15,000.

Efforts are also made in the changes to insure uniform charges and uniform accounting.

If the changes are to be made three-fifths of the members of each branch of the Legislature will have to approve them, as well as a majority of the voters.

Anti-Cigarette Bills.

The anti-cigarette crusade, which has already appeared in the Senate, broke out in the House. Mr. Shantzer, of Garrett county, introduced a bill prohibiting the sale and smoking of cigarettes in that county. Mr. Savage, of the same county, followed with a State-wide anti-cigarette bill. His bill imposes a fine of $25 on each dealer who sells cigarettes and $5 on each person in whose pockets are found cigarettes or cigarette papers and who smokes cigarettes. The two bills were referred to the Committee on Hygiene.

MARYLAND NEWS IN SHORT ORDER

The Latest Gleanings From All Over the State.

Miss Annie Bradley, of Connecticut, has been appointed a physical training teacher at Tome Institute, Port Deposit, to succeed Miss Knauss.

The Bricklayers' Masons' and Plasterers' Union, of Hagerstown, has put in a demand for a wage scale of 50 cents an hour, effective April 1.

A movement has been started by a number of business men of Chestertown to establish an autotruck line between there and Easton.

Peter Dorey, 67 years old, a retired chief master at arms in the navy, dropped dead. He was a native of Greece, and retired from the naval service several years ago.

The Maryland State Teachers' Association has elected Charles H. Kalb, of Westminster, president, and N. Price Turner, of Salisbury, secretary and treasurer.

A Jersey Cattle Breeders' Association has been formed in Harford county, with Judge William H. Harlan president and treasurer, and C. E. Lloyd, secretary.

Frederick Appel, 72 years old, while picking coal along the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks near North Point was struck by a passenger train and instantly killed.

Congressman James H. Slayden, of Texas, has accepted an invitation to address Tome Institute, at Port Deposit, January 31. His subject will be Mexico and Mexicans.

While crossing Bear Creek, Aberdeen, Peter Hebner, 43 years old, broke through the ice and was drowned before assistance could reach him.

Seth J. Ellis will begin erection of a business building at Delmar soon on his lot on Railroad avenue. The building will be three stories high and will be constructed of cement blocks.

The Cecil Chautauqua Committee met at Perryville and organized by electing Henry M. McCullough chairman and John H. Terrell secretary, the date of the opening session being June 5, 1914.

In conjunction with three others, Johns Hopkins nurses, Miss Mary Alden Hopkins will open a hospital at Princeton, which will have the support of Dr. John M. T. Finney and other noted surgeons.

After a cessation of two years the Linganore copper mines, near New London, the property of the United Mining, Milling and Copper Smelting Company, began operations Thursday. About $14,000 was spent equipping the old plant under the management of Thomas A. Dunshee.

The building of an up-to-date flour and feed mill at Delmar is being agitated by local capitalists. The old plant burned down more than a year ago. Many farmers now have to go to other towns in consequence, and there has been a decided decrease in the amount of business done by local merchants since the loss of the mill.

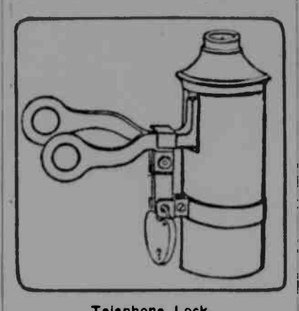
Banks of Frederick gained in deposits in the last six months $144,074.26. The total sum on deposit is $7,907,752.20. The total resources of the banks are $10,506,837.07. The three national banks have on deposit $5,334,370.60, the two savings banks $1,866,362.19 and two trust companies $707,019.47.

Dr. Thomas B. Horton, of Curtis Bay, has resigned as a member of the Democratic State Central Committee for Anne Arundel county, and Sheriff John E. Potee has been appointed to the vacancy by Dr. George Wells, chairman, and his colleague, former Sheriff Frank S. Revell. No explanation for the resignation of Dr. Horton is given.

A delegation of Capitol Heights citizens, comprising Judge John E. Weast, William Beavers and M. C. McKay, consulted with the Prince George county delegation in Annapolis and secured a promise that a bill would be passed directing the County Commissioners to issue bonds in the sum of $15,000 for the erection of a 10-room school building there.

The Maryland Democratic Editorial Association held its annual meeting at Annapolis, elected officers and discussed various matters of interest to the rural press of the State. W. Meade Holladay, editor of the Advertiser-Republican, Annapolis, was re-elected president, and W. S. McCombs, of the Havre de Grace Republican, secretary. Among the questions discussed was that of inducing the several railroad companies to publish their time-tables in the papers. The co-operation of the Public Service Commission will be asked. Following the meeting, the editors were entertained at luncheon by President Holladay at Carvel Hall.

Although there is an over supply of sweet potatoes in the Delmar section, white potatoes are very scarce and are now selling at $1 a bushel. Local dealers state they will bring from $1.50 to $2 per bushel by the early spring.



A number of workmen have been put to work in clearing away the debris of the buildings at the Havre de Grace track which were burned last fall. It is reported that new buildings will be built of steel imported from a New York race track.

dard. A fastening bolt, with a yoke at the top, is made fast to the stem of the receiver hook and fits into the ends of the collar. This bolt also has a hole in the end, and when this hole and those in the metal band register, a padlock may be slipped through them and locked. The switch lever is thus held down and it is impossible to get a connection. This device is easily adjustable to any phone, but it would seem to be easily circumvented by a person ingenious enough to loosen the screw that holds the metal collar tight.

ELECTRICITY FOR FAT PEOPLE

Intense but Painless Contraction Produced by Method Invented by Professor Nagelschmidt.

With the awakening of scientific medical men to the great possibilities offered by electricity, striking developments are expected. The "diathermy treatment" of Professor F. Nagelschmidt is applied in both medicine and surgery—the medical form being described as the passing of electric rays of high temperature through the diseased part, and the surgical application is a bloodless cautery in which the current reaches the tissues through a kind of knife edge. Two illustrations were lately given by the inventor of the process at the London hospital. The first operation removed a large blood tumor on the inside of the cheek, and the second took away a large patch of lupus, or tubercular skin. In the first operation by ordinary means there would have been risk of fatal bleeding, while the other cure of the second case would have required months. Another use of electricity by Professor Nagelschmidt is in producing intense but painless muscular contractions, and, as the spare fat in the tissues is thus used up, this gives a scientific process for reducing obesity. It is stated that 500 pounds of superfluous fat has been lost by 70 patients on whom the treatment has been tried.

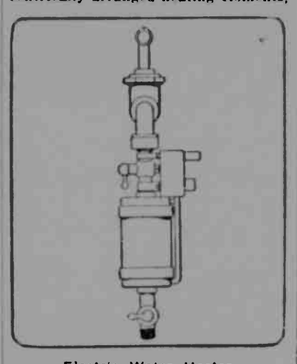
DESERT SANDS EAT COPPER

Investigation Showed That Wind Whipped Particles Against Strands, Causing a Filing Action.



Extending from Cairo to the pyramids of Gizeh is an electric trolley line which is used chiefly by tourists. The trunks of huge palm trees serve as trolley poles to support the overhead conductor, and the contrast between the modern hurrying motor cars and the peaceful, centuries old tombs of the Pharaohs holds the interest of many a contemplative traveler. At one side of the trolley conductor on bell shaped insulators are run the feeders, which like the trolley wire are of bright, hard drawn copper. After these wires had been installed it was soon found that they invariably broke and fell within six or seven months, the cross section being much reduced at the point of fracture. Investigation showed that the desert winds which sweep across the right of way whip sand particles against the wires, causing a filing action which cuts away the copper much like an artificial sand blast. The glass globes of arc lamps installed along the road have exhibited the same disastrous action. A similar effect is observed with the incandescent units used to light the way to the sphinx. These strings of lamps, besides having to be moved at frequent intervals to accommodate the varying level of the shifting sands, are rapidly eaten away by the etching action of the desert winds. Thus far no remedy has been discovered for this destruction except frequent renewals.—Electrical World.

Thirty-seven thousand electric vehicles are in use in the United States, according to an estimate by Arthur Williams, president of the Electric Vehicle Association of America. Of this number 25,000 are probably pleasure cars and 12,000 are commercial wagons, says the Electrical World. Following are the numbers of electric vehicles in operation in some of the principal cities:

Chicago, 2,850; New York, 2,000; Cleveland, 1,800; Washington, 900; Denver, 887; Boston, 543; St. Louis, 600; Columbus, O., 400.

In Chicago electric trucking has increased 400 per cent. in two years. In New York 40 per cent. of the commercial power trucks are battery driven. Nine of the New York hospitals use electric ambulances.

SIGN CAME DOWN QUICKLY

Clerk May Have Meant Well Enough, But It Was Not at All Flattering to New Proprietors.

The new proprietors of a little candy and nut shop in New York were astonished to notice pedestrians on the opposite side of the street stop, gaze at their window for a moment, and then pass on, faces decorated with broad grins.

This happened so often that one of the proprietors determined to investigate. He hastened across to the opposite pavement. What he saw there caused him to scurry back to the shop on the run. Below a large black and white sign that bore the notice—"This shop is under new management"—a careless clerk had hung an equally conspicuous sign reading:

"New crop of nuts now here."

Teacher's Boomerang.

A certain high school professor, who at times is rather blunt in speech, remarked angrily to his class of boys at the beginning of a lesson:

"I don't know why it is—every time I get up to speak, some fool talks." Then he wondered why the boys burst out into a roar of laughter.

India Cultivating Quinine.

Java, now furnishing the bulk of the world's quinine supply, finds a great market for the preparation in India, which already consumes one-sixth of all the quinine produced. Ceylon, once a large exporter, has fallen off in the product until the quantity sent out each year is quite negligible. India, however, in an effort to become a great quinine-producing country, has planted thousands of acres to the cinchona tree.

Rather Warm.

At a school in Dudley a teacher with whom I am well acquainted was taking his class in their poetry, "Casabianca." They came to the line, "The boy stood on the burning deck." He stopped the class, and asked this question, "Why did the boy stand on the burning deck?" He had a good show of hands, but one lad in particular seemed very eager to give the answer. The teacher noticed this, and asked him, whereupon he got the following answer, "Because it was too hot to sit down!" which put the whole class in an uproar.—London Tit-Bits.

FRIENDLY TIP.
Restored Hope and Confidence.

After several years of indigestion and its attendant evil influence on the mind, it is not very surprising that one finally loses faith in things generally.

A N. Y. woman writes an interesting letter. She says:

"Three years ago I suffered from an attack of peritonitis which left me in a most miserable condition. For over two years I suffered from nervousness, weak heart, shortness of breath, could not sleep, etc.

"My appetite was ravenous but I felt starved all the time. I had plenty of food but it did not nourish me because of intestinal indigestion. Medical treatment did not seem to help. I got discouraged, stopped medicine and did not care much whether I lived or died.

"One day a friend asked me why I didn't try Grape-Nuts food, stop drinking coffee and use Postum. I had lost faith in everything, but to please my friend I began to use both and soon became very fond of them.

"It wasn't long before I got some strength, felt a decided change in my system, hope sprang up in my heart and slowly but surely I got better. I could sleep very well, the constant craving for food ceased and I have better health now than before the attack of peritonitis.

"My husband and I are still using Grape-Nuts and Postum."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

It Takes the King.

"Now, children," said the school teacher, "can any of you tell me of a greater power than a king?"

"Yes, ma'am," cried a little boy, eagerly.

"Very well, you may tell the class," replied the teacher.

"An ace," was the unexpected reply.

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 29. 1914.

THE proposed extension of the corporate limits of Oakland, for which a bill has been drafted by the City Council and introduced in the Senate by Senator Speicher, will bring into the town limits a large scope of valuaole property which has been enjoying town conveniences to a great extent and at the same time not being upon the assessment books for taxation purposes for the benefit of the town.

THE REPUBLICAN'S Annapolis correspondence thus far during the session has been highly complimented by the press and a large number of our readers who have evinced a deep interest in matters of legislation affecting the county as well as some of measures applying to the entire State. The Republican aims to give its readers everything directly affecting them and we feel that our efforts in this direction are appreciated in many ways.

SENATOR SPEICHER'S anti-cigarette measure, introduced last week in the Senate, has been received favorably by the people of the Commonwealth. Its stringent provisions are necessary in order to carry out the objects of the proposed law and it is our prediction that it will be passed by both Senate and House. This measure is drawn much along the same lines as the laws now in force in both Pennsylvania and West Virginia where the results have already proven beneficial to the young manhood of those States. The full text of the measure will be found in our columns today.

THE announcement that Postmaster-General Burleson may name as fourth-class postmasters the men on the top of the merit list by the Civil Service Commission, no matter what may be his politics, came as a thunderbolt to Democratic Congressmen. The plan of securing the appointment as fourth-class postmasters by petition is ended. Vacancies will be filled by special examinations open to all citizins of all parties, women included, and the one standing the best examination wins the nomination.

THE Maryland General Assembly has been in session two weeks. The legislation so far has been of the most extravagant character. The Daily Sun a democratic paper of Baltimore, speaks out most emphatically and says:

"But as members of the Legislature men honest in their private transactions have consented to what in a private trustee would be a criminal act—to what, in plain words, is known as stealing. This is a blunt and apparent harsh way of designating what the House of Delegates is doing in the employment of unnecessary officials, but it is the simple truth, and there is no reason why we should call by a genteel name that which we send people to the penitentiary for in every day private life. What the House has done is to take the State's money that is the money of their constituents for which the delegates are trustees and give to Tom, Dick and Harry in payment for personal or political debts." Pretty severe language, but remember it is not the language of a Republican, but that of a Democratic editor.

CHILD LABOR EVILS.

Sunday last was observed in many places as child labor day. The National Child Labor Committee called the attention of five thousand clergymen to the movement and suggested that addresses be made dealing with the evils of child labor. Every child has a moral right to be a child. Society which forces mere children to assume the burden of wage earning commits an offense against their childhood. Unfortunately our industrial system is so organized that much work seems to fall to children. Manufacturers of certain lines deliberately seek out communites in which there is an abundance of young and cheap labor.

An industry which has to be built upon the wasted bodies of young children does not deserve to prosper. Probably the worst child labor conditions in the United States exist in the cotton mills of the south. In an address prepared by A. J. McKelway, southern secretary of the National Child Labor Committee, rates of labor in the southern mills are given, showing that the majority of the spinning work is done by boys and girls under fifteen years of age, and their return of wages vary from $3.50 to $5.00 per week. One thousand, seven hundred workers from fourteen to twenty years of age earn less than $2.00 per week. One thousand, seven hundred and thirty-three children in the cotton mills, according to Mr. McKelway, under sixteen years of age, make from $2.00 to $3.00 per week. We have, however, in other sections, child labor abuses. Maryland is not free from them. Slowly but gradually we are eliminating them.

The only effective child labor legislation we will be able to secure in the United States must be through some Federal statutes. Uniformity of laws are essential m the maintanance of just competition and the manufacturer who pays a fair rate of wages to adults, or at leaat does not make it a rule to employ children under fourteen, has a moral right to protection against the competition in some other state of a manufacturer who exploits child labor.

Gleanings From The State Capital.

[Special to The Republican]

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 26, 1914.—The most active lobbyists here, so far are "The Suffragists." They are not many, but they are "as busy as bees." They are good natured, but persevering, determined and get there every time. They have had one public meeting, at night, in the hall of the Home of Delegates, and it was filled to overflowing. Their speakers were well posted, and strong advocates of "votes for women." They were received with smiles, but, will they get what they want this year? I doubt it.

Delegate W. W. Savage is on one of the most important committies in the House, that of Hygene. He has offered a cigarette bill for Garrett county which has been referred to this committee. It is All and would be a great blessing to the county if enacted.

In Senator Zilhman, the Republicans have a strong leader, capable and alert, ready for every move of the Democrats. His colleagues are brainy men and a credit to the great party they represent, and they are on the job constantly.

Governor Goldsborough is held in high esteem by both Republicans and Democrats. He is counted a square man rather than a politician and is above trickery.

The liquor men are in evidence, calling upon the members of the legislature, leaving souvenir advertisements of their business, steel knives, etc. They mean war against all efforts to restrict or interfere with their business. They are meeting worthy opponents.

The Baltimore press unanimously condemned the House of Delegates for swelling the list of employees. In 1911 the House had 81 employees. This session it has 110 and will add 40 more making a total of 150; there are only 102 members. There are two postmasters to look after the House post office, open in the building for these 102 members. These two men receive each $5 per day for their services. The Daily Sun's criticism is quite severe.

The Republican members of the House do not have a single employee to their credit. They do not have even a committee room to meet in. Everything went to the 79 Democratic members. That is politics.

Senator Speicher and Delegate Harvey spent the latter part of the past week at their Garrett county home. Delegate Savage Saturday took in the automobibe show in Baltimore.

The minority members (9 Republicans) of the Senate have headquarters in the basement, double rooms, No. are conveniently fixed up and equipped for work. They have two stenographers, a clerk and messenger. In this room they exchange views and plan out their campaign. They are a wide-awake lot of men. Their presence will be felt in the Senate.

Senator Speicher is highly spoken of by those who know him, whether Democrat or Republican. He is often consulted by members of the Senate and House. Two of the bills he has offered in the Senate, "State-wide cigarete law" and "Garrett County local option bill" have attracted much attention. The local option bill is commented upon as one of the strongest and most complete temperance bills brought before the legislature. The Senator is giving it his most earnest attention, as are also delegates Harvey and Savage.

The Garrett delegation in the House has organized by electing Elliott C. Harvey as chairman, and so notified the speaker.

Already bill after bill asking for special legislation for Garrett county has been presented in both Houses. If they all go through the county will be a second paradise.

While Annapolis is an old town, dating before the revolution, it has adopted the modern ways. Many of the members of the legislature room at one place, eat at another and have their washing done, the Lord only knows where. Senator Speicher, Delegate Harvey and Savage, and messenger L. A. Rudisill have rooms on Church street No. 133. Most of the restaurants are run by Greeks. I have tried two places with orders for that great meal of Garrett countians, sausage and buckwheat cakes. The sausage was O. K. but the buck wheat cakes were thin as glass, and might have been a forty-third cousin to buckwheat. They tasted no more like our Garrett county cakes than black strap would taste like molasses, but then they sell just the same.

The past week has been delightful, early mornings and late evenings enjoyably cool through the day, delightful to be out of doors. No sign of snow.

Operated On For Appandicitis.

Miss Carolyn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Miller, formerly of Garrett county, and sister of Miss Jennie Miller, of the teaching corps of the Oakland grammar school, was operated upon at the Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia, Monday, for appendicitis, with which Miss Miller was stricken a day or two previously. The patient has been connected with the hospital for some months past as head nurse in the receiving ward of the institution.

SONS OF VETERANS.

Camp Will Be Organized In Oakland in a Short Time.

The movement set on foot some time ago to muster a Camp of the Sons of Vetrans, has taken definite shape and such an organization will be formed in very near future. In the meantime, however, the moving spirits in organizing the Camp have decided to hold the matter open for another ten days to give an opporunity for others to become charter members.

Those who are eligible for membership in the Camp are the sons or grandsons of soldiers who have attained the age of eighteen years.

The organization is a purely patriotic one and everyone who is eligible to membership as above set fourth should get into communication with Mr. Norman R. Sanner, of the Oakland Pharmacy, Oakland, who will give all intormatio. necessary.

Miss Helen Townshend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Townshend, returned home Saturday night from Lutherville Academy, near Baltimore, where she had been a student in the musical department. Attention is called to the advertisement of the Preparatory Branch of the West Virginia University, Keyser, W. Va., which appears in this paper today. This school is located within easy distance of every part of Garrett county and affords an opportunity for the young men to secure an education at very small expense. Write Principal Stayman for literature.

County Superintendent Rathbun is using an illustrated slip which he is sending to trustees ot the various country schools in an endeavor to materilly improve the sanitary conditions which prevail generally at and about rural schools. The efforts of the Superintendent in this direction should have the hearty cooperation and support of every trustee and patron of the schools throughout the county.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

Mr P. T. Garthright, who was paralyzed on the 13th of June, 1913, is still confined to his home, at Mountain Lake Park, and is not able to dress or undress himself, makes an earnest appeal to all who know themselves indebted to him in any way, by book account, note or judgment, to make an earnest effort to help him in this time of his great need. Mr. Garthright has no income whatever and must depend upon the collection of amounts due him to provide his daily bread and meet his personal obligations. If you cannot pay the full amount due me, please send me as much as you can. I can use any kind of farm produce. I will greatly appreciate a prompt response to this appeal. I am only pleading for a portion of my own, in all kindness, and believe me, as ever, a friend to the needy, and rejoicing in affliction, trusting and hoping in God for a better home than earth can give, through the merits only of Jesus.

I cordially invite every one to call and see me at my home.

Most sincerelly,
P. T. GARTHRIGHT.

THE Saturday Evening Post forcibly remarks: "For sixteen years the Democrats were constantly upbraiding the Republicans for gross waste and profligacy in appropriations. And two years ago when the Democrats secured control of the House, they shed many tears and declaimed many yards of denunciation because Mr. Taft's Republican executive heads were so wasteful and so extravagant. It was not only a shame but it was a crime. The Democrats were the boys who would retrench, once they got the thing into their economical unrestricted hands. The whole government boiling became Democratic on March 4th last. And what is the result? The result is that the estimates submitted by the Democratic heads of Democratic departments to a Democratic House and Democratic Senate, and under a Democratic President, are thirty-four million dollars—a neat sum—in excess of the appropriations made for the fiscal year when the extravagant Republicans prepared the estimates—the extravagant Republicans who had been running the country on the rocks by their criminal waste of the money of the people. A beautiful illustration of Democratic Economy! Econo-mee! Econo-mee! now wherefore hast thou flown?"

Mr. John D. Bear,
Elkton, Va.

Dear Sir: The winter of 1909 my son Wilmer took a deep cold. It settled on his breast and he was so hoarse he could scarcley talk. We tried different kinds of cough medicines, but nothing did any good. Some person told me to go to John Bear's and get a bottle of your Emulsion. After the first two or three doses it gave relief. In a few days he was all right. I don't think it can be beat for the lungs and the whole system. You have the privilege of using my name to this recomendation for the good of others.

Yours, Very Truly,
E. E. COFFMAN.

Now is the time to try this Emulsion. If you have not a cough, take it anyway, as it builds up your system and you will be more able to stand exposure. One dollar a bottle or six for five dollars. Can be bought at Sturgiss Pharmacy. Advertisement

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Who Said He Was Responsible for the Appointment of Mr. Bolden?

To the Editor of the Republican:

The people out in this neck of woods were greatly relieved when the Journal came out last week to learn that Delegate Shartzer was "in no wise responsible for the appointment of D. E. Bolden, election supervison." What a terrible responsibility he escaped and what a tremendous burden he lifted from our shoulders. It is mighty fortunate for said Bolden that the delegate "has no objections" to him. How a-w-f-u-l it would have been if he had objections. The delegate says further, that he "believes that the appointment belongs to Friendsville, and not to Oakland." Why not to Kitzmiller, Grantsville or Deer Park? Is it possible, Mr. Editor, that the delegate promised it to some one at Friendsville?

Mr. Editor, was there a miracle performed in the appointment of Mr. Bolden? The Journal says, "Mr. George Geissman, a member of the State Central commi tee, also stated that he did not sign the petition for Mr. Bolden." And yet Mr. Bolden got the appointment. Can you explain it? My neighbors in Brush Hollow say they did not sign it, and I was not consulted, either. "What is the country coming to?" If such things continue there will be a mighty kick coming. Why the aforesaid gentleman should tell this to the Journal I can't get tnrough my head. What has the Journal to do with our Republican sorrows and misfortunes?

After reading the Jourhal's statement the question arose: How did the said Bolden get the place without the Delegate's consent or knowledge? Again I ask, in the language of a great statesman (?) "What is the country coming to?"

I suppose Mr. Bolden will promptly tender his resignation to the Governor.

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers

Miss Cora Georg, of near Accident, who underwent an operation for the relief of throat affection in a Baltimore City hospital some time ago, has returned to her home, as has also Mr. William Goehringer, also of Accident, who submitted to an operation about two weeks ago for the removal of a cancer from his face. Mr. Goeringer's condition is very favorable and satisfactory to his physician, Dr. Ravenscroft, indications pointing to a complete cure.

Mr. Nimrod Glotfelty, of near Accident, spent several days recently in Baltimore, where he was the guest of Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft.

FOUR NEW ANTI-TRUST BILLS OUT

Measures Based on Wilson Policies Define Sherman Act and Allied Laws.

FULL PUBLICITY IS SOUGHT

Trade Commission Instead of Corporation Bureau Would Report Violations of the Statutes—Rigid Inquiries Are Ordered.

Washington, Jan. 23.—Embodying the program laid down by the president in his recent message, the administration's trust bills were presented to congress.

The bills have received the approval of Mr. Wilson and the Democratic leaders of both houses of congress. With little modification they will be enacted into law. Their purposes are:

1. Definition of unlawful monopoly or restraints of trade.
2. Prohibition of unfair trade practice.
3. Creation of an interstate trade commission.
4. Regulation of corporation directorates and prohibition of interlocking directorates.

Unlawful Monopoly Defined.

Unlawful monopoly is defined as any combination or agreement between corporations, firms, or persons designed for the following purposes:

1. To create or carry out restrictions in trade or to acquire a monopoly in any interstate trade, business, or commerce.
2. To limit or reduce the production or increase the price of merchandise or of any commodity.
3. To prevent competition in manufacturing, making, transporting, selling, or purchasing of merchandise, produce, or any commodity.
4. To make any agreement, enter into any arrangement, or arrive at any understanding by which they, directly or indirectly, undertake to prevent a free and unrestricted competition among themselves or among any purchasers or consumers in the sale, production, or transportation of any product, article, or commodity.

The penalty for violation of the law is fixed at not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for one year or both.

Guilt is made personal through a section that whenever a corporation shall be guilty of the violation of the law the offense shall be deemed to cover the individual directors, officers, and agents of such corporation, as authorizing, ordering, or doing the prohibited acts, and they shall be punished as prescribed above.

A paragraph prohibiting holding companies is to be added to this measure.

Covers Unfair Trade Practices.

The bill forbidding unfair trade practices declares that to discriminate in price, between different purchasers of commodities, with the purpose or intent to injure or destroy a competitor, either of the purchaser or of the seller, shall be deemed an attempt to monopolize interstate commerce.

It is specifically declared that the law is not intended to prevent discrimination in price between purchasers of commodities "on account of difference in the grade, quality, or quantity of the commodity sold, or that makes only due allowance for difference in the cost of transportation."

Further, it is prescribed that nothing contained in the act shall prevent persons from selecting their own customers, "but this provision shall not authorize the owner or operator of any mine engaged in selling its product in interstate or foreign commerce to refuse arbitrarily to sell the same to a responsible person, firm, or corporation, who applies to purchase."

An attempt at monopoly also is declared to exist for any person to make a sale of goods, wares, or merchandise or fix a price charged therefor, or discount from or rebate upon such price, on the condition or understanding that the purchaser thereof shall not deal in the goods, wares, or merchandise of a competitor or competitors of the seller.

Deals With Damage Suits.

A judgment against any defendant in a suit brought under the anti-trust law the bill provides shall constitute as against such defendant conclusive evidence of the same facts and be conclusive as to the same issues of law in favor of any other party in any other proceeding brought under and involving the provisions of the law.

For the benefit of parties injured in their business or property, by any person or corporation found guilty of violating the law the statute of limitations applicable to such cases shall be suspended.

Injunctive relief is accorded against threatened loss or damage by a violation of the act under the same conditions and principles that injunctive relief against threatened conduct which will cause loss or damage is granted by courts of equity.

It is required that a proper bond shall be executed against damages for an injunction improvidently granted, and it must be shown that the danger of irreparable loss or damage is immediate.

Hits Interlocking Directorates.

Concerning directorates, the bill on that subject, which is to become effective two years from date of approval of the act, provides:

"No person engaged as an individual or as a member of a partnership or as a director or other officer of a corporation in the business of selling railroad cars or locomotives, or railroad rails or structural steel, or mining or selling coal, or conducting a bank or trust company, shall act as a director or other officer or employe of any railroad or other public service corporation which conducts an interstate business.

"No person shall at the same time be a director or other officer or employe in two or more federal reserve banks, national banks, or banking associations, or other banks or trust companies which are members of any reserve bank; and a private banker and a person who is a director in any state bank or trust company not operating under the provisions of the recent currency law shall not be eligible to serve as a director in any bank or banking association or trust company operating under the provisions of the law."

Violation of these sections is made punishable by a fine of $100 a day, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

If any two or more corporations have common director or directors, the fact shall be conclusive evidence that there exists a real competition between such corporation and such elimination of competition shall be construed as a restraint of interstate trade and be treated accordingly.

The trade commission bill provides for commission of five members, with the commissioner of corporations as chairman, and transfers all the existing powers of the bureau of corporations to the commission.

The principal and most important duty the commission besides conducting investigations will be to aid the courts when requested in the formation of decrees of dissolution.

With this in view, the bill empowers he court to refer any part of pending litigation to the commission, including the proposed decree, for information and advice.

Much Criticism for Bills.

The trust bills as framed will be the subject of sharp criticism on the part of progressives of all parties who claim they do not go far enough. It will be declared that the definition of monopoly remains inadequate that the prohibition of unfair trade practice does not cover this evil in our economic life that interlocking stock control is not covered and that the powers of the proposed trade commission are insufficient.

It is interesting to note that the proposal to place the burden of proof upon a combination believed to be violating the law has been omitted. No attempt is made to prevent or destroy monopoly based on patents. The greatest difficulty experienced in the effective enforcement of the law has been found to be in the unwillingness of the courts to impose jail penalty. It remains optional under the proposed measures wiht the courts to fine or imprison.

Trade Board May Disappoint.

In connection with the trade commission President Wilson declared in his message that the country "demands such a commission only as an indispensable instrument of information and publicity as a clearing house for the facts by which both the public mind and the managers of great business undertakings should be guided."

The bill prescribes that the commission acts are to constitute a "public record" but the body is authorized to make public the information "in such form and to such extent as may be necessary" or "by direction of the attorney general."

It is apparent that the public mind cannot be guided unless it has the facts, and then it will not get unless the commission or the attorney general deems it politic

Settlement of Differences.

The most important feature of the bill is that which legalizes the policy of the administration of terminating an unlawful condition by agreement between the combination attacked and the attorney general.

This feature is comprehended under a section which requires the commission, upon the request of the attorney general or any corporation affected, to investigate whether a combination is violating the law. In case the commission should find the violation to exist it must report to the attorney general a statement of the objectionable acts and transactions and the readjustments necessary for the offending combination to conform to the law.

DICTATOR HUERTA LOSING GROUND

But Shows No Signs of a Purpose to Eliminate Himself.

MANIFESTS PRIDE IN ARMY.

Estimates It At More Than 100,000. Appears To Ignore Growing Financial and Other Troubles.

Mexico City.—President Huerta betrays no sign of yielding, although he is cognizant of the increase in the strength of his enemies intriguing within the capital and those in the field, is handicapped by inability to procure money and is confronted with Washington's determination that he must retire from Mexico's affairs.

Personal and political friends and the highest officials of the Catholic Church in Mexico, who have been endeavoring by methods for the most part discreetly indirect to bring about his elimination, are seemingly convinced that they have failed.

General Huerta talks optimistically of the outlook, displays pride in the size of his army, which he estimates at considerably more than 100,000, and appears to believe that in spite of all obstacles and reverses he will be able to dominate the situation within three months.

It is conceded here that ex-Minister Flores Magon has failed in his mission to Mr. Lind at Vera Cruz and that the United States will listen to no proposition short of the unconditional elimination of Huerta.

No one, not even President Huerta, attempts to disguise the fact that the Mexican treasury is practically empty in the capital the Government payrolls are being liquidated with reasonable promptness, but it is no secret that the diplomatic representatives and consuls abroad in many cases have not been paid for weeks and that the troops outside the capital often receive their pay long after it is due. In most cases these funds are derived from local sources; sometimes they are from forced loans levied on the inhabitants where the troops happen to be stationed.

Extraordinary taxes have been levied in the capital, as well as outside points, and there are rumors that other decrees are soon to be issued that will exact still greater tribute from the people.

There is little change of importance in the military situation and the residents of the capital are expecting that the rebel chief, General Villa, who has appeared outside of Torreon, will reach here at an early date. One of the disquieting developments has been the increased number of rebel bands between Orizaba and Vera Cruz and south as far as the Isthmus of Tehuantepec.

The question as to whether there is some big directing force behind this movement is giving the officials at the palace moments of uneasy speculation. There are some who believe that Gen. Felix Diaz and General Mondragon, his chief lieutenant in the uprising in the capital almost a year ago, are behind the latest rising.

SAYS BURDEN IS GROWING HEAVY

Goethals Feels Weight of Criticism Heaped Upon Him.

WANTS TO LEAVE ISTHMUS.

Builder Of the Panama Canal, However, Asserts That He Will Not Leave the Zone Until the Waterway Is Completed.

Panama.—Col. George W. Goethals reiterated emphatically his declaration that he could not accept the post of commissioner of police at New York until after the completion and the successful operation of the Panama Canal. Even if all the other conditions which he has imposed were complied with it is said this would keep him on the isthmus for another 18 months.

It is generally believed here that the agitation in New York to take Colonel Goethals from the isthmus will have the effect of hastening action at Washington looking to the establishment of a permanent government in the Canal Zone. The Colonel himself makes no secret of the fact that the delay is causing him much embarrassment, because it prevents him from making an effort to keep men on the isthmus whom he would like to see in the permanent operating organization.

Nor does Colonel Goethals make a secret of his desire to leave the isthmus. He makes it plain, however, that he wishes to see his work here completed and the canal in operation before he returns to other duties in the United States. He has told friends that the burden is growing heavy and that he has felt the weight of criticism that has come to his administration from various quarters.

Speaking of the commissionership, Colonel Goethals frankly admitted that the offer of the New York post had attracted him until he found obstacles that would make it impossible for him to carry into effect reforms which he might desire to make. His friends here have strongly advised him against acceptance of the offer, and it is believed that their views have had great weight with him.

TWO RAILROADS OPEN CRUSADE

Fifty-Seven Trainmen Discharged By Pittsburgh Lines.

Pittsburgh.—Railroads in the Pittsburgh district are waving vigorous warfare against tipping by employes. J. B. Yohe, general manager of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie, was quoted as saying that 40 trainmen had been discharged from that railroad for breaking the anti-drinking rule, and announcement was made by officials of the Buffalo and Pittsburgh that 17 trainmen had been discharged from that service for the same reason.

TO CLIP BLEASE'S WINGS

Resolution To Strip Him Of Power Of Clemency.

Columbia, S. C.—Governor Cole Blease's record of having pardoned, paroled or commuted 985 convicts during his three years of office was recalled by the introduction in the General Assembly of a resolution to amend the State constitution to strip the governor of the power of clemency except upon recommendation of a State board. It proposed further that cases in which the governor does not accept the recommendations of the board must be referred to the legislature.

Action Is Reply To Threatened Curtailment Of Power.

Columbia, S. C.—Gov. Cole L. Blease replied to the Legislature's proposal to strip him of the power of executive clemency by commuting the sentences of 14 convicts in the State penitentiary, including four murderers. This brings the Governor's commutations for January up to 40. All that number will be put at work on roads under reduced sentences.

HAITI A HOTBED OF REBELLION

Washington Officials Stirred Over the Situation.

WILSON AND BRYAN CONFER

Success Of the Haitien Movement Regarded As a Direct Challenge To the Administration's Disapproval Of Such Methods.

Cape Haitien, Haiti.—A general revolt has broken out in the city of Gonaives, capital of the Department of Artibite. The leader of the insurrection is Oreste Zamor, former governor of the department and at one time minister of war. The city is only 65 miles from Port au Prince, the capital of the republic. General Desormes, at the head of the rebel forces, took Cape Haitien and Fort Liberte.

Washington.—The Haitien revolution, headed by Davilar Theodore, an exiled senator recently driven into Santo Domingo, has reached such proportions as to command the serious attention of the State Department. The success of a movement of this kind might be regarded as a direct challenge to the administration's policy of disapproval of the erection of governments by force and without reference to the forms of a constitution.

Secretary Bryan has already consulted with President Wilson, and with Boaz W. Long, chief of the Latin-American Bureau of the State Department, as to Haitien affairs.

News was received at the State Department from the American Legation at Port au Prince that at Cape Haitien, threatened by the rebels, the citizens have formed a committee of public safety, removed customs officials and placed a commission in charge.

Although no treaty exists, as in the case of Santo Domingo, which clothes the United States government with authority over the customs houses, it is understood that ample authority for taking over Haitien custom houses out of control of the national government has been proffered through Ulrich Duvivier, resident Haitien minister here.

The naval force available is believed to be quite sufficient for the purpose, as the cruiser Montana now at Port au Prince has a complement of 650 men, including a company of marines, the Petrol, now at Santo Domingo city, but within easy reach of Haitien waters, has a crew of 120 bluejackets and the gunboat Nashville at Cape Haitien carries 225 men.

PASSENGER TRAIN LOOTED.

Bandits Send Engine On Mad Dash Along Tracks.

Fackler, Ala.—Railroad detectives and deputy sheriffs with bloodhounds are searching for three men who looted the mail and express cars of a Southern Railway passenger train near here and after starting the locomotive and the two cars on a wild run disappeared on horses. The train ran without a guiding hand at the throttle to Larkinsville, Ala., 19 miles away, where it stopped when the locomotive went dead. The robbers obtained a sum estimated at $100 by blowing the express car safe. Their search through the mail car failed to produce anything, as only second-class matter was in the pouches.

12-POUND RADISH TO BRYAN.

Vegetable Was Grown By Japanese In California.

Los Angeles.—A white radish 3 feet high, 36 inches in circumference and weighing 12 pounds, was forwarded from Los Angeles to William J. Bryan, Secretary of State. The radish, which is said to be the largest ever produced in Southern California, was discovered by the secretary of a produce concern, who, knowing Secretary Bryan's fondness for white radishes, decided to ship it to him. The vegetable was grown by Japanese truck gardeners and is one year old.

TANGO CAUSES LOSS OF LIFE.

Boston.—William H. Brown lost his life as a result of dancing the tango, Judge Ely ruled in the police court. Miss Ollie Thompson, testifying at a hearing on a charge of manslaughter brought against Daniel Spencer for having caused Brown's death, said that Brown was "tangoing" with her when he struck his head against a door and knocked out a panel, fracturing his skull. Spencer was discharged.

RINOU INVASION GREATLY FEARED

Secretary Wilson Would Close the Doors to Them.

INFLUX BECOMES ALARMING

Injury To the Laboring Men On the Pacific Coast and the Possible Extension Of Their Activities To the Southern States.

Washington.—Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Labor, suggested to Congress that the doors of the United States be closed hereafter to the Hindu laborer. Injury to labor conditions on the Pacific Coast of the United States through an already unaccountable influx of Hindus and possible extension to the Southern States were the reasons given by Mr. Wilson for urging their immediate exclusion.

The Secretary's views were expressed in a letter to Speaker Clark in response to a request from Chairman Burnett, of the House Immigration Committee, for information on pending bills. While the Secretary did not discuss with President Wilson the questions brought up in the letter, he wrote, he said, after Commissioner General Caminetti, of the Immigration Bureau, had consulted John Bassett More and learned that no treaty would be violated if the recommendations were carried out.

The Secretary suggested that the term "Asiatic laborer" be defined as including all aliens east of a certain boundary line, except those such as Japanese or Chinese whose immigration already is regulated by agreements or understanding between the United States and the governments in the Far East.

Suggests Army Test

To solve the problem of Asiatic immigration not covered by existing restrictions, Mr. Wilson proposed that a physical test, such as is required for recruits to the United States Army be administered before any Asiatic laborers, as the term is to be defined, are admitted. Physically defective aliens from Persia, Turkistan, Afghanistan, Siam and other Asiatic countries could thereby be prevented from entering into competition with American labor without violating any treaties, Mr. Wilson believes, as there would be no discrimination against any particular country. He suggested also that perhaps all immigrants intending to do manual labor might well be subjected to a physical test, but did not develop this point in his letter other than in reference to Asiatics.

Secretary Wilson says that a concerted movement exists in India and elsewhere to gain admission to the United States; that Canada has legislated even in more drastic manner than is proposed in bills now pending in Congress, and that if the Hindu movement is not checked by legislation not only California and the West will be affected, "as climatic and industrial conditions, in the Southern States and other sections of the Union offer an extensive field for a people who can come in practically unlimited numbers if, by failure to do as Canada and other British colonies have done, they are tacitly invited."

PENNSY'S COAL TAX

Suit Brought To Test Constitutionality Of the Law.

Harrisburg, Pa.—The first suit to test the constitutionality of the anthracite coal tax was begun in the Dauphin County Court by the People's Coal Company, of Scranton. The bill in equity filed in the cases contends that the act is unconstitutional in that it violates the provision protecting property.

The act, passed by the last legislature, provides a tax of two and one-half per cent. on the value of each ton of coal prepared for market, which amounts to a little more than five cents a ton. After the law became effective most of the producing companies raised the price of coal to meet the tax. It is estimated that the tax will bring to the State between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000, half of which is returned to the anthracite producing counties for distribution among their civil divisions according to population.

WASHINGTON HOME BOUGHT.

British Peace Committee Acquires Old English Mansion.

London.—Sulgrave Manor, Northampton, the ancestral home of the family of George Washington, has passed into the hands of the British committee for the celebration of the centenary of peace between Great Britain and the United States. The deeds were signed at a meeting of the committee in London. The price paid was $42,000.

SOUTHERN TRAIN HELD UP.

Telephone Message Says Three Men Robbed Mail Car.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—It is reported here that Southern Railway Train No. 41 was held up and robbed at Fackler, Ala. Bloodhounds were sent from here on a special train in charge of a number of deputies. A telephone message said three men boarded the train at Fackler, cut the engine and mail car and forced the engineer to run six miles from the scene of the hold up.

CAPE HAITIEN OCCUPIED.

Revolutionists Score Again In the Haitien Revolt.

Washington.—An undated radiogram to the State Department announced the occupation of Cape Haitien, on the northern coast of Haiti, by the revolutionists, who were resisted. President Oreste has called an extraordinary session of the newly-elected congress when a drastic program will be undertaken to crush the revolt. The seizure of Cape Haitien gives the revolutionists a much-needed base of supplies.

COMMERCIAL

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"While there is tangible evidence of continued expansion in general business, the betterment is not entirely uniform. Advices from leading centers are rather mixed, yet favorable reports outnumber those of an opposite character and sentiment is more confident. In the important iron and steel industry the belief is strengthening that the turning point has about been reached, although it is not expected that the recovery from previous depression will be rapid. Labor, however, is more fully employed, mill operations have increased, and even if there has been no advance in prices, further concessions are not so frequent.

"Failures numbered 456 in the United States against 350 last year."

Bradstreet's says:

"Sentiment—financial, industrial and commercial—manifestly is better than a week or a month ago. Apparently the presidential message has helped to clear the economic atmosphere and business men seem more disposed to go ahead. The fact is that further actual, as opposed to sentimental, improvement has come to pass within the week and in its general aspects the betterment seems cumulative.

"Bank discounts in most of the predominantly commercial countries of the world are lower, thus releasing funds for commercial enterprises."

TEMPEST AND SHIPWRECK

WRECK OF THE NORWEGIAN BARQUE "CERES" ON THE SCROBY SANDS

WRECK OF THE S.S. "GROCH" OFF GIRDLENESS, ABERDEEN

WAVES DASHING OVER THE S.S. "TRIPOLITANA" WHICH WENT ASHORE IN LOCH BAY

THE "QUEEN MARGARET" WRECKED OFF THE LIZARD

OF all the dangers and hazards to which humanity is liable, not one more quickly reaches the heart-strings or strikes a stronger chord of sympathy than shipwreck. The advance of science, it is said, has killed the poetry, the wonder and the romance of the sea, but it cannot, as we too often have occasion to deplore, eliminate its peril. The agony of suspense may not, indeed, in these days be prolonged, for the iron or steel hull breaks up more quickly than the fabric of the wooden ship, which oftentimes for days bumped and tore on the rocks or sands before it fell to pieces. On the other hand, the catastrophes incidental to the sea—collision, fire and its awful horrors, and stranding — are now on a more colossal scale. The ships are bigger, more poor souls are endangered, brings the harrowing details more speedily home to a wider circle of sympathizers. Ocean travel today, it is true, has been made comfortable, and the passenger ships race from port to port with the punctuality of the post. The seafarer, whether he lives in the forecastle or luxuriates in the stateroom, no longer has fighting for his life or property, nor is he subject to the discourtesy, the stupidity or the brutality of those to whom he looks for a safe and pleasant voyage. The rude seaman who in olden times regarded his passengers with ill-concealed contempt, and in the moment of danger drove them below, battened them under hatches and left them in the ill-smelling and suffocating hold, to suffer agonies of fear, longer exists. It will be remembered how Shakespeare's boatswain in "The Tempest" roughly orders the passengers below and out of the way lest they impede the efforts of the mariners engaged in attempting to save the vessel. But the sea has lost nothing of its strength, its capriciousness or its malignancy, and when the unexpected happens and the ship strikes it is, unfortunately, too true that, however staunchly built her skin, the attendant horrors are seldom wanting or the resultant calamity less direful than it was in olden days.

Almost all shipwrecks may be regarded in three aspects—the pathetic, the heroic and the picturesque. The cinematograph has not yet, so far as we are aware, recorded the various phases of a real shipwreck. The great liner, teeming with life, the microcosm of a big city; her people, expectant of a line and favorable passage, confident in the knowledge that those in charge are fully competent, hopeful that everything possible has been done for their comfort and security; then the fog or darkness closing in, uncertainty, uneasiness, the crash, the grinding on the rock. There follow the passionate sweep of the seas and the complaining echo of the surf, accompanied, perchance, by the raging of the wind and the terrible blast of the rain-filled tempest. Then tragedy, too frequently in sight of hundreds on shore who would be willing helpers, but are able to render little or no assistance. A few hours later and a raffle of wreckage on the storm-strewn beach is all that tells the fearful tale. Yet photography can aid in the realization of such events, and, as the photographs reproduced with this article show, can, more especially when the deserted hulk is for a time preserved, indicate, if only inadequately, the fury, the misery and the desolateness of shipwreck.

When fire is added to the other perils, then the spectacle becomes magnificent in its horrors. Describing the burning of the Queen Charlotte, of 110 guns, the flagship of Lord Keith, off Leghorn, in March, 1800, a spectator tells how the ship became enveloped in black clouds of suffocating smoke, from which here and there gleams of lurid flame arose. Then the fire became more vivid, rose higher and higher, grew brighter and brighter, crept quietly, but surely, onward and upward, enveloping the masts, the yards and all the delicate tracery of rigging and spars. The boats on the booms, the quarter-deck, the poop in one direction, and the forecastle, bowsprit and masts in the other, were each in turn enwrapped in flames, amid the flickering of which the dark bodies of the gallant officers and men stood out distinctly as they attempted to smother the fire with blankets and hammocks, or poured streams of water upon the burning parts. In spite of their almost superhuman efforts, the flames rolled on, making the destruction of the ship inevitable, while to add to the striking effect the guns, as they became hot, exploded, threatening the approach of those who would have gone to the succur of the crew. At length the fire reached the magazines, and the vessel blew up, sending a dusty column of debris and wreckage high into the air. All that was left unhurnt immediately sunk down by the stern; but when the ponderous contents of the hold had been washed away, the ship was suddenly seen to emerge almost her whole length from the deep, and then, turning over, she floated for a few moments on the surface with her burnished copper glistening in the sun. Such was the fate of the Queen Charlotte, the second largest ship in the British navy of her day; and quite recently an effect almost as striking was described by those who witnessed the burning of the steamship Volturno in mid-Atlantic.

It is on the heroic aspect of shipwreck that one would prefer to dwell, when the awful peril impending gives opportunity for the exhibition of fortitude and bravery, and when the imminence of death brings out those noble traits of character which have ever distinguished the seamen. In the excitement of battle each man joins in the conflict, excited and encouraged by the cheers of his comrades and the hopes of victory. But it is when suddenly confronted by the danger of shipwreck, when neither the nimbleness, dexterity or resource of the sailor is of much avail, that the moment arrives for him to display his self-possession, his devotion, his courage, and seldom has he failed to prove his merit in these circumstances. Over and over again we may read of a gallant fellow who would not desert their companions in misfortune, of the intrepidity of officers who could not be persuaded to quit their ships while a man remained on board. Quite recently the British admiralty named a destroyer in memory of Capt. Charles Lydiard, who, with a distinguished war record, was commanding the Anson, a fine 40-gun ship in December, 1807, when in a hard gale, owing to the thickness of the fog, she ran ashore to the west of the Lizard. The gale was tremendous, and when the vessel took the ground many of the men were washed away by the huge seas which swept the deck. Many others were killed by the falling spars, the crashing sound of which, as they came from aloft, mingled with the shrieks of the women on board, was heard by the spectators on shore amid the roar of the waters and the howling of the wind.

Calm and undaunted amid the terrors of the scene, Captain Lydiard is described as displaying in a remarkable degree that self-possession and passive heroism which has been so often the proud characteristic of the commander of a British ship of war under similar harassing conditions. He was able to restore order, to assist the wounded, to encourage the timid, and to revive expiring hope. By the main mast, which in falling overboard served as a communication between the ship and the shore, the captain pointed out that there was a means, dangerous certainly, by which the land could be reached. It was fated, however, that he should not himself enjoy the reward of his humanity. When seemingly everyone had left the vessel, and he was about to undertake the passage, he heard the cries of someone in terror, and found a youngster, a protege of his own, clinging in despair to a part of the wreck, without either strength or courage to make an effort for his own preservation. Captain Lydiard's resolution was instantly taken. Throwing an arm round the boy, with the other he clung to the spars and rigging and attempted the perilous passage ashore. But nature was exhausted by the mental and physical sufferings he had endured. He lost his hold, not of the boy, but of the mast, the waves swept over them and they perished together.

Or take, again, an incident which is related in connection with the cool heroism and gallantry of the middy who was detailed to guard the spirit room of the Abergavenny when that vessel went ashore. Some of the men, overcome by selfishness and fear in their panic-stricken state, came down determined to broach the rum casks, since they might as well die drunk as sober. "I know we must die," exclaimed the midshipman, "but let us die like men!" And he maintained his guard until the ship sank under him. It is unnecessary to relate the well-known example of courage and self-devotion shown at the loss of the troopship Birken head. From the captain downwards, without exception, seamen and soldiers all exhibited the utmost calmness and disregard of self. It has been said that the instinct of discipline was stronger in them than the instinct of life. And only recently we have another instance of fortitude and courage in the behavior of the bandsmen of the Titanic, who, amid that last terrible scene, continued to play until washed from their feet as the ship went down.

There are few more pathetic pictures of shipwreck than that presented by the loss of the Halsewell, an East Indiaman, outward bound in 1786. She had for her captain a man named Pierce, one of the most popular and experienced of the company's commanders. When she drove ashore in a gale under St. Alban's Head the sea was running too high and with too much fury to afford any chance of getting away in the boats. Among the many ladies on board were the captain's two daughters, and he called his chief mate to the cabin to ask if he could think of any method of preserving the lives of the girls. "Morning may bring up a chance," was the reply; "there is nothing to be done tonight, sir." The ship lay with her broadside to the shore, under the high and almost perpendicular cliff, with her deck exposed to the overwhelming rush of the seas. All the women were assembled in the round house, where Captain Pierce, with his arms round his daughters, sat holding his girls to his heart, speechless with despair. The only lights afforded to these poor women were a few wax candles in glass lanterns. Out of 240 people only 74 survived, and the third mate tells the story of how the people perished in the round house. The morning was just breaking when he went on deck, grasped a hencoop, was washed overboard, swept against the vessel, and then washed away again on the strand.

NOT COMPLAINING.

MONKEYS EASY PREY

JUNGLE LEOPARDS HAVE NO TROUBLE GETTING A DINNER.

Mere Clicking of Animal's Teeth Frighten Simians Until in Their Excitement They Fall From the Trees.

How the leopards of the low country jungle of Ceylon capture monkeys is told by L. S. Woolf in a letter to the London Times.

"Native Singhalese, who knew the jungle well," he writes, "always assured me that no form of food, except perhaps the dog, is so acceptable to the leopard as the large gray Wanderoo monkey. I have several times found the remains of monkeys that had obviously furnished the leopard's meal in the caves which serve the leopards for a lair—and the inside of a dead leopard has shown further proof.

"The Singhalese had often told me that leopards do not attempt to climb trees in search of their prey.

"Whenever monkeys see a leopard slinking under the trees they become excited and all chatter. As soon as the leopard hears this he lies down under a bush and begins to click his teeth.

"This noise seems to fill the monkey with terror and excitement. They huddle together in the tree top above the leopard's head, jumping up and down on the branches, shrieking and chattering. Below the leopard waits motionless, clicking its teeth, until suddenly one of the monkeys misses its footing and comes to the ground with a thud—and then the leopard is on it in a bound.

"I had always received this information with some doubt until I one day saw, at any rate, the first acts of the tragedy. I was traveling in thick jungle and my bullock carts having gone on in the early afternoon, I was following later in the evening down the same sandy track. I noticed that a large leopard had been following behind the bulls and that he had suddenly turned aside down a small game track.

"At the same moment I became aware of a tremendous chattering of monkeys in the distance. I had a Singhalese with me and we crept through the thick jungle toward the noise.

"After crawling about 150 yards I saw about fifteen to twenty monkeys jumping up and down excitedly on the top of a small tree. They seemed to be looking down at something on the other side of a large bush which was in front of me and when they saw us they kept on turning their heads first at us and then to something else, leaping up and down and shrieking perpetually and—as it appeared to me—gesticulating and beckoning to us with their long, thing gray arms.

"The same thought came to the Singhalese, for he whispered to me: 'They are beckoning you to shoot.' I lay still for a moment thinking which side of the bush it was best to crawl around, and then I distinctly heard the click, click, click of the leopard's teeth behind it. I chose the wrong side, for as I came around all I saw was the leopard disappear in a great curving bound into the thick jungle beyond."

Where "Stogie" Came From.

"Ever know how the word 'stogies' came into use?" asked Robert Simpson, a newspaper man of Pittsburgh, of a little party of his colleagues at the New Willard. No one in the group of writers did, whereupon Mr. Simpson proceeded: "I presume there are more stogies smoked in the middle west than any other form of tobacco. In fact, stogies are becoming popular the world over, and there are many who like them better than the best cigar. A long time ago I was in a Pennsylvania lumber district, and the timber was transported to market by means of teams. The teamsters in most instances had a long haul, and ordinarily would take a whole day to reach their destination, which was Conestoga. Instead of taking along a pipe, the teamsters would lay in a supply of Pennsylvania tobacco, and as they drove along, with one hand would roll it into shape for smoking. These rolls came to be known as Conestogas, and as time went on the word was contracted to 'stogies.'"

Do We Eat Too Much?

Four meals a day is the average person's program—different dishes at each meal, and a feeling that something must be wrong if the appetite is not up to the mark each time.

Do we, as a nation, physically progress on this scale? Coarse brown bread and sour wine was the staple diet of the Roman soldiers who built such wonderful roads, and carried a weight of armor and luggage that would appal the average porter. Regularity and constancy in exercise, and temperance in diet, was their motto.

The coolie fed on rice has greater endurance, is more active, and keeps more fit than the negro fed on meat.

Sour olives and a little fruit enable the porters of Smyrna comfortably to walk off with their load of 100 pounds' weight.

In Spain the peasant works all day, and dances half the night, yet rarely is his food varied from black bread, onion and watermelon.

Dreamless Rabbit.

Those who want a dreamless sleep after the late tidbits will surely appreciate this rule and will enjoy the dish in the bargain.

Put in the blazer of a chafing dish one tablespoonful of butter; when hot add one cupful of milk, a cupful of fresh breadcrumbs, two cups of grated fresh cheese, add a teaspoonful of dry mustard and a pinch of paprika and salt. Stir constantly and when well blended add two well-beaten eggs. Cook one minute and serve at once on hot crackers. This is delicious made with Edam cheese, using one cup of grated cheese, one and one-half cups of milk and one and one-half cups of breadcrumbs. It also makes a good luncheon dish.

Charming Afternoon Gown by Paquin

PAQUIN, who delights in surprising us with novel and intricate gowns, sometimes charms us with the simplest of creations which still embody the stamp of Paquin distinction. One of the latter is pictured in the illustration here. The skirt is of black charmeuse with a little coatee of black velvet and a bodice of plaited chiffon.

The skirt is a marvel of clever adjustment to the lines of the figure by means of shaping and the least possible draping. It is made in one with the corsage which includes the little coat and bodice effect. A more practical development of the toilette would manage to make the coat separate, because it could be removed indoors or worn as a separate coat with other gowns.

The coat is trimmed with fashionable skunk fur in a fine silky grade. This fur varies so much in quality that some skins are worth twice as much—and more—than others. It is used on practically every outside garment which women wear.

This gown should be chosen by those of plump figure who wish to wear velvet. Like other pile fabrics velvet must be carefully managed and is best made up along plain and severe lines, like those shown in the model pictured.

There is not much warmth in an outside garment which leaves the chest uncovered, and therefore similar little coats are shown with wide revers to turn forward when one is outdoors and away from the chest indoors. But the lovely Paquin model, which we are studying, was not designed so much with reference to its practical side as to its picturesque and novel appearance. The clever handling of the fastening in front, where ribbon is wrapped about the fur and we are left to wonder how the wearer gets into or out of the gown, is most attractive.

The standing and full riff of tulle is a wonderful touch in the finishing of the costume.

In keeping with it, and not taking the attention at all, the fur trimmed turban of black velvet with its little nosegay of gay flowers is just the hat for this gown. The ensemble leaves nothing to be desired—it is simple enough to please the most quiet taste and distinctive enough to suit the most discriminating dresser.

COMBINATION OF WHITE WITH BLACK CREPE

APPARENTLY the combination of white with black crepe has come to stay. In those shops that specialize in this branch of apparel one sees a great deal of white crepe used in millinery. In the winter time it appears in facings or borders, or in made ornaments. It is in facing hats of black crepe that it is best liked.

For summer mourning, white crepe is used more extensively. All-white hats, and combinations of black and white crepe, in which the latter predominates, gives us a new kind of mourning millinery in which it is possible to be comfortable and to look cool as well.

The method of draping veils varies with the season and with ideas that enter the realm of fashion and succeed in remaining there. The veil of crepe is only moderately long now and usually draped in a box plait at the back. It may be widened to hang from the sides of the shape as shown in the illustration, or narrowed to hang straight down.

The crepe veil is, in fact, not worn as a veil but as a part of the composition of hats for first mourning. Small face veils of net, with narrow border of crepe are supplied on the models that carry the long crepe veils. All models in mourning millinery are made up in the fashionable shops in either white or black, except in cases where the character of the design calls for a combination of the two or for one color alone.

The manufacture of crepe has been so perfected that it has become practical for people of moderate means. The waterproofing processes have made it among the most durable of fabrics instead of fragile, as it used to be. We are indebted to the English manufacturers for this fine achievement. Crepe used to be a luxury which only rich people could really afford.

Coronation Daisies.

The name is rather mystifying. However, it has no royal significance, as it would at first suggest. The daisies, artificial flowers, are simply fashioned from coronation braid. First cover flat, round buttons with yellow satin of the shade found in dairy centers. The buttons are the size of the centers of the natural flowers. Then about these centers loop petals of white silk coronation braid and fasten them to back of the button center. Leaf-green silk soutache braid is used for the stems, and loops of the same can be made into leaves. Three dainty little flowers can be used to trim a hat, ornament a gown, used for neckwear, or any one of a number of purposes.

Comforter Slip.

Make your comforter in the usual way, using white cheesecloth next to the cotton. Take your silkoline or other goods; steam it up in the usual way, sewing the edges together to form a slip; now slip it on the white comforter and tie enough to hold it in place. When comforter becomes soiled take the slip off and launder, bang the cotton on the line. Beat lightly with the carpet beater; you will have a clean comforter without the usual hard labor of lifting a heavy wet comforter, and your cotton will stay soft and fluffy much longer.—Los Angeles Express.

New Chiffon Bags.

The newest thing in bags to carry in the afternoon and evening is made of figured chiffon with a brown background, figured with yellow roses in an indistinct design.

This is mounted over cloth of gold and silver stripes and has a silver clasp and chain.

Another bag is made of mauve and green chiffon mounted over silver cloth. Silver cords are used for drawstrings at the top and a silver tassle is fastened to the pointed end of the bag.

The Popular Pannier.

We were very disdainful of paniers when an attempt was made to revive them a few seasons ago. Now we are using them freely on day and evening gowns. A new variety is formed from two wide gathered flounces which are attached to the skirt on both sides and interlined with fine muslin so that they stand well out from the hips.

COULDN'T GO BACK ON THAT

President Tyler's Own Indorsement Used to Secure Good Office for Incompetent Friend.

President Tyler had a curious office seeking experience at the very beginning of his administration. Old Jack Dade, a character about Washington, who had been the president's classmate at college, went to the White House, and said he, "Jack, I want an office."

"You do?" said President Tyler. "What office on earth do you think you are fit for?"

"Why, one o' these sinecurees," I hear so much about—no work and good pay," Dade promptly replied.

"Well, Jack," said Tyler deprecatingly, "you know that I am president now and must have some kind of warrant for making an appointment. Can you get anybody to indorse you? Could you bring me a letter of recommendation?

"Oh, yes," said Dade. "I'm fixed for that," and he produced a letter of four pages written by Tyler himself to President Harrison, whom he had just succeeded, urging the claims of his dear friend and classmate, Col. John W. Dade, for a good, fat office. "Cast your eye over that!" he exclaimed in triumph.

Tyler read the letter attentively to the end, folded it carefully and said: "Jack, your backing is irresistible. Come up here tomorrow, and I'll have a place for you."

The next day Col. John W. Dade was appointed keeper of the federal prison of the District of Columbia.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Getting a Proper Start.

"I am to address an audience of woman suffragists,' said an orator, "and I don't know exactly what to say."

"Oh, that's easy," replied Senator Sorghum. "Your usual line of talk will do. Only don't forget and say 'friends and fellow citizens' instead of 'ladies and gentlemen!'"

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF PICKED UP BY OFFICERS

Had Stolen Animal from the Barn of John Elsey Near Cranesville.

A young man giving his name as Metheney, and claiming to be a resident of Preston county, W. Va., was picked up at the Kelly livery barn in Oakland last Saturday by Sheriff Bert C. Scott, charged with having stolen a horse from the barn of Mr. John Elsey, a farmer residing near Cranesville, W. Va., the same morning.

Prior to Metheny's arrival in Oakland Mr. Kelly was notified by Mr. Elsey to be on the lookout for a horse, minutely describing the animal he had lost. About noon Metheny put in an appearance and upon making an examination of the animal Mr Kelly found that it tallied exactly with the description telephoned by Mr. Elsey. Metheny offered to sell the animal to Mr. Kelly, who in the meantime had notified Sheriff Scott, who went to the stable and placed Metheny under arrest. He consented to go back to West Virginia without requision papers and was taken to Terra Alta the same evening by the officers of that town and placed in the lock-up. Sometime during Sunday morning Metheny battered the side out of the prison and made good his escape and is still at large.

Oakland Lady Makes Her Debut.

From the society news columns of last Friday's Baltimore Evening Sun the following has been clipped:

A beautiful reception was given last night by Mr. and Mrs. William D. Bowie at their residence, 1021 North Charles street, for Miss Margaret Howell, of Oakland, Md.; Miss Agra Bennett, of Washington, nieces of Mrs. Bowie, and Miss Helen Whitridge, a neice of Mr. Bowie.

Miss Howell, who spent last winter in Rome, where she was at school, and who traveled during the summer in Europe, made her debut last evening.

After the reception, to which about 200 people were asked, there was dancing.

In the receiving party were Mrs Fleming Howell and Mrs. Lewis Bennett, sisters of Mrs. Bowie; Miss Clark, of Washington, a daughter of the Speaker of the House; Miss Joseph Tunstall Smith, Miss Alice Preston, Miss Anne Steele and Miss Sara White.

BOY FELL QUITE A DISTANCE

Uriel Cheuvront Took A High Dive Saturday But Was Not Much Hurt.

Uriel, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cheuvront, fell from the upper porch of the new home of the Cheuvront family last Saturday a distance of some sixteen feet, but escaped injury, alighting upon his feet in a pile of discarded building material which lay alongside the house.

The boy's escape from serious as well as painful injuries was miraculous.

NEW EXPRESS RATES.

Will Go Into Effect Sunday February The First.

By order of the Interstate Commerce Commission all Express companies will greatly reduce rates on all express matter on the first day of February next. The reduction will be about 33 per cent under former charges, and in many instances not exceed parcel post charges and in some instances will be less, especially on packages of ten pounds and over shipped to points outside of the first and the second zones. For instance the new rate from New York City to Chicago for 20 pounds will be 61 cents, the old rate is $1.00. From New York to Dallas, Texas, the old rate on 5 pounds is 75 cents; the new rate will be 45 cents pracel post charges, 51 cents. It will be well to enquire at your local express office for the new rate.

The express companies are becoming large advertisers. They are going to make a fight to hold on to and increase their business, and will use the columns of the newspapers to call the attention of the public to the new rates and advantages of using express to ship packages of all sizes.

Mt. Lake Ice to Brunswick.

W. E. Shannon, transfer agent, has a force of hands at work filling the B. & O. railroad company's large ice house near the transfer shed in Brunswick. The ice is being harvested at Mountain Lake and shipped to Brunswick in box cars. Mr. Shannon says it is the best quality of natural ice they have ever had.

The cakes range from one foot to fifteen inches in thickness and are cut about two feet square. They are all nearly uniform in size so that they will pack closer.

A force of about fifty hands have been at this work for several days and about one month will be required to fill the house. When full it holds 5,500 tons.—Frederick News.

COMPLETION OF ROAD TO ACCIDENT CONTEMPLATED

Bids Are Asked By The State Roads Commission Advertisement Today.

By reference to our advertising columns today it will be noted that the State Roads Commission of Maryland, invite proposals for the construction of a section of road in Garrett county between Hoyes and Accident, about two and three-quarters miles in length.

Bids for the construction of this road will be received by the Commission at its office in Baltimore until noon of February 17th, at which time and place they will be publicly open and read.

It is the intention of the Commission to receive bids for two different classes of construction on this stretch of road—concrete and macadam. Should the concrete construction be used it will be the first section of road built of this material in the county. Other parts of the country have tried it and it has proved to be equal if not superior to the plain macadam.

The section proposed to be built will carry the road through the town of Accident toward the National Road. While the announcement has not been made by the Commission, it is understood that that body contemplates the completion of the road from Accident to connect with the National Road at Keyser's Ridge some time within the next year.

In addition to the proposed work to be done upon the State road from Hoyes to Accident, the Roads Commission also advertises in this paper today for bids for the construction of three and more than a half miles of work on the old National Road between Piney Grove and Sutton, thus connecting up all the sections remaining to be completed lying between Grantsville and Frostburg, giving the people of the Northern end of the county a continuous good road for a distance of about fourteen miles.

THE DEATH RECORD

AARON W. SEYMOUR.

Aaron W. Seymour, 68 years old, of Hardy county, W. Va., died Tuesday at Moorefield. He was a brother of Mrs. D. E. Offutt, of Oakland, and Mrs. Caudy and Mrs. Boggs, of Baltimore.

ALBERT WEST.

Albert West, aged thirty-eight years, died at his home in Piedmont, W. Va., Monday afternoon after an illness of some time. The immediate cause of his demise was hemorrhage of the lungs. He is survived by a daughter aged nine years, and his wife, who was Miss Wolf, formerly of Deer Park, a sister of Mrs. Charles R. Savage. The funeral of the deceased occurred at Bloomington yesday morning.

ALPHA HINEBAUGH

Mr. Alpha Hinebaugh, whose illness was noted in these columns last Thursday as having been stricken with paralysis that morning, died at his home Tuesday afternoon of this week without having gained consciousness, aged nearly seventy-two years. Mr. Hinebaugh was born in Somerset county, Pa., April 26th, 1842, and came to Oakland with his parents about the year 1855, where he continued to reside his entire lifetime. During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Hinebaugh enlisted as a member of Co. K, 5th West Virginia Infantry, and served throughout the war. Shortly after the close of hostilities he was married to Miss Fannie Ward to which union were five children born namely Harry, Albert, Roy, Bessie, and Rose, the latter having died but a few years ago. The deceased a quiet, law abiding citizen, was engaged for many years prior to his death in the livery business. His funeral will occur at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon from his late residence, the services to be conducted by the Rev. W. H. Shearer, pastor of the Protestant Episcopal church, of which the family of the deceased are members.

Spelling Bee.

Do not forget the Lincoln Birthday spelling bee to be held at the Oakland Grammar school Thursday evening, Feb. 12, 1914. Everyone is invited to attend. The silver offering will be used to help purchase a public drinking fountain which the Civic club expect to have erected.

Refreshments will be served.

SEN. SPEICHER'S COONTY-WIDE BILL PASSED SENATE

By A Unanimous Vote Tuesday Afternoon—Now In House.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Feb., 4.

Senator Harvey M. Speicher has made good his promise of a countywide local option bill for Garrett by passing the measure through the Senate. The bill went through on Tuesday afternoon by unanimous vote and the measure is now in the hands of the House. Indications point to the local option measure meeting obstacles in the latter body as the temperance sentiment there is not as strong as in the Senate. The bill on its first reading in the House will be sent to the Temperance Committee under a previous ruling of Speaker Trippe regarding a similar measure, and the regulation number of days will be taken up by the committee before a report is made. Then the latter will probably be unfavorable.

The members of the Garrett delegation in the House will have to work together for the measure if favorable action is to be obtained. As has already been explained the bill is of a most drastic nature and the liquor interests feel that the passage of one bill of its kind will be but the beginning of similar legislation for the several other counties which may sweep through the state like a windstorm. Senator Speicher has also advanced to the third reading file another temperance bill which affects his home district alone and which prohibits the sale of liquor within a stated area.

The Garrett Senator has declared that he intends to put the countywide measure through the Assembly if it takes every ounce of his legislative powers and the manner in which he is tackling the job indicates that he proposes to make good his word.

While interested in temperance legislation Senator Speicher is not permitting other interests of the county to suffer. Yesterday he introduced a bill asking half a millions dollars from the state for an accident hospital to be erected in Oakland and several days previously he introduced a measure providing for extension of the corporate limits of Oakland.

Senator Zihlman, of Allegany county is pushing legislation advantageous to the miners of both his own and Garrett county. He has two chief bills along that score. One provides that mine owners and operators shall sharpen and keep in shape the tools of the miners and the other that the miners shall be paid for their services in performing all classes of "dead work" within the pockets such as laying additional tracks, erecting special timbering, bailing of water and other such work as is not directly connected with the actual mining of coal. For these services the man shall be paid at the same rate as if they were mining.

Delegate Savage's bill for a poor farm for Garrett is creating much local interest. The bill provides that the County Commissioners and a committee of ten other persons, who are named in the act, shall with a sum of from $8,000 to $10,000 taken from the 1914 levy buy a farm of from 100 to 300 acres and erect all necessary buildings and purchase the necessary equipment for the plant. All inmates of the county jail shall work out their fines or terms of imprisonment on the farm when physically able to do so.

Delegate Shartzer's bill raising the age when girls may marry without the consent of their parents from 16 to 18 years is in the hands of the Judiciary Committee. Mr. Shartzer has followed the lead of Senator Speicher and has offered an cigarette bill as well as several pieces of unimportant legislation. Mr. Savage also has introduced a bill to change the requirements for voters in Garrett county who have not been of long residence in the county.

A bill which is of general interest to the counties is the measure introduced Tuesday by Senator Beck changing the time for primary elections from early fall to late spring or early summer. His bill changes the date of the primaries on other than presidential years from September to not later than the second Monday in June and in presidential years to the first Monday in May. Mr. Beck says the changes are needed so that the farmers will not be running around the country attending political meetings during the summer months.

Both houses of the legislature have now gotten well into their stride and much work is being accomplished. The session is especially noticeable, however, through the lack of debates and fights which have marked other sessions. The present quietness, however, is believed to be but a forerunner of a bitter storm which will break during the last weeks of the session.

Senator Speicher's Local Option Bill will be severely attacked in the House, where it will be referred to the Committee on Temperance. Mr. W. J. Miller, a prominent distiller and liquor dealer of Garrett county, spent last week here, and he is expected to return today, to continue his fight on the bill. He claims to have assurance from the Baltimore City Delegation as well as a number of county members throughout the House, that they will vote against the bill if it should come from the Temperance Committee with a favorable report. Mr. Miller's aim however, is to have the Temperance Committee report the bill unfavorably, and he does not expect that even the members from Garret county will ask to substitute the bill for the unfavorable report. Mr. Shartzer, of the Garrett Delegation, is said to be opposed to Senator Speicher's bill, and he has one of his own, differing materially, however from the Senator's. On the precedent established last Thursday, however, in conceding to the Baltimore City members the right to have the local legislation they asked for in the Condemnation Bill, it is more than likely that they will allow the Speicher bill to go through if Delegates Harvey and Savage asked for it, being two out of three members. Mr. Miller is working hard to defeat the bill in the House, and in his efforts he is being assisted by Mr. Oldham, the "legislative agent" of the State Liquor Dealers' Association.

TALLEST MAN IN GABBETT COONTY DEAD AT AVILTON

"Long John" Chaney Aged 84 Years, a Well Known Character.

John Chaney, familiarly known in Oakland as "Long John," reputed to be the tallest man in Western Maryland, died at his home at Avilton, Garrett county, Sunday, morning at 8 o'clock. He was 84 years old.

Mr. Chaney is survived by eight children. His wife died several years ago. The children are Mrs. George Rephorn, Mrs. John T. Lancaster, and Mrs. John Street, all of Eckhart; Mrs. Frank Crowe, Frostburg; Mrs. Sadie McKenzie and Mrs. Edward Weiner, both of Avilton; Mrs. Nelson Broadwater, of Merrill, Md., and C. Chaney, of Salisbury, Pa. Forty-three grandchildren and twenty-five great grandchildren also survive.

For years "Long John" was a frequent visitor to Oakland. He was always in town on circus days. He some times would march at the head of the circus parade. He was six and one-half feet tall. To walk from his home in Garrett county to Cumberland was a frequent performance. He possessed a remarkable consitution. During his long life he was seldom ill.

Chaney was noted as a friend of P. T Barnum, who on account of his height, wanted him to travel with his show. Chaney was always Barnum's guest when the show was in this territory.

John Chaney was a farmer. He was one of the best respected men in his community.

Jacob Hafer, the Frostburg undertaker, had charge of the funeral, which took place at Avilton Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Edward Weiner.

BITTINGER.

The bright warm days experienced last week caused the sugar camp owners in this section to begin to think about making maple sugar.

Leonard Stark, of Blaine, W. Va., is spending some time with his parents and friends here.

C. E. Ellithorp and daughter, Mrs. Asa J. Orendorf, spent last week in Baltimore, where Mrs. Orendorf underwent a surgical operation.

Miss Sarah Speicher, of this place, went to Baltimore last week where she will be treated in one of the city hospitals.

Austin Bittinger visited his mother, Mrs. David Miller, near Deer Park, last week.

F. M. Bittinger made a business trip to Accident last Saturday.

Prof. G. W. Sterling spent Saturday and Sunday with his children at Mt. Lake Park.

Ashford Warnick, of The Backwoods Settlement, passed through this village one day last week.

Frank Brenneman purchased a white Orpington rooster from a Pennsylvania dealer last week at a cost of $14.

Oakland High School Notes.

We had the pleasure of a visit from County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun last Thursday and Friday.

Miss Smith, on account of a severe cold, is absent from school a few days this week.

Margaret Glotfelty has been out of school for a week on account of chickenpox.

A committee of seventeen has been appointed to get up a tentative program for a field meet to be held one of the last days of school.

The Basket Ball team will probably go the Kingwood Saturday, February 7, to play the Kingwood High School.

In a letter to Gov. Goldsborough today the Oakland teachers indorsed the reappointment of Dr. M. Bates Stephens to the position of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Dr. Stephens term of office expires this spring.

The following names were omitted from the honor roll last week: Lloyd Casteel, Mabel White.

OUT OF TOWN HAPPENINGS

A Variety of Interesting Paragraphs for Republican Readers

Harvey H. Miller and daughter, Miss Nettie, of Gratsville, Md., were in Meyersdale Tuesday, the latter being enroute to Somerset to join the family of W. P. Young with whom she has been living for some time. Miss Miller before Christmas accompanied Mrs. Young and children to Akron, O., to visit the family of G. H. Duncombe formerly of Meyersdale. Miss Miller also visited her brother William H. Miller, who lives at Lake, O., about ten miles from Akron. Her sister, Miss Mintie Miller, was also visiting her brother at the same time. The two sisters returned to their home near Grantsville in time to attend their father's sale last Saturday. Mr. Young is in South America on business for the Consolidation Coal Company at present. Meyersdale Republican.

John Chaney, one of Garrett county's best known citizens, fell and injured himself quite badly one day last week, since which time he has been confined to his home.—Frostburg Spirit.

Civic Club Spelling Bee.

Every one is invited to attend the Lincoln Birthday spelling bee, to be held Thursday evening, Feb. 12, 1914, at the Oakland Grammar school, under the auspices of the Civic Club. Refreshments will be served, silver offering.

GIESSMAN HOTEL SOLD BY OWNER TO D. P. HANSEL

Deal Was Closed Last Friday and Possession will Be Given March 1.

Last Friday morning the Giessman Hotel property in Oakland was sold by its owner to Mr. David P. Hansel, formerly of District No. 11 of Garrett county, but who moved from that section to Morgantown with his family early last fall where he expected to embark in business for himself, but found conditions in that town unfavorable and decided to return to his native county.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansel came to Oakland Thursday afternoon from Morgantown remained here until the following day arranging to take over the property. Possession will be given on March 1st at which time Mr. Giessman will retire from the management and go into some other business in Oakland. The price paid for the property was in the neighborhood of $8500.

Mr. and Mrs. Hansel are both excellent people and we bespeak for them the continued patronage of those who have been stopping at the Giessman hotel for years past.

A Fine Improvement at Mt. Lake Park

Mr. George W. Clawson, owner of the Queenwood Hotel and the storeroom heretofore occupied by H. E. Felty, was here Tuesday and expressed satisfaction with the improvements already made by Mr. Widdowson, and while here contracted with Messrs Gay W. Hayden and George Dawson for the painting of both buildings. The Queenwood will be put in the best possible condition for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Grant entertained a number of their friends last night.

County Superintendent F. E. Rathbun is at Annapolis attending a meeting of the various educational officials of the State.

Rev. Dr. J. C. Ely returned to Oakland this morning from a few days' visit to his son, Mr. Albert Ely, at Danville, Ky.

The financial statement of the Garrett County Telephone Company appears in this issue today. Stockholders and others interested in the welfare of the company should read it.

We regret to note that Mr. Austin Brown is still lying in a very precarious condition at his home in Oakland. He suffered a relapse some ten days ago and has been extremely ill ever since.

Mr. L. Lochner, of Lonaconing, who has been connected with the mechanical department of the Republican for nearly a year past, severed his connection therewith yesterday afternoon and will return to his home in Lonaconing this morning.

HAD NO RIGHT TO BE OUT

Little Jasper Indignant Because His Product Seemingly Had Disobeyed His Orders.

Little Jasper Senter learned from the minister's sermon one Sunday that man was made of clay, so after returning from church he resolved to make him a man after his own fashion. The work proceeded in the clay bank back of the garden until his mother called Jasper to luncheon. He had completed all of the man save one leg.

That afternoon Jasper and his mother, while walking along the street, met a man with one leg, walking with crutches. Jasper accosted him and grabbed his coat.

"See here!" he said. "I thought I told you to stay there in the yard till I put that other leg on you."—Judge.

IN PAIN WITH HEMORRHOIDS

Bissell, Ala.—"I was troubled for several years with protruding hemorrhoids. They caused pain of the most severe kind and some loss of blood. They were so inflamed that the touch of anything against them was most intense agony. I got no rest nights and had to have my legs and feet propped up in the bed.

"I tried all kinds of advertised cures, and I was told that an operation was the only relief. I suffered untold agony. I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a sample. I tried it and then procured a box of Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. I was cured sound and well in three weeks' time. SCIENCE and INVENTION

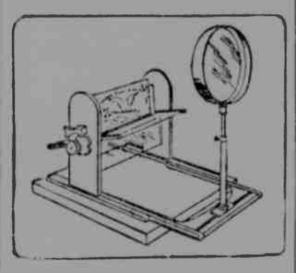
SOME USES OF QUICKSILVER



Increasing Demand Has Been Reported in Manufacture of Electrical Appliances in Scotland.

Quicksilver is used mainly in the manufacture of fulminate for explosive caps, of drugs, of electric lighting and scientific apparatus, and in the recovery of the precious metals, especially of gold, by amalgamation. An increasing demand has been reported in manufactures of electric appliances. An interesting and increasing use in Scotland is the floating of the lights of lighthouses upon a body of quicksilver. The metal is not consumed, of course, and the loss in use is insignificant. Concerning this Consul Fleming writes as follows, according to the Geological Survey Bulletin: "The commissioners of northern lighthouses, Edinburgh, have in their charge 90 lighthouses on the coast of Scotland. Up to the year 1900 the revolving lights were borne on rollers. The 'float' system has been gradually introduced, however, and is now in operation at 30 coast stations and will be used at all others. The lighting machinery rests on a pontoon which runs on quicksilver in a groove. The quantity of mercury required for this purpose in a lighthouse is from seven to eight flasks of 75 pounds each. As the waste is trifling, the total present demand for this purpose is small."

glass plates extending from it at equal angular intervals. On a slide at the bottom a magnifying glass is adjustably mounted. This glass can be moved up and down, while the slide moves it toward or away from the standards, which support the bank note under examination. The note is laid against one of the plates and can be inclined from the lens at any angle desired, preferably a slight angle with the vertical, which permits of the examiner looking completely through it if there is a strong light on the other side, and counting the threads in the paper, which is one way of testing

BOTTLE IS NON-REFILLABLE

Device Consists of Porcelain Tube With Cork Binding About Its Base—Arrangements for Air.

The latest device for making a bottle impossible to refill is illustrated herewith. It is the invention of Seth E. Gill of Brooklyn, who has received patents for it in every country that grants patents.

Mr. Gill's device consists of a porcelain tube with a cork binding about its base. This is inserted into the neck of the bottle, where the cork swells with moisture and holds it fast. Once in it cannot be removed without breaking, for its upper part is fragile, says the New York World.

It is cast in two halves, each having sockets for the hinges of the two valves. These latter are cast separately. When they and the porcelain ball are put in position and the two halves fitted together they are held firm by the cork socket at the bottom and a ring at the top. When the bottle stands upright the ball and the two valves close every aperture and nothing can be poured in. As soon as the bottle is tilted the pressure of the liquid from below opens the valves and permits the contents to be poured out. An ingenious arrangement on the side opposite to that on which the liquid is being poured admits just enough air to balance the outgoing stream.

vanes intersecting along the line of a shaft parallel with the direction of flight. These multiple-vane wings are arranged so that they can be freely revolved on their shafts.

USES FOR THE SCLEROSCOPE

Its Special Function Is to Determine the Hardness and Elasticity of Various Surfaces.

The scleroscope has been described as a kind of mechanical finger, intended to discriminate, by delicacy of touch, between various substances submitted to it. The ready detection of the degree of hardness and elasticity of various surfaces is its special function. It consists essentially of a little weight, like the hammer of a pile-driver, which is allowed to fall inside a tube placed upright on the surface to be tested. The bottom of the hammer, which weighs only a few grams, is finished with a blunted diamond, intended to give it the requisite hardness. After a fall it rebounds, and a carefully graduated scale on the tube, indicating the height of the rebound, shows the degree of hardness of the surface experimented with. On a piece of ordinary steel the hammer rebounds nine-tenths of the height of its fall.

Cellulose to Peat.

Dr. F. R. Bergius, the scientist who has been conducting experiments in producing artificial coal, has, by employing a high temperature and a high pressure, changed cellulose to peat in a few hours. The same change by the process employed by nature, he states, required 7,000,000 years.

COMMON EVERY DAY FOODS.

The common dishes which are prepared every day are those which we delight to vary, in order to appeal to the appetite.

Cheese is so common upon our tables, but I wonder if we realize its food value. Nearly every one has an idea that cheese is indigestible, but the government reports, which are based upon many experiments, show us that it is not, as supposed, hard to digest, for it is proved to be as easily digested as meat and has twice its muscle-making value.

An ounce of cheese is equivalent in nutritive value to one egg, two ounces of meat or a glass of milk.

Cheese is admirably adapted for all races, all climates and conditions, and with a hard cracker and a bit of fruit will supply all the sustenance needed to give a well balanced ration.

Cheese is at its best uncooked, though we like the variety which it gives in combination with other foods.

One needs to remember that cheese is a very rich, condensed food, and in planning dishes in which it is used the fat of other foods should be eliminated.

Corn and Cheese Souffle.—Into a tablespoonful of melted butter turn two cups of grated cheese, then add a fourth of a cup of fresh grated corn, or the canned will do; stir for a moment and add two egg yolks and a half cup of tomato which has been put through a sieve; add a chopped red pepper, salt and paprika. Toast bread on one side, rub the untoasted side with the cut side of a clove of garlic. Pour the cooked mixture over the untoasted side of the bread, and serve at once.

Nut and Cheese Salad.—Cook together a tablespoonful of grated onion with a tablespoonful of butter; add a little water and cook until the onion is tender. Mix well a cupful each of bread crumbs, grated cheese and nuts—walnuts, or any kind desired. Add the cooked onion, moisten with more water if needed, and put into a baking dish to brown.

Cheese with macaroni as an escalloped dish is another very good way of serving cheese. It is also good combined with rice.

When making a brown betty, use cheese instead of butter with the bread crumbs.

It is generally the man who doesn't know any better who does the thing that can't be done. You see the blinded fool don't know that it can't be done, so he goes ahead and does it.

—Chas. Austin Bates.

Soup rejoices the stomach and disposes it to receive and digest food.

—Brillat Savarin.

SOUPS, HOT AND COLD.

The following is a favorite German soup which can be taken hot in winter and cold in summer.

Bread Soup.—Take crusts of rye bread, cover with water and, when soft, strain and put the liquid back over the fire with a little butter, a handful of dried currants, sugar to taste, a piece of stick cinnamon and a dash of salt. A little vinegar or lemon juice is often added. The soup should be but slightly thickened.

Almond Soup.—Scald and blanch a quarter of a pound of almonds, pound until fine and add them to a pint of fresh milk; press through a sieve, reheat, sweeten, add the juice of an orange and serve cold.

Carrot Soup.—Scrape and slice thin a pint of carrots, cook until tender with a stalk of celery and a sliced green pepper. Remove the peppers and put the carrots through a sieve. Mix together two tablespoonfuls of butter and two of flour, cook and add to a pint of milk. Cook until smooth. Add the carrot, season with salt, pepper and nutmeg, and add a little cream.

Corn and Pea Soup.—Take one cupful each of corn and peas, the canned variety will do. Rub the peas through a sieve and heat the corn until thoroughly hot. Take three tablespoonfuls of nut butter, add gradually to a cupful of boiling water, season to taste and add to the corn and peas.

Peach Puree.—Press canned or ripe peaches through a sieve, measure, and to each pint add a pint of water, the juice of a lemon and a half teaspoonful of almond extract. Bring to the boiling point and thicken with a teaspoon of arrow root or cornstarch moistened in a half cupful of water. Stir until smooth and thick, then set aside to cool. Serve with cracked ice in glasses.

A frivolous word, a sharp retore,
A flash from a passing cloud,
Two hearts are scathed to their inmost core,
Are nalled and lust forever more
Two faces turn to the crowd
Masked with pride with a life-long tie
To hide the scars of that agony.

DISHES WORTH TRYING.

When there is a little stewed corn or creamed corn left from dinner, a good supper or breakfast dish may be made of it. Toast slices of bread, butter well and pour over the seasoned corn. Serve very hot. Peas may be served the same way.

Custard Pudding.—Line a baking dish with slices of sponge cake, make a custard of a quart of milk and the yolks of four eggs, one-half a cup of sugar and flavoring to taste. Pour the custard into the baking dish over the cake. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff and sweeten with four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; spread over the top of the custard when it is nearly baked. Brown the meringue and serve cold. If the custard is cooked before putting into the dish the browning of the meringue is all the heat needed.

Beef en Casserole.—Broil a two-inch slice of steak until brown on both sides, then lay in a casserole with two cups of rich brown sauce; add three onions cut in halves, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Put on the casserole, cover and set in a moderate oven for two or three hours. Serve from the casserole. Season the meat with salt, pepper and a bay leaf while cooking.

Orange Pudding.—Moisten a cup of bread crumbs with as much milk as they will absorb. Beat the yolks of four eggs with the whites of two, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar and the grated yellow rind of an orange. Stir all together, then fold in the beaten whites of the eggs, and steam in a well buttered mold two hours. Serve with Chocolate Fudge With Raisins.—Two cupfuls of sugar, a half cup of milk, a third of a cup of sirup, a square of chocolate and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Cook together until a soft ball is formed in cold water, add a half cupful of chopped raisins and a few pecans, broken in bits. Stir until thick, pour out into a greased pan and mark off in squares.

Today is the best day for commencing to improve. Each day makes the task harder. Cicero spoke truthfully when he declared: "Men are like wine, age sears the bad and improves the good."

MEALS FOR A DAY.

For a good breakfast there is nothing more wholesome than a bit of fruit; a half of a grape fruit or orange or an apple to make a good beginning.

During the cold weather, after a small dish of oatmeal well cooked and served with good top milk or thin cream, two or three griddle cakes, a piece of bacon or a small ball of sausage and a cup of coffee will make a satisfying meal for a busy, active person.

If the noonday meal is a dinner, we will have a good soup of some kind, either a clear broth with rice or a vegetable soup. For the meat dish try a pot roast with prunes. It is very common, but it is very good.

Add a pound of well washed prunes to the meat while cooking, and remove them and add a little seasoned vinegar to them, and serve with the meat.

For a vegetable that is nice to serve with the roast, onions stuffed with bread crumbs and nuts and basted while cooking with butter and water.

A simple salad of lettuce with French dressing or a little chopped apple and celery served on lettuce makes a good substantial salad.

Apple pie and cheese, the cheese grated and sprinkled over the top of the pie and set in the oven to melt, is a good dessert.

If one desires a simple one that is more easily prepared, there is always canned fruit and small cakes and cookies, which, with a cup of tea, is a dessert nice enough for anybody.

Emergency Pudding.—Toast stale cake, spread with preserves and put slices together in the form of sandwiches. Top with flavored and sweetened whipped cream, dot with bits of jelly, and serve.

Cottage cheese, apple sauce and hot ginger bread is another good combination for a supper or a luncheon.

Nellie Maxwell.

Why Metals Die.

Metals get sick and die, just as do plants and animals. At least such is the conclusion of the French government, which is at present devoting considerable attention to the matter. An alloy of aluminum and copper is used for military helmets in France as well as many utensils and implements which are used by the army.

This metal becomes corroded in the course of time. Little holes appear in its surface and later on it is blemished with light gray spots at varying intervals. It is as if it were attacked by a sort of eczema, which eventually destroys it altogether. Another and very striking characteristic of the disease is now studied is that it is spread by contact.

His Money's Worth.

"Don't you advertise music with meals?"

"A ham sandwich is rather a small order, sir."

"Still, I think the orchestra ought to render a few bars."

Worth Knowing.

In 1620, 90 young white girls, and in the following year 60 more, were brought over from England and sold to the settlers in Virginia for wives. The price was first 100, then 150 pounds of tobacco, worth three shillings per pound, and a debt so contracted was made of greater dignity than any other.

Hobby a Good Thing.

A hobby outside of one's daily labors is really the best kind of a hobby to ride, because it not only tempts us to the complete change of mind and thought and action which is necessary to keep us in mental trim, but, by holding our interest, causes the pendulum to swing just as far in the opposite direction, and so keeps us from becoming mentally lop-sided.

More Than One Way.

"To cure warts," says a Chicago doctor, "burn them out with a red hot pin." Another method is to put in a charge of dynamite.

FEARFUL FOR HIS HEALTH

Friends of Reformed Man Remarkably Solicitous as to Amount of Beverage He Takes.

"Did you ever notice," asked the extank, making rings on the bar with his glass of milk and vichy, "how solicitous his friends always are for the health of the man on the water wagon? Now, I like to drop in with the bunch and surround a seltzer lemonade or so while they are imbibing highballs, for the sake of sociability, but it is really spoiled for me by the way they worry.

"In the old days nobody ever troubled himself about my constitution. None of the gang ever stopped me as I was about to take my sixth highball and said, 'Don't, old man; that will enlarge your spleen, and put hobnails on your liver, and give you Bright's disease.' Not at all. You could go on drinking highballs all night, with never a warning word.

"But now, after I have taken my third seltzer and aromatic spirits, the boys begin to look thoroughly disquieted. 'Don't take any more of that stuff,' they urge; 'it stimulates the heart action, and if you take half a dozen of them you are likely to drop dead right here in the bar. Just stand pat on those two you've had or take a cigar.'

"Or if I'm drinking some of these fermented milk drinks, I can't get past the third or fourth glass without the conversation halting and a look of real anxiety overspreading every face. 'Stop it, old man,' they say, and they're not joking; they're really worried. You've had three of those already, and all that acid stuff in your stomach is sure to give you indigestion. If you keep it up, your indigestion will be chronic.'

"As for the warnings I've had about ginger ale, I've laughed at 'em so often that the boys now have got a little skittish and don't talk so much about it. What I'm driving at is that all this isn't put on; they really do feel troubled on my account and display a fatherly solicitude that is actually touching. I'm almost tempted to fall off the water wagon long enough to see if any of them will warn me that whisky stimulates the heart and that beer is bad for the kidneys. Will they? You have one guess."

Capitalizing Kitchener.

The Boston Transcript tells an amusing story of one of the subjects of Lord Kitchener, consul general of Egypt, who turned the power and influence of the famous English soldier to his personal profit.

While driving one day, Lord Kitchener noticed an old man in the street whom he recognized as an acquaintance from the Sudan. The consul general ordered the driver to stop, and invited the old man to take a seat in the carriage. So the two drove together through the town to the place to which the Sundanese wanted to go.

A few days later the dark friend of Lord Kitchener was seen hovering about the British agency. At last an officer asked him what he wanted.

"I should so much like to drive out with Lord Kitchener once more," the old man replied.

"Why?" the officer asked.

"You see," the Sudanese answered, naively, "after my friends and acquaintances saw me sitting at the side of Lord Kitchener, they came to me one after the other, and from one I received five pounds, from another two pounds, from others one pound, and 40 piasters from the very poorest. They all believed that I could speak in their favor to El Lord.

"And," the old man added, "I should very much like to see that happen all over again."

One Great Obstacle.

The French are not inclined to take things too seriously. Thus, while they love and respect the venerable French Academy, they never refrain from making it the subject of a little good natured wit. Even the members themselves, as this entry in Victor Hugo's notebook will show, indulge themselves in occasional sallies against the famous institution.

On December 17, 1846, Victor Hugo, himself one of the 40 "immortal" members of the academy, write in his notebook. "Today, Thursday, in the academy, I spoke there with Dupin the elder about Balzac and his chances of election to the academy. 'Thunder!' Dupin interrupted me. 'So you really believe that, without any more to-do, Balzac will be chosen the first time he comes up for election.

"'You quote examples where that has occurred, but those prove nothing. Think of it! Balzac, at the first presentation of his name! You have thought the matter over carefully? Good! But you have forgotten one reason why it is quite impossible that Balzac should be elected to the academy: he deserves it!'"—Youth's Companion.

Mammoth Molar.

When the real estate man came into the Curbstone club headquarters he proudly displayed a tooth which he said had just been extracted by a dentist.

"Doc said it's one of the biggest he ever saw," he exclaimed.

The ancient carpenter, who is known as the club Ananias, inspected the molar with an apparent lack of real interest.

"It's nothing compared with one I had pulled once," he finally observed.

"Git out," ejaculated the real estate man, "you don't mean to tell me you had a bigger tooth than that."

"Sure I did," the carpenter declared. "When I showed it to my boss the next day he thought it was a milk stool."—Youngstown Telegram.

Cathay is an old name for China, and is said to have been introduced into Europe by Marco Polo. It is a corruption of Khital, derived from Khitan, the name of a people who conquered the Celestial empire at an early date.

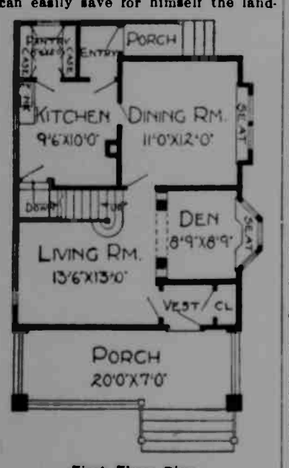
THE AMERICAN HOME

WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Investigations show that the majority of men working on salaries are paying out one-quarter or more of their entire earnings in rent. Take paper and pencil, and sit down and figure out what this rent bill amounts to in the course of a year; then see the amount it comes to in ten years. You will be almost appalled at the size of the amount. In most cases it is enough to buy outright a fine house and lot, a valuable property that can be made into a real home.



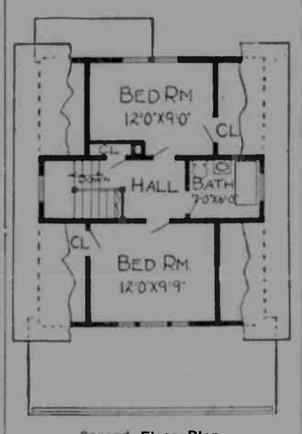
But what has the renter to show for this money at the end of ten years? Nothing but a big pile of rent receipts. Nothing that he can call really his own after paying out enough money to buy the house. He has no more right to it than the day he moved in, and may be turned out into the street any time his everlasting rent payments are not made.

And after all, the investment feature, the money end of the proposition, is really of minor importance compared with some others. Parents having the welfare of their children at heart should make any sacrifice needed to provide a real home for them to grow up in. Think of the delights of the "Old Home" you once knew. What fond memories cluster about it! What an influence for good that old place has been to you in your life! You have looked back to it with reverence, and have hurried back to it eagerly whenever there was a chance. Home is the most beautiful word in the English language. There is no place on earth like home.

What do you suppose your children are to do for a home when you have rented all your life, moving every year or so from one rented house to the next? That does not make a real home, and is not fair to the children. Love of home, and love and respect of parents, go hand in hand. They are the two most sacred things in life.

There is a sense of security, of ownership, of permanence in the possession of even a small cottage. It makes life happier and more worth while. Sometimes you hear people say "it costs more to own a home than it does to pay rent." This is not true; but even if it were true, the arguments still would be on the side of owning your own home both for your own and for your children's sake.

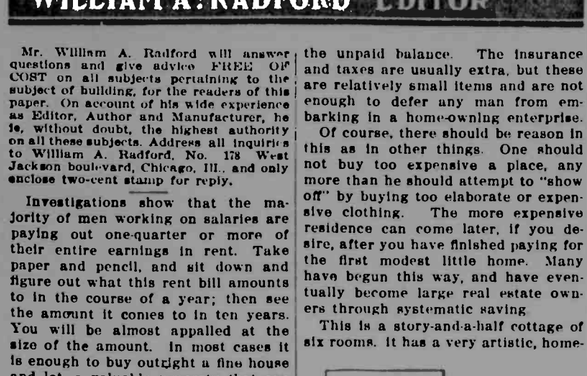
Anyone who is paying rent along can easily save for himself the landlord's profit and own his own home. We all know of many landlords who are not only making a good living but are growing wealthy by borrowing money, building houses with it and renting them to people, who, if they realized it, could with a little effort just as well build or buy the home for themselves.



First Floor Plan.

Home builders are considered the very best kind of security, and real estate men and property owners are eager to do business with them. From one hundred to five hundred dollars is all that it requires as a first payment to start you on the road to the ownership of a substantially built, home-like little place like the one illustrated herewith. After you have made the start, it is just as easy to make the monthly payment as it is to pay rent; for these payments can be arranged so that they amount to the same as rent, including both payment on the principal, and interest on the unpaid balance. The insurance and taxes are usually extra, but these are relatively small items and are not enough to defer any man from embarking in a home-owning enterprise.

Of course, there should be reason in this as in other things. One should not buy too expensive a place, any more than he should attempt to "show off" by buying too elaborate or expensive clothing. The more expensive residence can come later, if you desire, after you have finished paying for the first modest little home. Many have begun this way, and have eventually become large real estate owners through systematic saving.



This is a story-and-a-half cottage of six rooms. It has a very artistic, homelike appearance, being in good style and substantially built. It is stated that this house has been built complete for $2,300.00, using a good, substantial grade of material throughout.

Second Floor Plan.

This is a dwelling that is well suited to the requirements of a small building lot. The total width of the house is 24 feet, its length 30 feet, not including the front porch. A building of rectangular form like this is most economical to build, since there is nothing complicated about the roof, and no jogs or corners in the walls to add to the expense.

The arrangement is all that could be desired for a house of this size. From the front porch a square vestibule is entered. To the left is the living room, a good-size, home-like apartment, with an open stairway at one side ascending to the second floor. A novel feature of this design is the den, which is really a part of the living room, being connected with it by a columned opening. The wide bay window with built-in seat, makes this little room very attractive indeed. The dining room, kitchen, and pantry are well arranged for housekeeping work.

On the second floor, two good-size bedrooms are provided, each with a large closet and storage space. A bathroom is on this floor, opening from the hall. For a small house, this design is well worth considering.

Activities of Women.

Kansas has 275,000 women voters.

Cleveland housemaids have formed a union.

Pennsylvania has 10,000 feeble minded women.

Philadelphia has three women mill owners.

Michigan has 100,000 women taxpayers.

Baroness de la Roche, who won the aviation cup by covering 325 kilometers in four hours, is now considered the champion woman aviator, as the previous record was 280 kilometers made by Mme. Pallier.

Ultra Fashionable women in Paris are appearing in public wearing gowns daringly slashed, which reveals that the accustomed silk stockings are lacking and instead the decollete calf is shown with dainty paintings or gems.

Miss Rachel Hirsch of the University of Berlin is the first woman in Germany to have the coveted title of professor. She became a doctor of medicine several years ago, and now, by her researches in pathology, has earned the right to be called professor.

Knowledge of the Ancients.

From various prehistoric implements and ornaments found in Egypt, Professor Handcock, an Englishman, has concluded that the ancient peoples of that land used face paint; that the early pre-dynastic Egyptians were a neolithic people, having been skilled in the making of flints and very early learning the use of copper and gold, and that from the earliest times they knew how to navigate sailing boats and rowboats.

PREVENT SPRING FROST INJURY TO TREES

Various Good Forms of Orchard Heating Apparatus.

The disastrous freezes of 1894, 1895, and 1899 in Florida and those of 1912 and 1913 in California, and in many sections of the middle states, have caused the fruit growers to cast about for some means of protection against sudden or late cold waves.

The experience of southern California last winter would almost make it seem as though there is no such thing as frostless land; particularly so inasmuch as some of the groves damaged the worst had never been touched before. The lesson surely should be that no man can afford to leave his grove unprotected if he has the slightest indication in his past experience that his grove is liable to damage; especially when it has been so often and thoroughly demonstrated that it is not only possible but practicable to protect a grove through periods when the thermometer outside the protected area drops as low as 20 degrees for many consecutive hours.

The burning of different kinds of fuel in an orchard for the purpose of raising the temperature has been employed a great many times. The success attending the work varies under different circumstances and with different conditions. When the drop in temperature is accompanied by a heavy windstorm and rain or sleet, it is almost impossible to accomplish anything in the way of orchard heating. Fortunately, freezing weather late in spring is usually accompanied by a rather still atmosphere and free dom from rain or snow.

A great many kinds of fuel have been employed for orchard heating; wood was probably the first, and it is still used to some extent. Coal, coke, and fuel oil may have special advantages over others in some particular place. In general, it may be said that the fuel-oil method has given satisfaction more frequently than all the others combined.

The varieties and styles of heaters offered by the trade are nearly as numerous as the varieties of fuels. Usually the more complicated in construction the heater is, the less efficient it becomes in its practical work in the orchard. Even a ten-pound lard pail, holding more than a gallon of fuel oil, compares very favorably in efficiency with a great many of the patented heaters, in some cases even proving superior to them.

Heat is what is wanted and not smoke. Smoke will help at times, but cannot often be depended upon. In a deep valley the smudge value of smoke would be the greatest. If smoke can be made to hang over the orchard it serves the purpose of preventing the escape of a great deal of natural heat which radiates from the earth. It will rarely be necessary to raise the temperature more than two or three degrees in order to save the crop. Swelling buds, full blown flowers and even young fruit can stand more cold than is generally supposed. The degree of cold that will be fatal will depend upon the stage of development of bud, flower or fruit. The farther along the young fruit is in its development, the less cold it can stand. The most tender stage is not when trees are in full bloom.

The danger points for peaches are as follows:

Buds appreciably swollen, zero.

Buds showing pink, 15 above zero.

Almost open, 25 above zero.

Flowers newly opened, 26 above zero.

Petals beginning to fall, 28 above zero.

All petals off, 30 above zero.

"Shucks" (calyx tubes) beginning to shed off, 32 above zero.

The danger points for apples would correspond pretty closely to the different stages enumerated for peaches.

The danger points mentioned are conservative as in each case a little lower temperature would not kill, but heaters should be lighted as these lines are approached. This applies to oil burners. When coal is used the heaters will have to be started from 30 to 60 minutes earlier, as they are slower in warming up. The same thing is true of burning wood. When the temperature is falling rapidly, in all cases, heaters should be started decidedly earlier than when it is going down gradually.

Complete preparations for the heating should be made well in advance. The heaters may have to be filled and left in the orchard two or three weeks before they are needed. In the mean time they must be carefully covered as rains may occur and wet coal, or water in oil, will cause very inefficient fires.

Be careful of details, torches, wicks etc., should be on hand, as there is no time to look for these things when the temperature suddenly goes down. Watch your thermometers. Systematize the work. Give each man a definite line of work. This will add to efficiency. Be prepared to refill the pots during the night if necessary. This may save your crop when other wise it would be lost, even after expensive equipment has been installed. Keep in communication with the nearest weather bureau office. The bureau is always anxious to co-operate with growers who make application. They will give the weather prediction for the next 24 hours, and this can be relied upon, except in case of sudden changes.

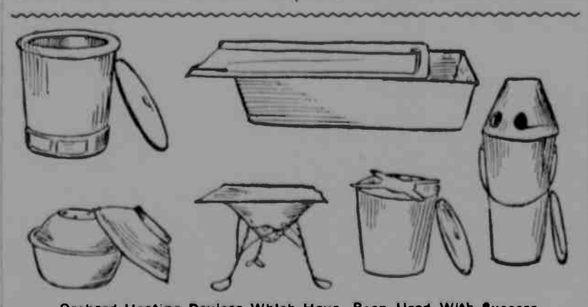
LANTERN IS HANDY ABOUT THE FARM

Will Be Found Useful in Cellar, Where There Is Danger of Fruit Freezing.



Outside of its use at night the lantern may be used in other ways about the farm.

Where a bedroom is situated at a considerable distance from the warmer rooms the lantern or a lamp placed in the room an hour or two before retiring will help to remove the chill from the room.

When there is an unusually cold night and there is danger of the fruit and vegetables freezing in the cellar, light the lantern and leave it there over night.

One must make sure that the lantern is hung up securely or so placed that it will not be upset, so there will be no danger of setting the house on fire.

A vessel of live coals may be used in the same manner, but they too must be carefully arranged to prevent setting fire to anything, and if rats are accustomed to a visit a cellar it would perhaps be safer to place no fire there whatever, as the rodents are very likely to scatter it and cause trouble.

Orchard Heating Devices Which Have Been Used With Success.

Feeding Fowls.

Fowls should have empty crops in the morning, and the crops should never be quite full until it is time to go to roost at night. For the first feed grain scattered in the litter early in the morning is preferred, the sooner the better after the birds leave the roosts.

This induces them to exercise, which is especially important on cold mornings. In the middle of the day a warm, moistened mash should be given, about what they will eat within 15 or 20 minutes, and at night, about an hour before they go to roost a liberal feed of grain should be scattered in the litter.

Ducks and Disease.

Ducks are not easy subjects to disease. Cramps occur sometimes from cold water, and apoplexy afflicts the overfat specimens. A cold and wet duckling is likely to go into spasms. If the quarters are damp at night the ducklings are liable to leg weakness.

No Rest—No Peace

There's no rest and but little peace for a person whose kidneys are out of order.

Lame in the morning, suffering cricks in the back and sharp stabs of pain with every sudden strain, the day is just one round of pain and trouble.

It would be strange if all day backache did not wear on the temper, but it is not only on that account that people who suffer with weak kidneys are nervous, cross and irritable.

Uric acid is poison to the nerves, and when the kidneys are not working well, this acid collects in the blood and works upon the nerves, causing headache, dizziness, languor, an inclination to worry over trifles, and a suspicious, short temper.

Rheumatic pain, neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, neuritis and gravel are further steps in uric acid poisoning.

Don't neglect kidney weakness. An aching back, with unnatural passages of the kidney secretions, is cause enough to suspect the kidneys. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, a remedy which has been used for years, the world over, for weak kidneys, backache, irregular kidney action and uric acid trouble. Thousands of grateful recommendations throughout the country prove their worth.

A PHYSICAL WRECK

New York City Woman Tells of Awful Suffering

Mrs. Edith Dykeman, 154 W. 84th St., New York City, N. Y., says: "Three years ago I was so run down in health that I was a nervous wreck. I was afflicted with a severe case of disordered kidneys and doctors treated me without benefit. My kidneys acted either too freely or else the action was retarded and the passages of the secretions caused me much pain. My back ached frightfully day and night and I often rolled and tossed for hours, unable to go to sleep. In the morning I felt all worn out and was hardly able to do my housework. Whenever I stooped to pick up anything from the floor, I was hardly able to straighten again. I had terrible dizzy spells and specks seemed to be floating in front of me. If I walked up or down stairs, I was completely worn out from weakness. The least excitement brought on an attack of nervousness and I got so bad that it was hard for me to be up and around. My health was all run down. Someone advised me to take Doan's Kidney Pills and the first few doses helped me. I kept right on until I was entirely cured and I am now in the best of health. I feel like a different woman and Doan's Kidney Pills alone deserve the credit."

RUSH TO SECURE THE CROSS

Christmas Ceremonies That Mark the Celebration in Russia and the Balkan States.

The Russian Christmas falls on January 7. On that day St. Petersburg celebrates the birth of Christ by blessing the River Neva. A procession of priests, followed by a huge crowd, march to the river, the ice is broken, and a cross dipped in the water. In spite of the intense cold, often many degrees below zero, piously-inclined persons rush into the river to bathe themselves in the sanctified water.

A similar Christmas ceremony is enacted in those Roumanian towns which lie on the Danube, but in this case the people are dressed to represent various biblical characters, such as Herod, Pontius Pilate, etc., and the cross is not merely dipped, but flung into the water. Then follows a terrific rush to secure the blessed emblem—a rush so fearful that often lives are lost, for it is firmly believed that its possession will bring the owner good fortune not only for the year, but for the rest of his life.

Snail's Real Pace.

"At a snail's pace" is a common expression and usually signifies very slow gait, but what do you suppose is the actual speed by a snail in traveling?

We can give it to you in accurate figures.

One foot in four minutes, or at the rate of one mile in 16 days, if traveling continuously.

These are figures given by George Zahnizer, a civil engineer of this city, taken from actual observation.

A short time since Mr. Zahnizer was standing along the Western New York & Pennsylvania railroad waiting for a train. He had nothing in particular to do and "killed a little time" by timing a snail which was creeping along the ground.

That snail traveled just exactly one foot in four minutes, Mr. Zahnizer says, and computing distance at the rate of travel shown Mr. Zahnizer has figured out that it would require 16 days for that snail to move a mile.

ANOTHER COFFEE WRECK

What's the Use When There's an Easy Way Out?

Along with the coffee habit has grown the prevalent "American Disease"—nervous prostration.

The following letter shows the way out of the trouble:

"Five years ago I was a great coffee drinker and from its use I became so nervous I could scarcely sleep at all nights. My condition grew worse and worse until finally the physician I consulted declared my troubles were due to coffee.

"But being so wedded to the beverage I did not see how I could do without it, especially at breakfast, as that meal seemed incomplete without coffee.

"On a visit, my friends deprived me of coffee to prove that it was harmful. At the end of about eight days I was less nervous, but the craving for coffee was intense, so I went back to the old habit as soon as I got home and the old sleepless nights came near making a wreck of me.

"I heard of Postum and decided to try it. I did not like it at first, because, as I afterwards discovered, it was not made properly. I found, however, that when made after directions on the package, it was delicious.

"It had a soothing effect on my nerves, and none of the bad effects that coffee had, so I bade farewell to coffee and have used only Postum since. The most wonderful account of the benefit to be derived from Postum could not exceed my own experience."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for a copy of "The Road to Wellville."

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

New Way of Finding Water.

An Arizona observer has found out how to tell by the mesquite whether water is near the surface or not. When the mesquite grows up into tree form the ground water lies within fifty feet of the surface, but if it remains a shrub prospects for finding water are not so good. Mistaken Sneer.

"It is cheaper, not dearer, to consult a specialist," said Dr. Simon Flexner, head of the Rockefeller institute, at a medical dinner.

"It is very stupid and erroneous to hold the opinions of Blank, to whom a friend said:

"'Was the doctor who examined your lungs a specialist?'

"'No. I don't think so,' Blank sneered. 'He couldn't find anything the matter with 'em.'"

Never Too Late.

Rev. Madison Peters said of New Year's resolutions the other day in Brooklyn:

"I'd advise every one with a bad habit—whether it's alcohol or profanity, gambling or morphine—to swear off hopefully.

"Some poor fellow, especially among the alcohol, think it's too late—their lives are ruined—no hope is left.

"But, as I always point out to them, a man is never too old to reform, though frequently he is too young to realize this truth."

Queer Reasons for Pride.

Some weeks ago when the Volturno burned in midocean a few of the men rushed the boats and were knocked down by the captain. What becomes of such men in after days? Do they hide in shame from their fellows, fearful that they may be recognized and their infamy proclaimed? Not necessarily. A public librarian was once visited by a man who came to him for a book on notable shipwrecks. He searched the pages eagerly, then pointed out a passage referring to a seaman who tried to take a woman's place in a lifeboat, and had been shot by the captain. "I'm that man," he declared, proud that his exploit should appear in print, and offered to show the shot wound to support his claim!

POSTAL money orders will be payable at any postoffice, instead of only at the office at which they are drawn, under a bill passed today by the Senate. It already had passed the House.

THERE is a student in the Colorado State University who feeds himself on 85 cents a week. His diet, unchangeable from day to day, consists of stale bread, peanut butter, oatmeal, raisins and apples. This young man may turn out well. He may be a useful and honored citizen. But if he ever does amount to anything it will be in spite of and not because of the stale bread and raisins of his college days.

WHEN a husband and wife each have taxable incomes, how much exemption can they claim? The Treasury department rules that when living together they can claim $4000 between them. If living separate, each can claim $3000 — Wall Street Journal.

Getting right down to figures, separation would save them an even $20, exactly $10 each. Thus we see, that among its other iniquities the income tax shakes money at the conjugal pair to induce them to shake each other.

SENATOR SPEICHER'S county-wide local option measure has passed the Senate and is now in the House. The work of Senator Speicher in so soon accomplishing this promised piece of legislation shows that he is a leader among the Senators, even though occupying the position of being a member of the minority party. He has made his pre-election promise good to his constituents even though it was predicted that the Senator's bill would "not get out of the Senate." It is now in the hands of the House and the Garrett county people will wait with more than ordinary interest to see what engineering skill the Garrett county delegation will develop in steering it safely through the committee's hands and the final outcome when it reaches a vote in that branch of the legislature.

State Capital Gleanings.

ANNAPOLIS, MD. JAN. 31.

Mr. William Miller of Accident, spent several days last week in this city. He is fighting the temperance bills before the legislature.

Senator Speicher's bill to ask the State to appropriate $50,000 to establish The Glades Hospital at Oakland, should meet the hearty approval of all Garrett countians. It is just what the county needs for injured lumber and saw mill men, miners and others who may be injured.

The Garrett county delegation is the champion bill offerers in the legislature. It is a bad day when they fail to introduce one or more bills on some subject or the other. Bills have already been offered by them for county-wide local option, two mile liquor limit bills, against leaving lumber, ties, props, etc., on the public roads, selling cigarettes to children under 21 years of age, increasing the age of girls who want to get married to 18 years, changing the the election laws, establishing a county home, legalizing the killing rabbits every day of the year, authorizing a special appropriation of $4000 for the public schools, making it unlawful for children under 18 years of age to, carry shot guns, air rifles or shoot them, increasing the powers of the justice of the peace, an attachment law, amending the charter of the Community of Mountain Lake Park, bills for the town of Oakland and many other bills too numerous and tedious to mention. The end is not yet, for there are 68 more days of the legislature and a number of bills and being prepared. The only remedy against an increase would be the breaking out of an epidemic of brain fever in the ranks of the Garrett delegation. Garrett county is making a noise.

Senator Speicher was one of the committee who counted the ballots of the contested election case of Ashburn-Harrison. They had 16 ballot boxes to count, and worked early and late. The Senator has been extensively congratulated over his local option bill for Garrett county. Several Senators have taken home a copy of it to submit to their constituents for approval. It is pronounced a model bill by the ablest men in the Senate.

Room 33 is Republican Senators headquarters, and is one of the busiest places in the Capital. It is a hive of industry and has many visitors who meet with a cordial welcome. The room is splendidly equipped for its work; has two typewriters and stenographers, and a clerk, with Mr. Rudisill in charge. There are two fine large rooms. William Miller of Accident, and Mr. Roy Hammond of Oakland, were visitors last week. All Garrett countains will be cordially welcomed at room No. 33.

Annapolis restaurants advertise pure buckwheat cakes and country sausage. People who never ate a buckwheat cake, with maple syrup, may possibly think that the kind they serve here are fine, but those who have sat down at the table of a Garrett county farm house and ate a plate of those delicious buckwheat cakes, covered with our mountain maple syrup, and accompanied by a dish of Garrett county sausage—hush, child, the very thought produces "an aching void." Well permit me to say, that there is as much difference between the two bakings as there is between calico and silk.

Some of our Garrett delegation ate their Ice cream with a fork the other evening. Don't ask who or why.

Mr. Jesse White, who has purchased a new saw mill, has moved it from Kitzmiller to Mr. J. T. Harvey's, where he expects to cut quite a tract of timber.

Among those who were calling at the home of Mr. Gilson's were, Miss Iva Friend, the Bethlehem school marm, and Misses Amy, Stella and Ina Paugh. They report that they were delightfully entertained.

The boys of this neighborhood had quite a fox chase one day last week, boasting of the capture of two foxes.

Mrs. Jane Lipscomb who has been on the sick list we are glad to say is improving at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Bushrod Hardesty have moved to their residence in Possum Hollow.

We are sorry to note the serious accident which befell Mr. Lawrence Murphy. While at work in the coal mine at Schell, W. Va., a large peice of coal fell on him resulting in the breaking of both his limbs and his wrist.

The Bethlehem school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Miss Ina Friend.

Rev. Johnson preached us a very interesting sermon Sunday at Kurtz Chapel.

BOND.

Miss Emma Geist, of Bellwood, Pa., is staying with her sister, Mrs. Dan Hamilton.

Miss Bertha Warnick, of New Germany, is now cooking at the boarding house.

SENATOR SPEICHER'S LOCAL OPTION MEASURE IN FULL

Which Passed The Senate Tuesday---Now In the House of Delegates

A BILL

Entitled An Act to enable the registered qualified voters of Garrett county to determine by ballot whether spirituous or fermented liquors shall not be sold in said County, or shall be sold only as hereinafter described, and to repeal all Acts or parts of Acts inconsistent with this Act, or any part of this Act.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, That all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, or any part of this Act, relating to the sale or prohibiting the sale of spirituous, fermented or malt liquors or alcoholic bitters shall not be enforced in said County on and after the first day of May, Nineteen Hundred and Fifteen, and that all laws or parts of laws inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, shall be repealed after said last mentioned date; provided, however, that this Act shall not be construed to repeal said Section of said Code, prior to the first day of May, Nineteen Hundred and Fifteen, or to affect any offense already committed or which may be committed before this Act shall take effect.

Sec. 2. And be it enacted, That the question whether or not any person or persons, house, company, association or body corporate as hereinafter described, may be licensed in Garrett County of this State, by whom or in which spirituous, fermented or malt liquors or intoxicating drinks may be sold, or whether or not license to sell the same in said County shall be issued, shall be submitted to the registered qualified voters of said County on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, Nineteen Hundred and Fourteen, and on the Tuesday after the first Monday cause public notice to be given of the submission of said question by publication of said notice in two newspapers of said County and also by printed handbills containing said notice to be posted at the most public places within each election district of said County, and the County Commissioners of said County shall pay for the publishing of said notice and for printing said handbills in the same manner, and out of the fund that other expenses of said election are paid; but if for any reason said notice shall not be given, or not given in the manner herein prescribed, such failure shall not affect the validy of this Act, or operate to prevent its taking effect.

Sec. 3. And be it enacted, That the ballots cast at said election to be counted as deciding for or against the sale of spirituous, fermented, or malt liquors or intoxicating drinks in said County, shall have printed on the official ballots cast or used at said election, the words "For License," or "Against License," in the manner prescribed by Section 56 of Article 33 of the Code of Public General Laws of 1904 and the ballots cast "For License" and the ballots cast "Against License" shall be carefully counted by the judges of said election in the respective election districts of said County, and the number of ballots "For License" and the number of ballots "Against License" shall be certified by them; and the return judges of said election at their meeting after said election shall cast up the whole vote "For License" and "Against License" in said District and shall make a separate written return of said whole vote to the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County, and said Clerk shall record said returns among the records of his office and shall prepare a certificate proclaiming the result of such election in said County and cause said certificate to be published in two newspapers of said County within fifteen days after said returns have been received by him.

Sec. 4. And be it enacted, That if it shall appear by the returns of said Judges and certificate of said Clerk that a majority of said votes have been cast, "Against License" it shall not be lawful for any person or any house, company or association, or body corporate or any manufacturer of inoxicating liquors of any kind to barter or sell, directly or indirectly, or to solicit or to receive orders for the purchase of, at any place within the limits of Garrett County, or to give away at his or its place of business, within the limits of said County, any spirituous, fermented or malt liquors or alcoholic bitters, or intoxicating drinks of any kind, including whisky, rum, wine, ale, beer and all other fermented, malt and distilled liquors, and every mixture of liquors which shall contain more than two per cent. by weight of alcohol and every mixture of liquors which shall contain less than two per cent. of alcohol, if the same shall be intoxicating, or any article used or sold as a beverage in the composition of which whisky, brandy, high wines or alcohol or any spirituous or fermented liquors shall be an ingredient, nor shall any license be granted for the sale of the same herein.

Sec. 5. And be it enacted, That no person, house, company, manufacturer, association or body corporate, shall deposit, keep or have in his posession, any spirituous or fermented liquors or alcoholic bitters, or intoxicating drinks of any kind, or hard cider, tonic beer, lager beer, schnapps, or gin, or any article used or sold as a beverage, in the composition or compounding of which whisky, brandy, high wines or alcohol or any spirituous or fermented liquors shall be an ingredient, with intent to barter or sell or give away the same in violation of the provisions of the preceding sections, or with intent that the same shall be bartered or sold or given away in violation thereof within the limits of said County.

Sec. 6. And be it enacted, That if any person, house, company, manufacturer, association or body corporate, shall violate any of the provisions of the preceding sections within the limts of Garrett County, he or it shall upon conviction thereof for the first offense forfeit and pay a fine of not less than one hundred dollars, or not more than five hundred dollars, and cost of prosecution, and failing to pay such fine and cost forwith shall be sentenced to be confined in the Maryland House of Correction for a term of not less than six months or more than twelve months, and upon conviction thereof for the second, and in November every fourth year hereafter, at the election to be held therein, upon the filing with the Election Supervisors of said County at least sixty days before said election of a petition containing the signatures of at least twenty-five per cent. of the registered qualified voters of said County, requesting such submission. And the Election Supervisors of said County shall at least three weeks previous to day of said election each subsequent offense, forfeit and pay a fine of not less than $200.00 nor more than $800.00 and cost of prosecution and to be confined in the Maryland House of Correction for not less than six months nor more than twelve months and failing to pay such fine and cost forthwith, shall be sentenced to be confined in the Maryland House of Correction for a term of not less than twelve months nor more than two years.

Sec. 7. And be it enacted, That nothing in the preceding sections shall be construed to prevent the compounding or sale of any such liquors by a regular Pharmacist or Druggist who may or shall have obtained a license thereof under the law of this State, upon the written bona fide prescription of a regular practicing physician of said County whose name shall be signed thereto, and all such prescriptions shall be filed by such Druggist or Pharmacist and kept by him and shall also keep a book for the special purpose and enter therein the date of every sale of intoxicating liquors made by him, the person to whom sold, the kind, quantity and price thereof, and the purpose for which it was sold; and any failure to comply with the provisions of this Section, or to produce the book before any court or justice, when requested so to do, shall render such Druggist or Pharmacist so failing liable to the same penalties as if he had sold intoxicating liquors without a license, no perscription shall serve for more than one purchase, and no physician shall make or sign any such prescription unless the person for whom it shall be made is actually sick, or such liquor is absolutely required as a medicine; any physician who shall make or sign any prescription for such liquor except as aforesaid shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than fifty dollars, nor more than three hundred dollars and cost of prosecution, and be committed to the County jail of said County until such fine and cost of prosecution are paid; nor shall anything in the sections be construed to prohibit a sale by a pharmacist or a druggist of such liquors to be used by or for a sick person, in case of extreme illness when delay may be dangerous to the patient, nor to prevent the sale by a pharmacist or druggist for wine to be used for sacramental purposes solely.

Sec. 8. And be it enacted, That if any druggist or pharmacist shall violate any of the preceding sections he shall be liable to the same penalties which are set forth in Section 6.

Sec. 9. And be it enacted, That one-half of all such fines shall be paid to the Board of County Commissioners, of the County for the use of said County.

Sec. 10. All prosecutions for violations of any of the provisions of this Act, shall be upon presentment and indictment; but any Justice of the Peace of the County shall have the same authority to receive information of violations thereof and to take recognizances and bail or to commit, as is now exercised by Justices of the Peace of the County, under the Public General Laws of this State.

Sec. 11. And be it enacted, That in any indictment for violation of any of the provisions of this Act, it shall not be necessary to specify the particular kind of liquor which any person, house, company, manufacturer, association or body corporate, bartered, sold or gave away, or solicited or received orders for the purchase of, or kept deposited, or had with intent to barter, sell or give away, or that the same had been bartered, sold or given away in violation of said provisions; but it shall be sufficient if the indictment set forth that the traverser bartered, sold or gave away, or solicited or received orders for the purchase of, or kept deposited, or had with intent to barter, sell or give away spirituous, fermented or malt liquors or intoxicating drinks, or with intent that the same be bartered, sold or given away in violation of said provisions.

Sec. 12. And be it enacted, That if it shall appear by the returns of said Judges and the certificate of said Clerk, that a majority of such votes have been cast "For License," then and in that event the following sections shall be added, and no person in Garrett County shall obtain a license for the sale or barter of spirituous, malt or fermented liquors in any quantities whatever except such as shall be qualified as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 13. And be it enacted, That any person in Garrett County who may keep a house for the reception of guests, or of permanent or of transient boarders, containing at least five chambers more than are needed for his family purposes, and which said five or more chambers are used for the reception of guests or permanent or transient boarders, containing therein for use at all times, at least six good beds, with sufficient covering therefor, shall be deemed and considered to be a hotel keeper within the meaning of this Act.

Sec. 14. And be it enacted, That no license shall be granted to any person, house, company, manufacturer, association or body corporate, to sell spirituous, fermented or malt liquors or alcoholic bitters or intoxicating drinks of any kind, outside of the corporate limits of the incorporated towns in said County.

Sec. 15. And be it enacted, That any person desiring to obtain a license under this Act to sell spirituous, malt or fermented liquors in Garrett County, shall file a petition with the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Garrett County on the first day of May, in which he shall state, first, the name and residence of the applicant and how long he has resided there; second, the particular place for which a license is desired, designating the same by street and number, if practicable, and if not, by such other apt description as definitely locates it; third, the place of birth of such applicant, and if a naturalized citizen, when and where naturalized; fourth, the name of the owner of the premises upon which the business is to be carried on; fifth, that the applicant is not, or if the application is from a firm, that none of the applicants are in any manner directly or indirectly interested in the profits of the business conducted in any other place in said County where any intoxicating liquors are sold or kept for sale; sixth, that no person except the applicant is in any manner directly or indirectly interested in the business petitioned to be licensed, and that no other person shall be pecuniarly interested therein during the continuance of the license; seventh, that the applicants have not nor have any of them had a license for the sale of intoxicating liquors in this State revoked nor has been convicted of any crime within one year preceding the filing of said petition; and, provided, the said applicant shall file with the petition, a written certificate signed by ten male free holders, resident citizens within the corporate limits of the town wherein the applicant desires to sell, setting forth their belief that the applicant for such license will keep an orderly house and duly observe all the provisions of this Act; and each signing said certificate shall make affidavit before said Clerk or before a Justice of the Peace of said County, that he is over thirty years of age; that he is the owner of real estate in the town wherein he resides, of the assessed value of at least three thousand dollars above encumberances and that he has not during the current year signed a certificate for any other person applying for license to sell spirituous, fermented or malt liquors within said County, and that he, himself, has not applied for a license to sell spirituous, fermented or malt liquors in said County' and said applicant shall satisfy the said Clerk by his own oath and by the oath of two respectable and disinterested witnesses of their belief therein that he has bona fide and without intending to evade the spirit and meaning of this Act, duly provided and will maintain and keep for use at least five chambers more than are needed for private or the family purposes of said hotel keeper to be used for the reception of guests or permanent or transient boarders, and at least six beds with sufficient covering, and all of said chambers and beds to be and to remain on said premises, on which spirituous or fermented liquors are by this Act licensed to be sold; and each and every applicant shall file in the office of the said Clerk a bond duly executed to the State of Maryland with at least three sureties, to be approved by said Clerk in the penal sum of two thousand dollars, conditioned for the faithful observance of the provisions of this Act, and the payment of any and all fines, penalties and damages which may be imposed or recovered under this Act; provided, that each surety on said bond shall make affidavit before said Clerk or before a Justice of the Peace of said County, that said surety is the owner in fee simple or unencumbered real estate in Garrett County of the assessed value of at least two thousand dollars, and that said surety has not within the current year executed a bond for any other applicant to sell spirituous or fermented liquors in Garrett County; said bond shall be responsible to all such persons hereinafter described as may be injured by the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors sold in violation of the provisions of this Act. No bond of any applicant shall be approved by said Clerk, if it shall appear to him that either of the sureties thereon or that any applicant has become surety upon the bond of any other applicant. Said application shall be verified by the affidavit of the applicant made before the Clerk of the Court to whom the application is made, and if any false statement is made in any part of said application the applicant, or applicants shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and upon indictment and conviction shall be punished accordingly and any license issued upon such application shall be suppressed.

Sec. 16. And be it enacted, That no license to sell spirituous or fermented liquors in Garrett County shall be granted to any hotel keeper who shall have complied with the provisions of this Act, until such applicant in addition to the sum or sums now required or which here after may be required to be paid by the general license law of this State, shall also pay to said Clerk the sum of three hundred dollars, and the said amounts received by said Clerk for licenses as aforesaid, shall be by him paid over to the County Commissioners of said County for the use of said County.

Sec. 17. And be it enacted, That all sums received by said Clerk for licenses issued under this Act shall be accounted for and paid over by said Clerk to the County Commissioners of Garrett County within thirty days after the receipt of the same, and the official bond of said Clerk shall be liable for all said sums received for licenses issued under this Act, and said Clerk shall be entitled to charge and receive the sum of two dollars and fifty cents for each license issued by him under the provisions of this Act, to be paid by the applicant therefor.

Sec. 18. Regulates the transfer of license.

Sec. 19 and 20. Pertain to the manner in which pharmacists may sell under physician's prescriptions.

Sec. 21 provides penalties for the violation of selling without first obtaining license.

Sec. 22 and 23. Prohibit allowing minors to enter the barroom where liquors are sold under a penalty of from $100 to $500 fine.

Sec. 24 and 25. Prohibit selling to intoxicated persons.

Sec. 26. And be it enacted, That any vendor of spirituous or fermented liquors sold in Garrett County, shall be liable to pay damages to any husband, wife, parents, child, employer or other person, injured by reason of any person being intoxicated by liquor sold by said vendor in violation of any of the provisions of this Act, to be recovered in the same manner as debts for like amounts are now recovered by law.

Sec. 27. And be it enacted, That nothing in the preceding Section shall be construed to authorize any sale or barter or the giving away of any spirituous or fermented liquor on the Sabbath Day, commonly called "Sunday," or on the day of any election held in said County under the constitution and laws of the State or of the United States.

Sec. 28. And be it enacted, That in any prosecution under this Act it shall be only necessary to state that the traverser did sell or give away spirituous fermented, or malt liquor without specifying the particular kind of liquor given away.

Sec. 29. And be it enacted, That any person who shall fraudulently procure a license as a hotel keeper, without having complied in good faith with the provisions of this Act, defining hotel keepers, shall, upon indictment and conviction thereof, be fined not less than two hundred dollars, nor more than five hundred dollars; the license granted shall be supressed by the Court, and it shall be unlawful for the Clerk to issue any other license for the sale of spirituous or fermented liquors to such persons.

Sec 31. And be it enacted, That all prosecution for violation of any of the provisians of this Act shall be upon presentment and indictment, and it shall be the duty of any Justice of the Peace of Garrett County upon information received and confirmed by the oath of a creditable witness to have any person arrested and committed to the County jail for a violation of the provisions of this Act, unless such persons shall give sufficient bail or recognizance with sureties to appear before the Circuit Court for Garrett County at the next succeeding term thereof to answer the charge.

Sec. 32. And be it enacted, that no license shall be granted under the provisions of this Act to any person other than a bona fide citizen of Garrett County, and who shall have been such for at least one year prior to the date of his application, and no license shall be granted to any applicant to sell spirituous or fermented liquors anywhere in Garrett County except within the corporate limits of the incorporated towns in said County.

Sec. 33. And be it enacted, That nothing in this Act shall give permission for the granting of a license by any authority for the sale or barted in any way of spirituous, fermented or malt liquors, or intoxicating drinks of any kind, or cider, or tonic beer, lager beer, schnapps or gin, or any article used or sold as a beverage in the composition of which whiskey, brandy, high wines or alcohol or any spirituous or fermented liquors shall be an ingredient, on the grounds of the Mountain Lake Park Association or within one mile thereof, contrary to the provisions of Section 6 of the Act of 1882, entitled "An Act to grant additional powers to Mountain Lake Park Association of Garrett County" a corporation incorporated under the General Laws of Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, Irene Hayes, a vinculo matrimonii, from the defendant Elza L. Hayes.

The Bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the 25th day of December, 1901, and resided together as man and wife until October, 1907.

That the defendant without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than six years, and is deliberate and final.

That one son was born as a result of said marriage, to wit: Emmerson Hayes, on the 14th day of October, 1902.

That the defendant has failed, neglected and refused to contribute any thing toward the support of the plaintiff ever since said separation.

The Bill further states that the defendant has been guilty of the crime of adultery since said marriage.

And further states that the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, and avers that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 13th day of January 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 13th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of the Bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 2nd day of March next, to show cause, if any he has why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

FOR POOR FARM IN GARRETT.

Plan For Its Establishment To Be Submitted To Voters.

If a bill introduced last Friday by Delegate Savage of Garrett is enacted, voters of this county will have the opportunity to determine next November whether the County Commissioners shall establish a new county home for delinquents and destitute persons.

The bill provides for the purchase by the county of a farm of from 100 to 300 acres and the erection of necessary buildings, the furnishing of these buildings and the purchase of all stock and equipment needed on a farm. The money is to be appropriated from the annual county levy to the maximum amount of $10,000.

It is provided that persons sentenced to the county jail must work on the farm for a part of their time of commitment.

To work with the County Commissioners in establishing the farm the following special committee is named:

Isaac W. Abernathy, of Wilson, W. Va.; J. W. McCullough and F. G. Fox, of Friendsville, Scott T. Jones, W. H. Smouse and David Roth, of Oakland; H. M. Speicher, of Accident; C. A. Bender, of Grantsville, and Jacob Stump, of Bloomington.

Rev. McCamic, of Deer Park, was in the city Tuesday just recovering from from an accident by which he was seriously injured while alighting from a train at Bond Station some days ago. But with his injuries he has continued his labors and will close a protracted meeting which has been in progress at Dry Run for some weeks and at which fifteen conversions took place. On Sunday Rev. McCamic will preach at Swanton in the morning; at Wilson in the afternoon at three o'clock and at Deer Park in the evening at which place he will open a revival.

Student Otto A. Bremer, of the Hamma Theological Seminary, Springfield, Ohio, delivered two excellent sermons to the Oakland congregation of Lutherans, also preaching Sunday afternoon to the Deer Park congregation of the same denomination. Mr. Bremer left Oakland Monday evening for his school. He expressed himself very enthusiastically upon conditions as he found them and it is more than probable that he will receive a call from the churches where he preached Sunday to become their regular pastor, taking up the work on or about May 1st, at which time he will graduate from the Seminary where he is now a student.

Capt. R. R. Sanner and his son, Mr. Norman R. Sanner, of Oakland, went to Cumberland last Thursday afternoon where they met Capt. Sanner's youngest son, Private Lloyd F. Sanner, a member of the 10th Infantry, U. S. A., who with his command was on his way to New York where a vessel was taken on Friday for the Canal Zone in which portion of the world the 10th Infantry will be stationed. Private Sanner has been in the service for about four years and this being his second enlistment he has some six years yet to serve. The command traveled in royal style, compared with the days of the Spanish-American war, being quartered in Pullman cars of the best and latest make with buffet attachments.

Former State Senator W. McCulloh Brown, who is spending the winter at his residence in Baltimore, was in Oakland Tuesday when he attended a meeting of the Republican County Committee. Recently Mr. Brown was elected president ot the Maryland Conservation Association, an organization which is being fostered in all parts of the country for the purpose of developing the natural resources without the wastefulness of product or waste of profit, and, in the language of the by-laws of the organization, "that the general welfare should be advanced by wise co-operation in exploiting the products of our soil, our farms, our mines, our quarries, our forests and our waters." In the State organization such men as Cardinal Gibbons, Robert Garrett, Former Governor Warfield and a large number of equally prominent people are officers. Garrett county feels proud of Senator Brown's election as president of the Association and all her citizens should afford him every consideration in forwarding the movement.

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

Mr P. T. Garthright, who was paralyzed on the 13th of June, 1913, is still confined to his home, at Mountain Lake Park, and is not able to dress or undress himself, makes an earnest appeal to all who know themselves indebted to him in any way, by book account, note or judgment, to make an earnest effort to help him in this time of his great need. Mr. Garthright has no income whatever and must depend upon the collection of amounts due him to provide his daily bread and meet his personal obligations. If you cannot pay the full amount due me, please send me as much as you can. I can use any kind of farm produce. I will greatly appreciate a prompt response to this appeal. I am only pleading for a portion of my own, in all kindness, and believe me, as ever, a friend to the needy, and rejoicing in affliction, trusting and hoping in God for a better home than earth can give, through the merits only of Jesus.

I cordially invite every one to call and see me at my home.

Most sincerelly,
P. T. GARTHRIGHT.

A Correction.

Regarding the article in last week's paper in reference to the piece of beech tree, with the initials, "C. J. M. 1865," carved upon it, the writer wishes to state that the tree was discovered upon the farm of Eli Miller near Springs, Pa., instead of on the J. S. Miller farm near Bittinger, Md. Thanks are due to John D. Miller of Springs, who felled the tree, for sending in the correction, which is gladly given.—Grantaville Correspondent Meyersdale Republican.

OPPOSED TO SIDING ON A 17-MILE GRADE

Its Construction Will Mean Much For Garrett County Farmers.

A siding on a 17-mile grade does not meet with the views of the engineers of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and the application for such an addition to its line near Oakland was objected to before the Public Service Commission Thursday, at their office in Baltimore.

The application was made by C. F. Hammond, of Oakland, and was for the purpose of bettering shipping conditions for several establishments in the vicinity.

It was pointed out by the company that a siding on such a long grade would be dangerous, as well as inconvenient, and it is asked that the application be turned down. As there were a number of witnesses to be examined who would not arrive until about 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon the hearing was adjourned until Friday 2 p. m. at which time Senator Speicher, Delegates Harvey and Savage, and Mr. L. A. Rudisill went over from Annapolis and testified in favor of Mr. Hammond's switch, stating that the development of a large lime business at Stricker, the point where the quarry is located, would be of great advantage to the farmers of the county.

Mr. Hammond proposes to establish lime warehouses at Deer Park, Mountain Lake Park and Oakland, in which he will store large quantities of lime ready at anytime for delivery should he be granted the privilege he seeks.

Resolutions.

Grantsville Camp No. 41, Woodmen of the World, at a recent session adopted the following resolutions in memory of two of their deceased members, Asa M. Durst and John E. Huff:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our beloved brotners, Asa M. Durst and John E. Huff, and

WHEREAS, We, the members of Grantsville Camp No. 41, of the Woodmen of the World, recognizing and bowing to the inscrutiable will of him who creates and removes at pleasure and according to Divine plan, feeling deeply the loss of our brothers but recognizing that the loss to our Camp is the gain of the Camp Celestial and wishing to place a permenent memorial upon the minutes of our camp, therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved and mourning ones who are left behind, trusting that they may find their comfort in the all sustaining hand of the Omnipotent One and in the recollection of the goodly deeds and the kindly acts of the departed ones whom they loved so well, and be it further

Resolved, That in loving remembrence of our departed brothers we drape our Charter and Camp room in mourning for a period of 30 days and that a copy of this resolution be spread upon the minutes of our Camp, a copy mailed to the families of the deceased and further that the same be priuted in our local papers.

Held Up and Assaulted.

Jacob Strickland, a farmer residing about two miles from Lonaconing, this county, on Savage mountain was held up Saturday evening just after dark while on his way home. His assailant jumped out from behind a pile of mining props near Kingsland mine of the Maryland Coal Company and struck him over the eye with a heavy club. The blow felled Mr. Strickland to the ground, and his assailant thinking he was dead took to his heels. When Mr. Strickland regained consciousness, he managed to return to Lonaconing, where his injuries were dressed. He has no idea who assaulted him, but thinks that it was some one who knew him, because he had on his person a large sum of money, which was untouched. Robbery was the apparent motive of the holdup, and was probably done by some amateur who fled when he thought his victim was dead.

WHOLE FAMILY HELPED.

Father, Mother and Children Benefited by Bear's Emulsion.

There are not many families that do not have a member that does not need a tonic, nerve builder, tissue constructor, or improvement in the appetite. Mr. Gaynor bought a bottle of Bear's Emulsion for his cough and after finding it did him so much good it was tried on the rest of the family and was found to be worth many times the cost of the preparation to them.

Price one dollar a bottle or six bottles for five dollars.

"I first purchased a bottle of Bear's Emulsion in 1908; at that time I was bothered with a severe cough. But after taking one bottle the cough left me and I felt stronger in every way; I had a better appetite, better digestion and bowels regular.

"Ever since that time I have used it on my wife and baby every time they have a cough I think it is the best preparation I ever used for coughs and colds.

Mountain Chapel in Uss.

The chapel building which was taken from the mountains of Garrett county last year by the congregation of the Protestant Episcopal Chapel of the Nativity, Govans, Baltimore county, has been finished and the first service was held in it Saturday morning by the rector, the Rev. C. A. Hensel.

Since Christmas the congregation has been worshipping in the parish house, which will now be repaired and doubled in capacity. When this is finished the chapel and parish house will be valued at $10,000.

THE GROUNDHOG DID.

Old Mr. Woodchuck Saw His Shadow, Provided He Was Out Monday.

Groundhog Day occurred Monday, and provided Mr. Woodchuck got awake on schedule time he had no difficulty in beholding his shadow, for the sun beat many of the human family up and continued shining the entire day, setting in a halo of glory at the hour provided by nature.

Now we shall see if the wiseacres who have a sign for everything, will be able to explain away the lack of six more weeks of winter if it should not come, but if it does arrive they will give Mr. G. Hog the credit no doubt, forgetting that nature never fails to assert itself.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

For State University.

Senator Maloy's bill to create a State university comprising the existing colleges was introduced. The bill puts under the supervision of a board of regents the following: Western Maryland College, Washington College, St. John's College, Blue Ridge College, University of Maryland, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Maryland Medical College and the Maryland Agricultural College.

The bill does not consolidate the schools, but provides for the raising of their standards and curricula to a uniform rank, with the ultimate placing of a lump appropriation in the hands of the regents to distribute.

The regent board is to be composed of the Governor, State Comptroller, State Superintendent of Education, six representatives from each congressional district of Maryland, to be appointed by the Governor and the following representative from each of the colleges:

Washington College—James Alfred Pearce and James W. Cain.

St. John's College—Robert Moss and Thomas Fell.

University of Maryland—Randolph Winslow and Philemon Tuck.

Maryland Agricultural College—H. J. Patterson and Robert Crain.

Western Maryland College—Thomas H. Lewis and Joshua W. Miles.

College of Physicians and Surgeons—William F. Lockwood and John W. Chambers.

Maryland Medical College—Joseph H. Branham and Frederick Caruthers.

Blue Ridge College—E. C. Bixler and J. Walter Engler.

An increase of $35,000 for annual maintenance of Maryland's three state normal schools is provided in another bill Senator Maloy offered. The Baltimore county school is to receive $50,000 instead of $20,000, the Frostburg school $10,000 and the Prince George School, $7,000.

Auto For the Governor.

A bill introduced in the House by Speaker Trippe carries an appropriation of $8,000 with which to purchase and operate an automobile for use of the Governor of the State. Of this sum $3,000 is for the purchase of the machine and its operation during the current year. For its operation next year $3,000 is provided. In the proposed operating expenses is included the hire of a chauffeur. The best sentiment in the legislature, as well as the State, is favorable to the bill on the theory that government is aided by close and frequent contact between the chief executive of the State and its people. As only a limited number of the people of the State can come in contact with the governor, it is deemed highly desirable and as conducive to good government that the governor shall meet the people. It is recognized that an automobile will be the best means of bringing the governor and the people into closer relations.

Exempts Cecil County.

By the provisions of a bill introduced in the House by Mr. Leffler, Cecil county is exempted from the provisions of the law which requires all new comers into the State to file with clerks of courts declarations of their intention to remain in the State, these declarations to be filed 12 months in advance of registration. The law was passed about 12 years ago and has proved to be a hardship. Several bills have been introduced during the present session to give magistrates power to accept declarations of citizens that they intend to remain citizens of the State. The object of these bills is to save new comers the time and expense involved in visits to county seats and there file their intentions.

State Grain Inspector.

A State grain inspector to survey grain shipped by farmers to Baltimore city, and the bonding of commission merchants who handle food products is strongly advocated by Senator W. O. Collier, of Talbot. The senator is preparing bills providing for these reforms, which, he says, will go far toward advancing the interests of the farmers of the State.

Board Of Probation Officers.

Mr. Fink submitted by request a bill in the House to create a board of five probation officers, three men and two women, to be appointed by the Supreme Bench and to work in cooperation with the Juvenile Court. Each officer will receive $1,500 per annum, and will look after delinquent and indigent children.

Avaunt, Paper Balloons!

Senator Benson would prohibit the sending up of paper balloons. He introduced a bill which punishes not only those who operate them, but the sellers as well. Fifty dollars is the minimum fine imposed and $200 the maximum. The object is to put a stop to the fires caused by these balloons.

Family Burying Grounds.

A bill introduced by Senator Archer permits of the disposal of family burying grounds in which there have been no interments for 25 years, and to remove the bodies therefrom, provided all the persons interested file a bill in the Circuit Court asking authority to do so.

Holidays For Telegraphers.

Mr. Griebel, of Baltimore, introduced in the House the bill which Mr. Ogden has introduced in the Senate providing holidays for telegraphers in the service of railroad corporations. Mr. Griebel also introduced a bill requiring that dispensaries receiving State appropriations and all hospitals having dispensaries connected with them and which receive State appropriations, shall keep said dispensaries open and provide dispensary treatment each week night between the hours of 7 and 9 o'clock.

D. E. Hurlock, clerk to the Board of Commissioners of Queen Anne's county, has started an automobile line between Church Hill and Centerville, and makes daily trips between the places.

The Rev. Victor Miller, for many years secretary of the Maryland Lutheran Synod, has resigned as pastor of the Lutheran Church at Leitersburg, where he served 33 years. His successor has not been appointed.

A company has been formed with a capital stock of $10,000 for the purpose of operating an automobile line between Easton, in Talbot county, and Chestertown, in Kent county, to carry passengers and freight.

Edward W. Taylor, an Elkton liveryman, mourns the loss of a valuable driving horse and new buggy that he hired to a United States Army private and who has not reappeared with his team.

Lacey Griffith, 20 years old, son of George Griffith, of American Corners, was severaly injured and his horse killed in a collision. The accident happened at the electric light plant, where Griffith met two teams racing. One of them struck his buggy, wrecking it and throwing him about 20 feet.

Mrs. Susannah Oyens McChesney, wife of William R. McChesney, died at her home, at Chillum, Prince George's county, aged 76 years. She had been ill less than a week. Besides her husband, she is survived by five children —Mrs. Nola Brown, of Leesburg, Va.; Mrs. Mary Alice Brown, of Washington, and John R., Elmer E. and James Pobert McChesney.

The annual mask ball of the officers at the Naval Academy was held Friday night. Last year several officers and their partners were ignominously "pinched" by over-zealous Annapolis "cops" for violation of the city ordinances against appearing on the streets in masks, but this year an order was issued by the Mayor lifting the ban on disguises for the night.

Howard Robinson, of Riverton, is wanted in Federalsburg on the charge of jumping a board bill, beating a Federalsburg liveryman out of a sum of money and stealing Brooks Milligan's motorcycle, with which to make his escape.

The Talbot county commissioners are arranging for construction of concrete bridges over Tuckahoo River, Trippe's Creek and Peachblossom Creek and the building of shell roads in Trappe district and Bay Hundred district.

SAYS U. S. SHOULD HAVE MONOPOLY

Government Ownership of Telegraph and Telephone Urged.

BURLESON SUBMITS REPORT.

Recommendations Of the Committee Summed Up in Three Suggestions, Which Would Declare For a Governmental Monopoly.

Washington. — Postmaster General Burleson submitted to the Senate the recommendations of the departmental committee appointed by him to investigate the practicability of government ownership of telephone and telegraph lines.

The report declared that "the only way to afford to the people the complete and modern postal facilities that the Constitution makes it the duty of the government to provide" is by carrying out these suggestions:

"First—That Congress declare a government monopoly over all telegraph, telephone and radio communication and such other means for the transmission of intelligence as may hereafter develop.

"Second—That Congress acquire by purchase at appraised value the commercial telephone network except the farmer lines.

"Third—That Congress authorize the Postmaster General to issue, in his discretion and under such regulations as he may prescribe revocable licenses for the operation by private individuals, associations, companies and corporations of the telegraph service and such parts of the telephone service as may not be acquired by the government."

The recommendations are signed by Daniel C. Roper, first assistant postmaster general; Merritt O. Chance, chief clerk, Postoffice Department, and John C. Koons, superintendent division of salaries and allowances, composing the committee. They were accompanied by statistical information collected after one of the most exhaustive investigations undertaken by the Postoffice Department.

Situation in Europe.

The report states that the United States is "alone of the leading nations which has left to private enterprise the ownership and operation of the telegraph and telephone facilities," and that practically all of the economists who have treated the subject are agreed that telegraph and telephone facilities should be controlled by the government.

FORTUNE FOR HORSES.

Austrian Says One Animal Is Worth Ten Men—Leaves $60,000.

Vienna.—"One horse is worth 10 men," according to the will of a deceased land owner named Bizony, who bequeathed his entire fortune of $60,000 to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, on condition that it builds an asylum for decrepit horses. Dizony's next of kin will contest the will Friday. Only King Ludwig III of Bavaria officially disapproved of aristocratic women of his court devoting their attention and fortunes to homes for sick cats, dogs and horses.

MEXICANS KILLED AMERICANS.

Two Men May Have Been Executed Under Notorious Fugitive Law.

San Diego, Cal.—Two Americans—P. W. Harwood and Mortimer Miller—have been slain in the mountains south of Tia Juana, Mexico, by Mexican Federal soldiers under the notorious "fugitive law." The men were taken from Tia Juana on Wednesday by a squad of Federals and have not been seen since. Mexican officials assert they are en route to Ensenada for trial on a charge of smuggling, but the fact that their guards carried no supplies for a long march raised grave doubts in the minds of officials here.

LESSON FROM THAW CASE.

New York Bar Association Would Amend Criminal Insane Law.

New York.—Possible efforts to prevent future repetitions of the legal tangle resulting from Harry K. Thaw's escape from Matteawan were seen in the report submitted to the New York State Bar Association at its closing session here by the committee on the commitment and discharge of criminal insane. The feature of the report was the recommendation for the repeal of the statute providing that insane persons cannot commit crime.

FEAR CAUSED HYDROPHOBIA.

Woman Was Never Bitten Or Scratched By Dog.

Philadelphia. — Although she declares that she was never bitten or even scratched by a dog or any other animal, Ellen Brown, 20 years old, is in a critical condition from what physicians have diagnosed as a case of hydrophobia. From early childhood the young woman has had a great fear of dogs. Recently her throat became terribly parched, but the sight of water threw her into convulsions. Her condition rapidly became worse and today she was said to be dying.

TURTLE SERUM BARRED.

License To Import Alleged Cure Not Granted By Government.

Washington.—An official denial was forthcoming from the Public Health Service of a report that the Piorkowski laboratories of Berlin had been licensed to import and sell in interstate traffic turtle tuberculine for use in the attempted cure of tuberculosis. It was stated that, following the analysis and test of the samples furnished, the Treasury Department has refused the requestad license.

THREE BROTHERS SAVED FIFTEEN

Williamsons, in Brooklyn, Tell of Horror.

DESPERATE FIGHT FOR LIFE

Face Of One Cut By Nails Of Woman He Was Trying To Recue—Thrown Overboard By Lurch Of Ill-Fated Ship

New York.—The story of their desperate fight for life after the collision between the steamships Monroe and Nantucket was told by the three Williamson brothers, of Brooklyn, who were among the few survivors to arrive here from Norfolk. The brothers are Henry, aged 21; George E., 23, and John, 25. They are all seafaring men.

George had his face covered with lacerations. "I got the scratches from a woman who fought me while I was trying to pull her into our boat," he said. "She had been driven crazy by the shock and exposure in the cold water."

"After the crash," said John, "we all three jumped out of our bunks and pulled on our trousers. That was all the clothes we could get. We rushed out on deck and there we lost Henry. Without thinking, I got into the boat near us, but the officer told us that it was for women, and I got out right away.

"George and myself then sat on the rail near another boat, waiting for our time. While we sat there a big colored man came up and sat next to us. He said to me: 'You're a white man and I'm a nigger. I guess it's all up with us. If we don't get out of here I hope we will meet in heaven.' He then began to pray. That was the last we saw of him.

"Just then the ship reeled right over and we were both thrown into the sea. The boat was hanging free in its davits, with the falls loose. When he came up the boat was floating, so George and I unhooked the tackle and got into it.

"We then rowed around and managed to pick up about 15 people. One of them was our young brother, Henry. We were mighty glad to see him again, I can tell you.

"As soon as Henry got in he helped to pull the other people on board, while we rowed."

Henry said that he had been separated from his other brothers on the boat deck. He then walked around and a woman came up to him. She had a baby in her arms. "For pity's sake, save my baby," she cried, as she handed the child to him.

"I held the baby tight," said Henry. "It was crying. I patted it on the back and tried to stop it, but I guess I'm not much good in handling kids.

"When the ship went over I was thrown off the deck into the sea. I was so surprised that I lost my grip on the baby and it fell ahead of me. I struck out for a long time trying to find it, but I couldn't. You don't know how bad I feel about it. Gee, I would gladly go back there again if I could only have saved it."

ALTOONA CAR SHOPS BUSY.

Signs That Hard Times Are Ending In Pennsylvania Railroad Plants.

Altoona, Pa.—Hard times in most of the Pennsylvania Railroad shops here ended, when work began on 1,000 new box cars, 50 passenger coaches and 34 big locomotives. This will keep the shops busy for nearly a year, and other orders for New York are to come shortly.

ENDS DIVORCE SUIT BY SHOT.

Man In Case Kills Self and Neighbor and Wounds Wife.

Erie, Pa.—Harry W. Goss, a business man of Union City, near here, shot and seriously wounded his wife, killed Mrs. Fred Field, a neighbor, and then killed himself. An action for divorce brought by Mrs. Goss was to have been heard in court here next Monday.

TRAIN STALLED 21 HOURS.

Passengers Go Hungry As Result Of Heavy Rain.

Lacrosse, Wis.—Stalled 21 hours by a January flood, a passenger train of the Reno branch of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road arrived here at noon with 150 half famished passengers on board. The train carried neither dining nor sleeping cars. According to the weather bureau, an inch of rain fell near Freiburg. The thermometer fell to 17 degrees above zero and the train was froxen in the ice.

41 LOST; 99 SAVED WHEN SHIPS CRASH

Old Dominion Liner is Struck in Fog By Nantucket.

SINKS IN TWENTY MINUTES.

The Lifeboats Of the Nantucket Rescued the 82 Persons From Off the Monroe and Out Of the Water.

Norfolk, Va.—Stabbed in the side by one of her sisters of the ocean, the Old Dominion liner Monroe sank off Hog Island, and 41 persons went to their death with her.

Made blind by the fog, the Merchants and Miners' ship Nantucket rammed the Monroe on her forward quarter, and 20 minutes later the Old Dominion liner went down.

In those 20 minutes 57 of those who had been on the Monroe escaped death by the lifeboats and rafts, doors, lifebelts of the sinking steamer and the lifeboats of the Nantucket.

20 Minutes Too Short To Save All.

But the time was too short for all to get off, and some had been either killed or maimed as they lay in their berths on the side of the ship that had been rammed.

Others became confused and could not reach the deck, where boats were being cast off, and still more are supposed to have perished in the water before they could be picked up.

The Monroe carried 52 passengers and a crew of 84. The Nantucket is said to have had but two passengers aboard. No one on the Nantucket was hurt, so far as can be learned.

Record Of Saved and Lost.

So far as facts available can determine the record of the disaster shows:

Passengers saved, 39.
Passengers lost, 19.
Crew saved, 60.
Crew lost, 22.

Crash Before Warning Could Be Given.

The ships came together before a cry from the lookout on either the Monroe or Nantucket could warn the men at the wheels of the two ships.

BRYAN'S ELEVENTH TREATY.

Peace Pact With Costa Rica Is Agreed Upon.

Washington—Secretary Bryan and Joaquin B. Calvo, Costa Rican minister, agreed upon the terms of a new treaty by which the United States and Costa Rica agree to investigate for at least one year all questions arising between the two countries which cannot be adjusted through diplomacy. This is the eleventh of the peace treaties agreed to by Mr. Bryan and the diplomatic representatives of foreign powers, and seven already have been signed.

MAN HAS LOST IDENTITY.

Wandered Barefoot and In Night Clothes In Mountains.

Huntington, W. Va.—A man, barefooted and clad only in night garments, found wandering in Mason county, W. Va., is the central figure in a strange case of lost identity, being investigated by the authorities of the West Virginia Insane Asylum. Clues obtained so far lead to the theory that the wanderer was once a business man of Evergreen, N. C. He, in flashes of intelligence, says his last name is Gillis and that he came from North Carolina.

ONE MEMBER WHOLE SENATE.

Presides, Introduces Bills and Makes Speech At Albany.

Albany, N. Y.—Only one member—Senator Thomas H. Bussey, of Perry, N. Y.—was present in the State Senate Friday. He called himself to order, introduced several bills, made a speech and then offered a motion for adjournment, which was unanimously carried. Among the bills introduced were several prepared by Mayor Mitchel, of New York city, to effect changes in police regulations demanded by Colonel Goethals.

TO CA'L TILLMAN AND BLEASE.

Both To Testify In South Carolina Asylum Probe.

Columbia, S. C.—United States Senator Tillman and Governor Blease, of South Carolina, will be requested to appear before the legislative committee appointed to investigate the alleged scandalous conditions at the State Hospital for the Insane. The committee has been organized and the first testimony will be taken this week. Subpoenas will be issued for the officers of the asylum.

TO LEND MONEY TO THE FARMER

Rural Credits Bill Introduced in Both Houses.

SHORT TERM LOANS LATER.

The Measure Provides For the Establishing Of Farm Lands Banks to Make Long-Time Loans.

Washington.—Administration rural credit bills were introduced simultaneously in the Senate and House by Senator Fletcher, of Florida, and Representative Moss, of Indiana, members of the commission President Wilson sent abroad last summer to study foreign systems. The bills were for long-term farm loans. Bills for short-term loans will be introduced later.

The measures would establish in the Treasury Department a bureau of farm-land banks under the direction of a commissioner and make provision for the formation of such banks in any State under the Federal charter and Federal inspection.

Any group of farmers within a State might organize co-operative farm-land banks with power to issue bonds to raise funds from distant money markets for farm development. Operations of the individual banks would be confined within State lines, though supervision will be Federal, owing to the variety of State laws bearing upon land titles, taxation, foreclosure and like subjects. They would be strictly prohibited from doing "a city business."

Loans to farmers might not exceed 50 per cent. of the value of improved land, nor extend more than 35 years. No institution could begin business without a foundation capital and double liability provided for national banks. The amount of long term business, which might be undertaken by any of the proposed banks, could not exceed 15 times the amount of paid up share capital and surplus. They might accept and pay interest on deposits not exceeding 50 per cent. of capital and surplus, and receive deposits of postal savings funds to the same extent.

The report submitted with the bill was drafted by Senator Fletcher, chairman; Senator Gore, Representative Moss, of Indiana; Dr. John Lee Coulter, of Minnesota, representing the Census Bureau and other members of the rural credit commission.

The bills were referred to the Banking and Currency Committees of the Senate and House, which have subcommitees assigned to the subject.

FIVE TO 10 YEARS FOR AUTOIST.

Son Of New Jersey Judge Killed Boy With His Car.

Trenton, N. J.—The Court of Errors and Appeals affirmed the conviction of Daniel A. Dugan, Jr., of Orange, for manslaughter in killing Leo F. McDermott, a 14 year-old boy, with his motorcar two years ago, and he must now serve a sentence of from 5 to 10 years in the State prison. Dugan is a son of District Judge Daniel A. Dugan, of Orange, who was appointed when Woodrow Wilson was Governor of New Jersey.

EVA BOOTH WORSE.

The Salvation Army Leader's Condition Grave.

New York.—Eva Booth, head of the Salvation Army in this country, who for more than a week past has been ill in the Salvation Army Barracks here, after a nervous breakdown in Elmira, was reported to be in a grave condition. She suffered an attack of influenza which developed into pleurisy and tonsilitis. Intestinal troubles have complicated her case, giving grounds for anxiety.

ONE KILLED, SCORES HURT.

Suburban Cars Crash Head-On At Lackawanna.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Two crowded suburban cars on the Buffalo, Lake Erie and Western Railroad collided head-on at high speed in Lackawanna, a suburb. John Doyle, one of the motormen, was killed. Nearly all of the 75 passengers on the two cars were hurt, but none of the injured will die. The accident was caused, according to railroad officials, by Doyle's neglect to see a block signal.

NATIONAL CAPITOL PAINTINGS.

Want Civil War and Canal Represented On Frieze.

Washington. — The frieze in the rotunda of the Capitol representing scenes in the history of North America from 1492 to 1848 would be finished with scenes of the Civil War and the Panama Canal, according to a bill introduced by Representative Smith, of Idaho. No work has been done on the frieze for more than 25 years.

$9,200 PAID FOR ART VASE.

Chinese Curio Only 7½ Inches High Brings Small Fortune.

New York.—At an art auction here $9,200 was paid for a Chinese vase of the seventeenth century only 7½ inches high.

LIGHTNING AS AN EXPLOSIVE.

Sends Off Nitroglycerin As Sistersville, W. Va.; Loss $10,000.

Sistersville, W. Va.—The plant of the Young Torpedo Company was wrecked and damage estimated at $10,000 was done to property within a radius of 10 miles when lightning exploded 500 quarts of nitroglycerin in one of the torpedo company's magazines. C. C. Curtis, standing a quarter of a mile away, was rendered unconscious and scores of windows were brokan.

COMMERCIAL

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

Dun's Review says:

"Recent improvement in business conditions is in some measure sentimental, and certain branches of trade and industry have not shared in the forward movement to any appreciable extent. Briefly summed up, the situation continues irregular, although there is tangible reason for the better feeling prevalent. A noticeable revival of activity has occurred in some mercantile lines and thi sis especially true of the leading dry goods markets, in which prospects appear quite favorable. Conservatism is manifest where distant purchases are involved, but orders for immediate delivery are steadily expanding."

Bradstreet's says:

"Most developments of the week are favorable, though it is evident that improved sentiment rather than actual expansion of demand is the basis for many cheerful reports. Following the exhibition of exigent buying to replenish broken stocks, there has come in many lines a cautious, almost slow, enlargement of operations which marks the continuance of the conservatism that has characterized trade for several years past. There is, however, no apparent diminution of the tone of optimism, which bids fair to find expression in more active buying when the full effects of the ease in monetary affairs filters down and influences the usual spring season of industrial and commercial expansion."

FIGHTING THE COAL DUST PERIL

MINERS ARMED WITH OXYGEN APPARATUS DIRECTING STREAMS OF WATER ON A FIRE IN THE SENGHENYDD COLLIERY, WALES

THE recent loss of life in the Senghenydd colliery, Wales, affords another example of the explosive nature of coal dust. The public has heard a good deal about the dangers of firedamp and of its dreaded aftermath, chokedamp, which speedily overcomes its confured victims. Less has been said of the dangers of coal dust, but they are becoming better appreciated and measures to protect miners from them are being devised.

The bureau of mines at Washington has lately been doing good work in its studies of the explosibility of coal dust and in allied experiments seeking to find practical ways to lessen casualties from this cause. What American officials have done in this direction has been an amplification of similar efforts abroad. A surprising feature of the whole subject is that the danger lurking in this dust was so long unsuspected.

In fact, for many years people actually refused to recognize any menace in this material. It was not until convincing evidence was adduced by the scentific investigator that the stubbornness of generations gave way. Then unbelief surrendered before the indisputable proof of the dangers of coal dust when floating in the air.

According to the recent report of a British government committee, "it may now be considered established beyond all doubt that coal dust suspended in the air is capable of being ignited without the presence of any inflammable gas and of spreading an explosion throughout the dusty galleries of mines." The first requirement is that the dust shall be stirred up by some means and mixed with the air in cloud-like form. When ignited in this state it is capable of producing just such destructive effects as are so often observed after a colliery disaster.

Why is this stuff dangerous? Briefly, the chemists say that it is because there is more surface for the oxygen to attack, and this action induces heat. According to the British research commission, "the degree of inflammability of any combustible material can be defined as the relative ease with which its oxidation can be effected so as to produce flame." In other words, the finer the dust from any particular kind of coal the greater its inflammability.

The best evidence of this lies in the fact that a sample of coal which ordinarily would not ignite until it had been exposed to a temperature of 1,065 degrees centigrade would, when in the form of dust, explode at a temperature of 560 degrees centigrade. Gunpowder explodes at a temperature of 550 degrees centigrade, so you can see how closely coal dust is allied to gunpowder.

We have been burning coal for hundreds of years and yet there is a lot about it we do not know. In fact, the true chemical nature of this fuel remains largely a mystery. Investigators have shown that coal is not the simple substance it was once thought to be. In fact, it is a compound of vegetable cellulose, which forms its base, cemented by the changed resins and gums of the primordial plants. The latter bodies are readily decomposed at comparatively low temperatures and it is from this part of the coal that the first of the explosive gases come. When coal is in the form of a dust it is in the condition to respond quickest to the action of heat.

You have seen the cloud of dust advancing along a country road ahead of a coming storm. Well, an explosion in a mine virtually duplicates this occurrence. The explosion sets up disturbing air currents and these stir up the coal dust in the outlying galleries. What follows? That initial blast heats the dust to the point of ignition and the fine particles mixed with the air become an explosive.

It flashes up at once and transmits kindred waves throughout the whole range of the dust cloud, and in this fashion generates a series of explosions which are successively fed by the whirling dust that they disturb. It is substantially a chain of explosions which lengthens to the furthest limits of the available fuel upon which it feeds.

The heedlessly bared flame of a miner's lamp may start the ball rolling, either by igniting a small volume of firedamp or by setting off a cloud of coal dust which has been created by a miner's blast. Undoubtedly many of the worst colliery disasters have been more directly due to coal dust than to any other cause, and yet firedamp was until quite recently held responsible for most of these catastrophies. It did not occur to the miners or to their employers that the gathering particles of coal were a source of danger.

The operatives were too busy getting out merchantable coal to give any heed to the accumulating dust. And yet, as we have seen, the mine galleries were slowly but surely becoming little less perilous than magazines of powder.

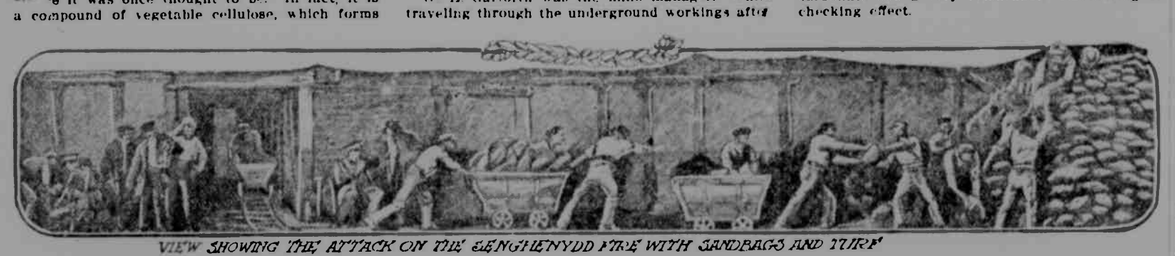
Once the hazard was realized the mining world cast about for preventive agencies. Naturally the first remedy seemed to be water, and mine roadways were liberally saturated to lay the dust and thus prevent its rising so as to form an explosive mixture with the atmosphere.

In lieu of this the next precaution was in the form of dustless zones, the powdery particles being scrupulously removed for a considerable distance. The idea was to establish in this manner a sort of void through which expdosive waves could not be propagated. Theoretically this is all right, but again the ventilating air currents carry with them a measure of coal dust and make it impracticable to maintain the defensive zones.

Just how some one stumbled on the idea of diluting coal dust with a non-explosive dust is not a matter of history, but somebody did conceive the plan, and the value of this remedy is daily growing in favor because of its effectiveness. In general terms the German mine authorities touched upon this method as far back as 1884, but the subject was not brought forward scientifically until after the explosion in the Altofts colliery, England, two years later.

W. E. Garforth was the mine manager. While traveling through the underground workings after an explosion of coal dust he noticed that although great damage had been done in some places there were at others no perciptible destructive effects. Curiously, just at these apparently immune places fine stone dust had been whirled into the air with great violence and then settled upon the roadways like a thick carpet. Mr. Garforth noticed this peculiarity on other occasions and came to the conclusion that stone dust might be useful to dilute coal dust and so render the latter harmless, just in the same fashion as air is used to dilute firedamp.

A fine example of how well rock dust may be distributed by natural means is to be seen in the northern Illinois long wall field, where the bits of shale that fall from the roof and the pack walls keep the coal dust covered up. Explosions have never happened in this district, though mining has been going on there for over 40 years.



It took the British some years before they reached the point of action, but in July, 1908, experiments on a large scale with stone dust were commenced on the completion of the Altofs research gallery, Mr. Garforth being placed in charge. This gallery consisted of a tube 600 feet in length, having a diameter of seven and a half feet and being built of the shells of disused boilers, and for more than two years investigations were carried out with the most painstaking care.

It was proved conclusively that the admixture of an incombustible dust with the coal dust rendered the initiation of an explosion correspondingly difficult to effect. At the Woolwich testing gallery, the ordnance center of the British government, it was found that coal dust containing a large proportion of shale was insensitive to ignition by means of a charge of gunpowder. In these latter experiments sensitive coal dust was rendered inert by an admixture with 85 per cent of shale dust. But this seemed to call for too much protective stone dust to make the method practicable.

The Belgian authorities have set the pace in this matter. They did it by placing boards in the mine galleries just under the roof in the form of shelves and upon these they laid heaps of incombustible dust, not fine enough to be disturbed by the normal air currents. They allowed something like nine bushels per square yard of working.

There was left sufficient space above the top of the dust heap for the blast of an explosion to sweep over the pile and thus to blow it broadcast in a cloud. Thus the same destructive blast that would otherwise have stirred up the coal dust and ignited it was made to set in motion an antidote which smothered the inflammable particle of coal.

European experiments have shown that a 40 per cent. admixture of stone dust with coal dust was sufficient to prevent an explosion. Of course this depends upon the chemical nature of the coal, and the results so far obtained are the reward of the first efforts to lessen this hazard. It is quite probable that some kindred but less bulky medium will be discovered that will answer better. In fact a 2 per cent. mixture of sodium bicarbonate has a very remarkable smothering or checking effect.

Flounced Dresses Are Coming

IF you wish to busy yourself preparing for the coming spring and summer, you can be assured of the success of certain new styles in advance. It is wise to be ready for the season which lures us out of doors, and to make the most of it.

Here is the sweetest of summer gowns, made of silk muslin and lace with a fichu and a belt of satin ribbon. Similar gowns are on display made of a variety of materials. There are embroidered cotton crepes, first of all. Nets, with flounces edged with lace, embroidered crepe de chine and voiles. But always lace and more lace. Point d'esprit net is found very useful and fine flowered voiles, lawns and batiste.

Among the handsomest of gowns are those of white net showing flouncings of the net edged with narrow black chantilly lace. Others of sheer cotton crepe with fold of black mailne laid under the edge of flouncings.

Much hand embroidery appears on the gowns of crepe, voile, etc. But it is of a kind that does not try the eyes. Long sprays of flowers of moderate size—like the carnation, for example—are done with heavy floss in long bold stitches. The effect is beautiful. The gowns are in white or pale colors. White is the loveliest, and the light colored underslip with a lace-trimmed petticoat of net worn under these gowns is beautiful.

It would be hard to find a simpler or prettier model than that shown in the picture, for a flounced gown. The design, too, is appropriate to older women, as well as to the youthful wearer. In fact, the difference in flounced gowns for young or older wearers is discernible in finishing touches, rather than in design. The foundation skirts are plain and straight. The flounces are adjusted in differing poses. Sometimes, as in the gown pictured, they sag toward the back, but in a good number this is reversed and they rise toward the back.

The waist line is about the normal in most of them. While waists are draped, these are set in sleeves as well as drop shoulder and kimono effects. Ribbons are conspicuous, and the "tango shades, warm nasturtium yellows, are specially liked.

Almost anyone who makes any pretentions to sewing, or has any faith in her own ability, can put together a flounced dress. The trick seems to be in adjusting the flowers at the right slope, with even fullness, and in not getting them too full.

The three flounced skirt, having the flounces shaped, is displayed for heavier fabrics, and is wonderfully attractive.

There is a world of light, airy fabrics, fascinating in design, and a world of filmy laces, moderate in price, so that the flounced gown has a pleasant future before it. Limp fabrics are chosen that fall to the figure, so that flounces do not mean bulkiness. That is tabooed, and is likely to remain so.

MODERN DAY ROMANCE

STORY OF A PRINCE OF INDIA AND A DANCER.

Wooing Ended Happily, Though It Was Not Conducted as in the Glorious Days of Beauty and Chivalry.

Ah!—as we exclaim when a rocket goes up. Ah! Let us take our minds from sordid affairs so that our emotions can vibrate over a sweet romance—a romance shining with love and especially with paternal devotion. It is the romance of the maharanee of Kapurthala, India, who is now touching these shores with her husband, who was once, and we feel sure still is, her lover. We pulsate rapturously as we read of the substantial proof he gave of his love, and we thrill conclusively when the publicity agent tells us of how dearly her father held her.

Strange to say, this lovely Indian princess is, or was, a Spaniard—a Spanish dancer. When the prince of India saw her dance he immediately fell on his knees and besought her to change her name from plain Anita Delgado to sonorous maharanee of Kapurthala. Dear, old dad objected to having the fine old Castilian strain grafted on to Oriental royalty and told little Annie's glittering suitor to vamose, which is Spanish for decamp.

But instead of folding his tent like an Arab and silently sneaking back to Kapurthala, what did the swart but spangled lover do? Did he murder the doting Delgado and flee with the pulchritudinous daughter? No. Did he ride off with her like a Lochnivar out of the East? No. Did he Romeo around her dormer window? No. Did he strum a plaintive guitar and induce her to elope by the light of the moon? No. Then what did he do?

Let the news item tell it in its own way:

"The maharanee of Kapurthala, India, and her husband are visiting in the United States. The maharanee formerly was a Spanish dancer named Anita Delgado. Her father objected to the attentions of the Indian prince to his daughter. The maharajah overcame the parental objections by giving her father $6,000."

How much more efficacious than writing Petrarch's sonnets to Laura, or Dante's poems to Beatrice—the simple writing of a $6,000 check! Let us sit by the borderland of old romance in the twilight:

Where glitter hauberk, helm, and lance,
And banner waves, and trumpet sounds,
And ladies ride with hawk on wrist,
And mighty warriors sweep along,
Magnified by the purple mist,
The dusk of centuries and of song—and let us dream upon the magic and the wonder and the glory and the power of a $6,000 check!

Activities of Women.

New York storekeepers employ over 50,000 extra girls during the holiday season.

From 1901 to 1911 the mortality due to cancer among women has increased 22 per cent.

Ninety per cent. of the members of the Shirtwaist Makers' union in New York are young girls.

Women in Switzerland who graduate in theology will hereafter be entitled to the status of the clergy.

Mrs. Philip N. Moore has been appointed a member of the Provisional Alumnae council of Vassar college.

The Women's Municipal party has been formed in London which will be strictly non-political and will represent women as women.

Instead of helping women it is claimed that the new Ohio labor law has driven them out of trades to be superseded by men.

Girls who are reared in dire poverty are 100 per cent more likely to go wild than those who have had better opportunity.

About 4,000 girls are banded together in their various colleges under the Women's Intercollegiate Student Government association.

Widows Are Mothers to Many.

Up in the North Carolina mountain region, between the Blue Ridge and the Great Smoky ranges, a wealthy resident, J. McWhitaker, recently gave a dinner to 17 widows. Aside from the fact that it takes a bold, brave man to attempt entertaining so many women at one time there is the additional point, properly shown by figures that the region thereabouts is one productive of long life and large families.

The combined ages of the 17 widows are 1,033 years, the average being sixty-one. The number of children of these women is 152, grandchildren 289, great-grandchildren, 60, great-great-grandchildren 9. The average ages of the grandchildren is seventeen years, and of the great-grandchildren, nine. The dinner was a bountiful one and the mountains lent it their best, including wild turkeys, pheasant, venison and the choicest products of the farm and the garden.

Appropriate Enough.

The vicar of Leeds, England, Doctor Bickersteth, tells of a clergyman who rang him up on the telephone to ask if he would consent to his taking a marriage service in which the word "obey" was left out. He replied that he was not the bishop, but was tolerably certain that the bishop would not allow him to omit the word.

"But who is the lady going to marry?" he inquired.

The answer was: "She is going to marry a doctor."

He then asked: "Would she mind if you put in the word 'consult' instead?"

Health Note.

A Chicago physician says: "Good health demands that the mouth be kept closed while asleep." Cases are known where a man's health would be in better condition if he'd kept his mouth closed while awake.

Stormy Is Right.

The married life of Mrs. Ada Blizzard, who is applying for a divorce from her husband in Sidney, probably became so tempestuous that she just couldn't weather the storm any longer.—Youngstown Telegram.

A SCHOOL FOR BRIDES

New York East Side Innovation Which Has Proved a Wonderful Success.

Could anything be more practical than a little three-room flat outfitted as a model home, the whole affair being use as a school for brides? St. George's church—picturesque old landmark of Stuyvesant square—has opened such a school, with two sessions a day, says the New York Mail. And maybe it isn't a success! Also, maybe it is.

Mrs. Herbert Satterlee, daughter of the late J. P. Morgan, presented the school to St. George's Memorial house through the city mission committee of the church, which is composed of women as kind as they are wealthy.

It was intended for "children more than twelve years old," for it is the children of congested East side neighborhoods who are the teachers of their parents when it comes to matters of modern household art.

Older girls heard of it, however, and clamored for admission to the classes. New little brides heard of it and, longing to start their married life aright, also clamored. Now, Miss Jessie McCutcheon says, the school threatens to outgrow its allotted space and spread all over the neighborhood.

Miss McCutcheon, from Edinburgh, Scotland, is the teacher. In a blue gingham house frock and white cap that hides a mass of wonderous gold hair, she puts her pupils through the daily duties of a "three-room' household and incidentally feeds them a jolly good meal.

Everything in the three rooms could be bought for $100. Yet they are perfectly and sanitarily furnished and illustrate a comfortable home for a small family.

One bedroom has a double deck bed. Here four tots can sleep comfortably, two by two, laid scrupulously head to feet. There is a crib, too, for there's always a baby.

A chiffonier contains all the children's clothing and they are taught to keep it there. In a corner is a homemade closet with gay chintz curtains and a pine shelf a foot from the floor for shoes. On top sit a row of pasteboard millinery boxes resplendent in wall paper overcoats, and as ornamental as you please.

Cleanliness is dinned into the pupils and the joys of washstand and the toothbrush emphasized. "There's a place for everything," is the slogan, and every student heeds it.

The living room contains a couch dressed in gay chintz by day, but opening double at night by a single twist of the wrist. Another curtained wardrobe is in this room, for ma's and pa's best clothes, with the usual shoe shelf. The chairs are of white pine of the common 75-cent variety, grandly stained with brown, which cost only 50 cents a can and was enough to stain chairs, table, shelves and floor.

In the kitchen everything is scrubable. Five-cent fruit jars serve as holders for cereals, sugar, flour, dried peas, beans, etc. On the window sill is a "cold weather refrigerator" made of a box with an oilcloth curtain.

All windows of the flat are curtained in snowy cross bar muslin, cheap, pretty, durable and easily kept clean. At top of the windows is a plaited frill of six-inch blue checked gingham and it is amazing how stylish it looks.

The whole place is spick and span and as fascinating as a newly furnished doll house.

Each room is the basis of a lesson. Miss McCutcheon drills her classes first in the making of coffee and toast, and the preparation of a cereal, for breakfast. Then comes the airing and tidying up of the "living room," which is made completely ready so that there will always be one spot where company can be received, no matter how soon it may be after breakfast.

Then the children's bedroom is tackled. After that the scene of operations is in the kitchen. This interests the pupils most of all.

Simple but nutritious dishes are prepared. Stew is a favorite, also potato soup, bread pudding, custard, rice cakes, prunes and boiled apricots.

Plain, cheap fare, easy cooked and to digest, is the order of the model kitchen, and little Scotch Miss McCutcheon manages to put many a nugget of useful philosophy into her household lessons.

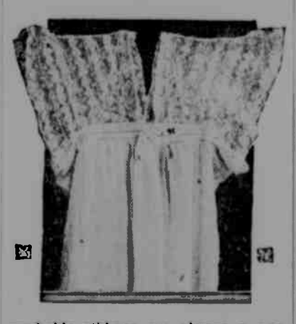
"Is it all appreciated?" she exclaimed, in reply to a query. "Well, I should say it was. It's almost pathetic to see how eager the East siders are to learn good living. They fairly drink in the lessons, and a trip through the neighborhood would soon prove to you that they profit by every word. I believe any bride who modeled her home after this three room flat would be assured of a happy and prosperous married life!"

HOW NAPOLEON DIED

Additional Particulars Given by Grandson of Medical Attendant.

Some interesting additions to the last chapter in the life of Napoleon—the five and a half years he spent on the island of St. Helena—are made by L. M. Shortt, the grandson of Dr. Thomas Shortt, who was principal medical officer on the island during the last months of Napoleon's life, says London Tit-Bits.

Two months before the death of "the little Corsican," which took place about ten minutes before 6 o'clock on the evening of May 5, 1821, Napoleon was told that a splendid mansion had been completed for him on the island, to which he could move at any time. Napoleon, however, regarded the building with horror, and would never go into it. Dr. Shortt, and those obliged to be on the spot, had beds in the mansion, being its first inhabitants.



Napoleon developed many eccentricities before his death. It was with the greatest difficulty that he could be persuaded to take either food or medicine. Indeed, Dr. Shortt had to invent a plan to make Napoleon take medicine without his knowing it.

By this means the doctor managed to give him ten grains of calomel, and he derived advantage from the medicine, but his strength declined rapidly and his existence soon terminated. Dr. Shortt mentions, in the English Review, that Napoleon would allow no stranger to approach him, and, although he continued in consultation until Napoleon died, he did not see him until after his death.

A post-mortem examination revealed the fact that Napoleon's body was a perfect mass of disease from cancer. His father died when younger than himself of the same disease, so that it was hereditary and unconnected with climate or the mode of life he led at St. Helena. There is little doubt that he would have shared the same fate had he been seated on the throne of France. It is said that Napoleon's sister, the Princess Borghese, suffered from the same disease, and Bonaparte was anxious that his own symptoms should be fully ascertained for the purpose of being useful to his child, who might inherit from him the complaint.

LACE AND RIBBONS MARK THE STYLES IN UNDER-MUSLINS

UNDERMUSLINS in common with other articles for women's wear, have been growing more lacy, more bedecked with pretty finishing touches, more diaphanous, with every season, until now, it seems, the limit has been reached. Night dresses are made with yokes of fine net, having lace inserted, or superposed. Or they are made with lace and fine embroidery or all lace yokes. Pretty washable ribbons are always a necessary part of their construction. Altogether the undergarments now on display in the great stores have all been much influenced by this liking for airy fabrics and the craze for laces. Petticoats have wide flounces of net or lace, or the very sheerest of embroideries. Sometimes a lace flounces has another of net under it. Corset covers are of net, chiffon and lace. Small chiffon roses and abundance of ribbon trim them. Occasionally one sees an entire petticoat of net, but more often the flounce only is of this pretty fabric.

As in outer garments, under-muslins are cut with easy lines, to hang gracefully, not to "fit" the figure. Whatever one may think of the diaphanous materials, it must be conceded that the present styles are exceptionally graceful.

Thin muslins, nainsooks, and cambrics make up the body of the garments. Much beading is used to carry the ribbons which make gay the several pieces. Everything is beribboned.

In the midst of winter, when evenings are long and days are most comfortably spent in the house, underwear for the coming summer should be made up. In fact, the bulk of the summer sewing can be done long before the clothes are needed. Spring goods are on display in January, and by the first of February styles for the coming spring and summer are fairly well settled.

A night dress of cambric and Val lace is shown in the picture. The yoke and very short sleeves are in one and made of Val insertions. There are two patterns of lace, the rows sewed together. The kimono sleeve portion may be lengthened by adding rows of insertion. A narrow edging finishes the opening at the neck, and a wider edge in the same pattern finishes the sleeves.

The rows of lace may be "whipped" together, that is, sewed edge to edge with a short overcast stitch, or sewed on the machine.

The yoke is joined to the skirt of the gown by a narrow band of embroidered beading. Through this a ribbon is run, which ties at the front in a small bow. This ribbon serves to adjust the gown to the figure.

For such pretty night robes, separate bows and rosettes of ribbon are provided. They are to be pinned on with very small safety pins. Little rosettes for the top of the sleeves, matching the other ribbons, but without hanging ends, may be added by way of elaboration.

The sheer fabrics now in vogue are easy to launder and soft to the touch. They are distinctly "new-fashioned." Light lawn or voile negligees are thrown over them when one rises or when they are worn in the bedroom.

The models are so simple in construction that one hardly needs a pattern to cut them by. Still, as all the pattern concerns provide patterns at such trifling cost, it is well to get one as a guide.

Silk Gloves for Dances.

The almost ethereally airy dancing frocks of tulle are accompanied by accessories that carry out their delicate effect. Instead of heavy kid gloves, silken gloves embroidered prettily on the long wrists are drawn over the arm. Sashes are of chiffon or tulle edged with fur, and fans are of beaded tulle, rather than feathers.

Physics of the Emotions

The exaltation of victory makes wounded soldiers oblivious of pain, and the depression of defeat increases mortality. If a cat is frightened for ten or fifteen minutes by a barking dog, a sample of its blood will make strips of certain muscles relax when they are immersed in it, though such a portion of blood had no effect on them before the emotional disturbance. Frightened rabbits show almost complete prostration, and their brain cells, in contrast with those of normal animals, take a deeper stain from certain chemicals, and their size and shape are strikingly altered. Finally, if an individual is placed in circuit with a delicate galvanometer and made to laugh, to feel sad, or is suddenly surprised, there will be movements in the instrument indicating the passage of small electric currents. Such interesting scientific facts as these, and many others, make it clearly evident that emotions are something more than mere states of mind.—Fred W. Eastman, in Harper's Magazine.

Too Significant an Appeal.

A retired naval officer became the rector of a country parish. His parishioners, wishing to give him a surprise, subscribed amongst themselves and bought a flag for the church tower. Directly the old gentleman saw it he flew into a violent rage, and ordered it to be taken down at once. One of his parishioners asked him why he did not like it. "Allow that flag to fly on my church tower!" he raved. "Never! It's an insult. Do you know what that particular flag signifies, sir? It means 'in distress; want a pilot.'"

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY

JASON KEP

In the United States there are 1,352,000 farm families whose annual income is less than $400; 3,422,000 city families whose income is less than $400. Almost six million families who's average income is less than $33.33 a month.

Is it any wonder there are a great many discouraged people. One would think they would have trouble enough, after using the utmost economy, but want.

There are 1,477,000 farm families whose annual income is less than $600; 2,230,000 city families whose income is less than $600, making 2,677,000 with less than $50 a month income.

The average per cent. drink bill in 1910 was $26.42, or $132.10 per family.

Subtract $132.10 from $400 leaves $168 per year or $22.34 per month to feed, clothe and pay doctor bills for a family of five.

Then the 3,677,,00 families with less than $600 less $132 drink bill leaves $468 or $39 a month.

It is surely driving these families into bankruptcy and crime.

The diversion of so much money into a single habit and its attending evils, affects the purse of the bread winner, the comforts of home, the schooling of the children, and the health and happiness.

Figures of this character can not be disputed.

You can readily see that in case the breadwinner of the 6,000,000 families whose income is less than $400 should drink, the community must by charity or tax help to support the family.

So the citizen who says "I don't drink; it don't affect me; if others want to make a fool of themselves let them do it, this is a free country," is talking through his hat. It does affect him.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" Cain thought not. Well, you remember his fimsh. Mr. Citizen, you are your brother's keeper, and what affects your brother affects you.

Now help those 9,451,000 families and help yourself by helping to banish the saloons and speak-easies from your community, your state and the United States. Help to remove the temptation and influence to drink from before the face of the people. Of course some will drink any way, but many will not and it will prevent thousands of boys from starting. Have you any boys?

The prohibitory law against murder has not stopped murder, but the penalty certainly helped to curtail it. You will admit that there would be more murders if the government were to grant license to good, honest murderers, even if the law did say they must not murder before 9 o'clock a. m., or after 11 p. m., and on Sundays and election days. There is nothing to it.

Mr. Business Man, are you blind? Don't you realize that you are drifting over a powder mine, and it will blow up some day if something is not done to relieve the situation?

For goodness sake forget the mighty dollar for a few minutes; you have it too close to the eye and it shuts off the the prospective. Take a few minutes off and think a real honest-to-goodness think.

That $132 a year out of a $400 income of a family means the difference between living and starving. Now who in blazes wouldn't steal, rob or riot if he were starving or his family were starving. Wouldn't you?

Mr. Business Man, you have a great weight in the community; you are the moulder of public opinion; you are the leader. It is your duty to come out boldly and help the people to remove the cause of their undoing. You will thereby gain respect and honor upon earth, also a decrease in taxes, and maybe, or perhaps get a little nearer to that halo which isn't moth-eaten.

Please get busy; we need you; you need yourself.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Seventh Day Adventism.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It is generally supposed that the main difference between this sect and Christians in general, is that they keep the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, while others keep the first day. This is not the only difference by any means.

They teach many things that are subversive of Christianity.

What is the believer's relation to God in this dispensation? Is it law or grace? Paul in Rom. 6 : 14 says we are under grace.

They say the law has not been changed. That is true. They claim that there is no Scriptural authority for saying that the Sabbath has been changed from the seventh to the first day of the week. Let us admit this. Note, however, that when the Sabbath is mentioned in the New Testament it refers to the seventh day and not to the first. They therefore claim that the Christian in Apostolic days observed the seventh day as the Sabbath. That we will admit. There isn't a single instance given of a Christian assembly meeting on the seventh day to worship or to break bread; nor is there an intimation of their observing the seventh day as a Christian institution. They quote Paul in Acts 17 : 2. But that was a Jewish assembly and Paul went there and then because he could meet the Jews and reason with them. There is no thought either in Chap. 17 or 18 about Christian Sabbath keeping in any of these passages. Paul went there to reach the Jews with the Gospel on the seventh day because that was their regular assembling day. In every case in the Acts when preaching on the Sabbath is spoken of it is a Jewish meeting on the Sabbath day, and at the river side because they had no synagogue. There is not a single instance in the Acts of a Christian assembly convened on the Sabbath day.

What does the New Testament teach as to the observance of the first day of the week? It certainly is marked in a very special way. Of course there is no legal character attached to it such as characterized the Sabbath. Its observance has the character of privilege rather than legal command, which is a feature that generally characterizes Christianity. You will notice first that it is the day on which Jesus rose from the dead as the Head and Beginning of the new creation. The first creation was ruined by sin, and Christ began the new creation. Christ, through His death, accomplished eternal redemption. Christ risen from the dead becomes the Head of a new creation. II Cor. 5 : 17. This shows that the rasurrection of Christ is the beginning of a new era. The old creation with which the Sabbath was connected was judicially ended there. A new era dawned in Christ's resurrection. A new creation sprang into being by the power of God. The first day of the week celebrated the completion of this great work of God. In keeping with this we find in John 20 that Christ presented Himself to the disciples on the first day of the week, conveying to them the peace He had made through the blood of His cross. Eight days later, on the next first day, He appeared again to His disciples. This shows the striking manner in which the first day of the week is marked in connection with the bringing in of the new creation.

The first day of the week is marked most strikingly by the descent of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. This feast began on the first day of the week, or the morrow after the Sabbath. Lev. 23 : 16, 17. This brought in the full character and power of Christianity. The presence of the Holy Spirit in and with his saints gives them their character as Christians. He came on the first day of the week and thus the first day was the inauguration of Christianity in its fullness and power.

It was on the first day of the week that the disciples assembled to break bread. Acts 20 : 7. This was their habitual custom. In 1 Cor, 16 : 1, 2, the first day is again marked by an order from the Apostle to the assemblies at Galatia and at Corinth, concerning the collection for the saints. It is very significant, to say the least, that the first day of the week was set apart as the day on which these offerings were to be made.

In Rev. 1 : 10 the first day of the week is called "the Lord's day." Of course this is denied by the Seventh Day Adventists, who claim it was the Sabbath, or seventh day. If he had meant the Sabbath, who can doubt that he would have said, "I was in the Spirit on the Sabbath," for everywhere else in Scripture the seventh day is called the Sabbath. Here it is the first day that is called the Lord's day.

Only one other place in the New Testament is the word's used and that is I Cor. 11 : 20, "The Lord's Supper." This supper belonged to the Lord and it was observed on the first day of the week. Both the supper and the day are marked as specially belonging to and connected with the authority of the Lord Jesus, whose claims were established in His triumphant resurrection. The Sabbath is always in Scripture the seventh day of the week, while "the Lord's day" is the first, and marked by the resurrection of Christ, the descent of the Holy Spirit and by the saints assembling on that day to break bread in remembrance of the Master.

It is the happy privilege of Christians on that day to rest from their secular employments and to be free to remember their once crucified but now risen and exalted Lord, and to serve Him in spiritual things.

The Sabbath and the Lord's day are never confounded. They are kept distinct and if Christians had recognized this distinction calling the first day of the week the Lord's day instead of the Sabbath it would have saved a lot of confusion in the minds of the great mass of Christians. There are, however, other things than the keeping of the first or seventh day of the week involved in this question. It raises the question of the Christian's relationship to the law. The aim is to bring Christians under the law as men in the flesh and thus rob them of the holy liberty into which grace has brought them. In short, the aim is to destroy the very fabric of Christianity and substitute for it the lifeless form of Judaism, which can only thrust the soul into darkness and rob it of all divine certainty as to either life or salvation.

I shall reserve till another time the positive errors of this cult.

Yours truly

"BEHOLD, I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW"

Fallen Race of Adam to Be Made New by Christ.

Man's Original Perfection—The Reign of Sin and Death—A Sad Spectacle. Thousands of Millions Dead—Hundreds of Millions Dying Weak In Body, Weak Mentally, Morally, Physically—Human Power Has Failed to Arrest the Malady—Man's Only Hope Is In God—Messiah God's Appointed Agent—To Redeem, to Regenerate, to Make New—Soon He Will Deliver the Whole Creation—Nothing Shall Hinder—Blessings Will Be Outpoured.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—Pastor Russell preached today in the Temple. His text was, "Behold, I make all things new."—Revelation 21:5.

The Pastor showed that the Bible intimates that the seven days of the week are typical of seven great days, each a thousand years long. At the beginning of man's week he was perfect, as represented in Adam; but disobedience to his Creator brought upon him the curse, "Dying, thou shalt die." Under that curse our race has gone down steadily to the tomb—the Bible Hell—Sheol, Hades.

Next the Pastor showed how ineffectually man has struggled against this curse of death. Today, he said, our race is assailed by more ailments, mental, moral and physical, than ever before known. Our jails, penitentiaries, asylums, hospitals, all bear testimony to this fact, he claimed. Even the morals of the world he believes to be apparently at as low a state as could well be imagined, after all our preaching, and manufacture of hobgoblins, devils and hells to frighten humanity into church, religion and morality.

Then the Pastor asked whether it is not time to acknowledge our failure and to cry to God for help ere we perish as a race. Not only have we not converted the heathen world, but we find the civilized world retrograding. Statistics show that crimes increase amongst the heathen despite the preaching of eternal torture.

Man's Extremity Is God's Opportunity.

The Pastor next outlined God's great Plan of Salvation through the Redeemer, who died, "the Just for the unjust," to open the way for man's return to God's favor. During the Gospel Age the Savior has been gathering out an elect Church to be His associates in a coming Kingdom, in which He with His Church will reign for a thousand years. During that period Satan will be bound, to deceive the people no more; and the Redeemer will put down sin in its every form.

The Savior's work at the First Advent—healing the sick and the blind, casting out demons and awakening the sleeping dead—the Pastor showed was a foreshadow mercy of the greater work which Jesus and His glorified Church will accomplish during the great antitypical Sabbath. These, as the antitypical Seed of Abraham, will fulfil God's Promise to Abraham.

Christendom's Great Mistake.

The Pastor believes that the creeds of the Dark Ages are gross misrepresentations of God's character. Many have taken these misrepresentations too literally. As a result, some have gone to insane asylums; others have turned to pleasure and sin in their endeavor to forget God; and still others have been made unhappy as they thought of kind, good neighbors and friends who made no profession of Christianity.

The speaker then showed that Christendom's great mistake was that of disregarding God's Word and believing Satan's lie, as the heathen do. God declared that the wages of sin would be death—absence of life. Satan contradicted this and falsified to Mother Eve, assuring her that there would be no death penalty. When death came, Satan and his fallen angels perpetuated the lie by telling us that when our friends appear to die they really become more alive than ever. In accepting their testimony we have done what St. Paul cautioned against.

Evil spirits, he claimed, have seduced Christendom by giving feigned communications between the dead and the living. As Satan and his demon host have full knowledge of human affairs, they can easily personate the dead, and through mediums, witches, planchettes, visions and dreams, represent the dead as still alive.

The Pastor then drew a picture of the coming Messianic Kingdom. He declared that as the gross darkness flees before the dawning light of the New Dispensation we see more clearly where our mistake was. Bible students the world over are studying afresh the Word of God in its own light. Now they perceive that the resurrection hope is based upon the fact that Christ died for all.

Bible students now see that the world's blessing will be a resurrection to human perfection—a lifting up, not only from the sleep of the tomb, but also from all the weaknesses and imperfections of the flesh, back to the full image of perfection lost in Eden, redeemed at Calvary. Thus our great Redeemer will make all things new.

HUDSON Six-40
$1750
(f.o.b. Detroit)

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country

See This Innovation

A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.

They were sold on these startling facts:

That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.

That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.

That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.

That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.

Think What This Means

Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.

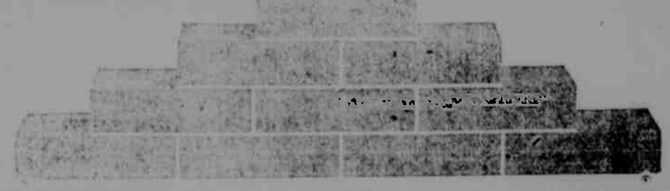
Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far underselis any Four in its class.

You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.

A Distinguished Car

In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.

Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.



Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.

And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.

Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN!

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY JASON KEP

In the United States there are 1,352,000 farm families whose annual income is less than $400; 3,422,000 city families whose income is less than $400. Almost six million families who's average income is less than $33.33 a month.

Is it any wonder there are a great many discouraged people. One would think they would have trouble enough, after using the utmost economy, but want.

There are 1,477,000 farm families whose annual income is less than $600; 2,230,000 city families whose income is less than $600, making 2,677,000 with less than $50 a month income.

The average per cent. drink bill in 1910 was $26.42, or $132.10 per family.

Subtract $132.10 from $400 leaves $168 per year or $22.34 per month to feed, clothe and pay doctor bills for a family of five.

Then the 3,677,,00 families with less than $600 less $122 drink bill leaves $468 or $39 a month.

It is surely driving these families into bankruptcy and crime.

The diversion of so much money into a single habit and its attending evils, affects the purse of the bread winner, the comforts of home, the schooling of the children, and the health and happiness.

Figures of this character can not be disputed.

You can readily see that in case the breadwinner of the 6,000,000 families whose income is less than $400 should drink, the community must by charity or tax help to support the family.

So the citizen who says "I don't drink; it don't affect me; if others want to make a fool of themselves let them do it, this is a free country," is talking through his hat. It does affect him.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" Cain thought not. Well, you remember his finish. Mr. Citizen, you are your brother's keeper, and what affects your brother affects you.

Now help those 9,451,000 families and help yourself by helping to banish the saloons and speak-easies from your community, your state and the United States. Help to remove the temptation and influence to drink from before the face of the people. Of course some will drink any way, but many will not and it will prevent thousands of boys from starting. Have you any boys?

The prohibitory law against murder has not stopped murder, but the penalty certainly helped to curtail it. You will admit that there would be more murders if the government were to grant license to good, honest murderers, even if the law did say they must not murder before 9 o'clock a. m., or after 11 p. m., and on Sundays and election days. There is nothing to it.

Mr. Business Man, are you blind? Don't you realize that you are drifting over a powder mine, and it will blow up some day if something is not done to relieve the situation?

For goodness sake forget the mighty dollar for a few minutes; you have it too close to the eye and it shuts off the the prospective. Take a few minutes off and think a real honest-to-goodness think.

That $132 a year out of a $400 income of a family means the difference between living and starving. Now who in blazes wouldn't steal, rob or riot if he were starving or his family were starving. Wouldn't you?

Mr. Business Man, you have a great weight in the community; you are the moulder of public opinion; you are the leader. It is your duty to come out boldly and help the people to remove the cause of their undoing. You will thereby gain respect and honor upon earth, also a decrease in taxes, and maybe, or perhaps get a little nearer to that halo which isn't moth-eaten.

Please get busy; we need you; you need yourself.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Seventh Day Adventism.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It is generally supposed that the main difference between this sect and Christians in general, is that they keep the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath, while others keep the first day. This is not the only difference by any means.

They teach many things that are subversive of Christianity.

What is the believer's relation to God in this dispensation? Is it law or grace? Paul in Rom. 6 : 14 says we are under grace.

They say the law has not been changed. That is true. They claim that there is no Scriptural authority for saying that the Sabbath has been changed from the seventh to the first day of the week. Let us admit this. Note, however, that when the Sabbath is mentioned in the New Testament it refers to the seventh day and not to the first. They therefore claim that the Christian in Apostolic days, observed the seventh day as the Sabbath. That we will admit. There isn't a single instance given of a Christian assembly meeting on the seventh day to worship or to break bread; nor is there an intimation of their observing the seventh day as a Christian institution. They quote Paul in Acts 17 : 2. But that was a Jewish assembly and Paul went there and then because he could meet the Jews and reason with them. There is no thought either in Chap, 17 or 18 about Christian Sabbath keeping in any of these passages. Paul went there to reach the Jews with the Gospel on the seventh day because that was their regular assembling day. In every case in the Acts when preaching on the Sabbath is spoken of it is a Jewish meeting on the Sabbath day, and at the river side because they had no synagogue. There is not a single instance in the Acts of a Christian assembly convened on the Sabbath day.

What does the New Testament teach as to the observance of the first day of the week? It certainly is marked in a very special way. Of course there is no legal character attached to it such as characterized the Sabbath. Its observance has the character of privilege rather than legal command, which is a feature that generally characterizes Christianity. You will notice first that it is the day on which Jesus rose from the dead as the Head and Beginning of the new creation. The first creation was ruined by sin, and Christ began the new creation. Christ, through His death, accomplished eternal redemption. Christ risen from the dead becomes the Head of a new creation. II Cor. 5 : 17. This shows that the rasurrection of Christ is the beginning of a new era. The old creation with which the Sabbath was connected was judicially ended there. A new era dawned in Christ's resurrection. A new creation sprang into being by the power of God. The first day of the week celebrated the completion of this great work of God. In keeping with this we find in John 20 that Christ presented Himself to the disciples on the first day of the week, conveying to them the peace He had made through the blood of His cross. Eight days later, on the next first day, He appeared again to His disciples. This shows the striking manner in which the first day of the week is marked in connection with the bringing in of the new creation.

The first day of the week is marked most strikingly by the descent of the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost. This feast began on the first day of the week, or the morrow after the Sabbath. Lev. 23 : 16, 17. This brought in the full character and power of Christianity. The presence of the Holy Spirit in and with his saints gives them their character as Christians. He came on the first day of the week and thus the first day was the inauguration of Christianity in its fullness and power.

It was on the first day of the week that the disciples assembled to break bread. Acts 20 : 7. This was their habitual custom. In 1 Cor, 16 : 1, 2, the first day is again marked by an order from the Apostle to the assemblies at Galatia and at Corinth, concerning the collection for the saints. It is very significant, to say the least, that the first day of the week was set apart as the day on which these offerings were to be made.

In Rev. 1 : 10 the first day of the week is called "the Lord's day." Of course this is denied by the Seventh Day Adventists, who claim it was the Sabbath, or seventh day. If he had meant the Sabbath, who can doubt that he would have said, "I was in the Spirit on the Sabbath," for everywhere else in Scripture the seventh day is called the Sabbath. Here it is the first day that is called the Lord's day.

Only one other place in the New Testament is the word's used and that is I Cor. 11 : 20, "The Lord's Supper." This supper belonged to the Lord and it was observed on the first day of the week. Both the supper and the day are marked as specially belonging to and connected with the authority of the Lord Jesus, whose claims were established in His triumphant resurrection. The Sabbath is always in Scripture the seventh day of the week, while "the Lord's day" is the first, and marked by the resurrection of Christ, the descent of the Holy Spirit and by the saints assembling on that day to break bread in remembrance of the Master.

It is the happy privilege of Christians on that day to rest from their secular employments and to be free to remember their once crucified but now risen and exalted Lord, and to serve Him in spiritual things.

The Sabbath and the Lord's day are never confounded. They are kept distinct and if Christians had recognized this distinction calling the first day of the week the Lord's day instead of the Sabbath it would have saved a lot of confusion in the minds of the great mass of Christians. There are, however, other things than the keeping of the first or seventh day of the week involved in this question. It raises the question of the Christian's relationship to the law. The aim is to bring Christians under the law as men in the flesh and thus rob them of the holy liberty into which grace has brought them. In short, the aim is to destroy the very fabric of Christianity and substitute for it the lifeless form of Judaism, which can only thrust the soul into darkness and rob it of all divine certainty as to either life or salvation.

I shall reserve till another time the positive errors of this cult.

Yours truly,

FIRST DAY.

"BEHOLD, I MAKE ALL THINGS NEW"

Fallen Race of Adam to Be Made New by Christ.

Man's Original Perfection—The Reign of Sin and Death—A Sad Spectacle. Thousands of Millions Dead—Hundreds of Millions Dying Weak In Body, Weak Mentally, Morally, Physically—Human Power Has Failed to Arrest the Malady—Man's Only Hope Is In God—Messiah God's Appointed Agent—To Redeem, to Regenerate, to Make New—Soon He Will Deliver the Whole Creation—Nothing Shall Hinder—Blessings Will Be Outpoured.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—Pastor Russell preached today in the Temple. His text was, "Behold, I make all things new."—Revelation 21:5.

The Pastor showed that the Bible intimates that the seven days of the week are typical of seven great Days, each a thousand years long. At the beginning of man's Week he was perfect, as represented in Adam; but disobedience to his Creator brought upon him the curse, "Dying, thou shalt die." Under that curse our race has gone down steadily to the tomb—the Bible Hell—Sheol, Hades.

Next the Pastor showed how ineffectually man has struggled against this curse of death. Today, he said, our race is assailed by more ailments, mental, moral and physical than ever before known. Our jails, penitentiaries, asylums, hospitals, all bear testimony to this fact, he claimed. Even the morals of the world he believes to be apparently at as low a state as could well be imagined, after all our preaching, and manufacture of hobgoblins, devils and hells to frighten humanity into church, religion and morality.

Then the Pastor asked whether it is not time to acknowledge our failure and to cry to God for help ere we perish as a race. Not only have we not converted the heathen world, but we find the civilized world retrograding. Statistics show that crimes increase amongst the heathen despite the preaching of eternal torture.

Man's Extremity Is God's Opportunity.

The Pastor next outlined God's great Plan of Salvation through the Redeemer, who died, "the Just for the unjust," to open the way for man's return to God's favor. During the Gospel Age the Savior has been gathering out an elect Church to be His associates in a coming Kingdom, in which He with His Church will reign for a thousand years. During that period Satan will be bound, to deceive the people no more; and the Redeemer will put down sin in its every form.

The Savior's work at the First Advent—healing the sick and the blind, casting out demons and awakening the sleeping dead—the Pastor showed was a foreshadow merely of the greater work which Jesus and His glorified Church will accomplish during the great antitypical Sabbath. These, as the antitypical Seed of Abraham, will fulfil God's Promise to Abraham.

Christendom's Great Mistake.

The Pastor believes that the creeds of the Dark Ages are gross misrepresentations of God's character. Many have taken these misrepresentations too literally. As a result, some have gone to insane asylums; others have turned to pleasure and sin in their endeavor to forget God; and still others have been made unhappy as they thought of kind, good neighbors and friends who made no profession of Christianity.

The speaker then showed that Christendom's great mistake was that of disregarding God's Word and believing Satan's lie, as the heathen do. God declared that the wages of sin would be death—absence of life. Satan contradicted this and falsified to Mother Eve, assuring her that there would be no death penalty. When death came, Satan and his fallen angels perpetuated the lie by telling us that when our friends appear to die they really become more alive than ever. In accepting their testimony we have done what St. Paul cautioned against.

Evil spirits, he claimed, have seduced Christendom by giving feigned communications between the dead and the living. As Satan and his demon host have full knowledge of human affairs, they can easily personate the dead, and through mediums, witches, planchettes, visions and dreams, represent the dead as still alive.

The Pastor then drew a picture of the coming Messianic Kingdom. TO TEAMSTERS AND FARMERS!

If you are in need of a good Oscilating Bob Sled made of good White Oak Wood, don't forget to call and see James W. Walters' Sleds. Every piece hand made. Complete with brakes. Remember the solid white oak sled will outlast a sled made of beech or maple two to one. That is the kind most factory sleds are made of.

¶ Call and see for yourself—if you do it is sure to be a deal.

Yours very truly,

HUDSON Six-40
$1750
f.o.b. Detroit

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country

See This Innovation

A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.

They were sold on these startling facts:

That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.

That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.

That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.

That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.

Think What This Means

Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.

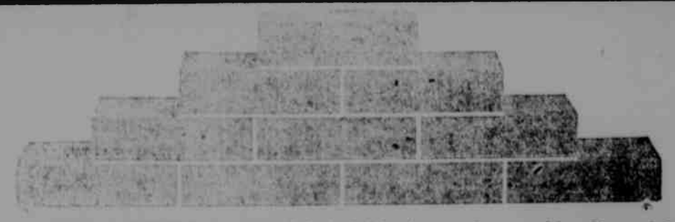
Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far underselis any Four in its class.

You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.

A Distinguished Car

In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.

Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.



Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.

And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.

Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

LAWTON'S GARAGE
OAKLAND, MARYLAND.

W. H. KAHL & SONS have started their brick plant and are making Pressed Brick and Building Blocks of the highest grade at the lowest price. We can guarantee them for all purposes that they can be used, such as Brick Buildings or brick and blocks combined. Ornamental Brick can be seen at their plant. We can color them to suit as desired at a small additional cost. We have a nice pile of them now on hand, selling price $12.00 per M.

¶ Never be afraid to buy a pressed cement brick or block that comes of the home press.

1st.	Are superior to tamped brick.	11th.	Perfectly uniform.
2nd.	Are equal to pressed clay brick.	12th.	Specified by architects.
3rd.	Compete with pressed clay brick in price.	13th.	Uniformly dense.
4th.	Better than common clay brick.	14th.	Clean, sharp corners on edges.

Be Sure You Get These Two Points:

¶ FIRST.—A building must have 25? 12 foot stories to secure enough weight to cause these brick to crush under their own weight.

¶ SECOND.—This is the practical way in which any competent architect would figure the load these brick will carry. He would allow a factor of safety of four; consequently he would specify these brick for a building SIXTY-THREE (63) Stories high. Do they build that high in your locality?

COTTAGE AND CONTENTS DESTROYED BY FIRE

At Monntain Lake Park Monday Evening Last.

The small cottage immediately west of the Briarbend Seminary and belonging to the estate of the late Miss Swan, was totally destroyed by fire about 5:30 p. m. Monday, together with the contents. The cottage was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Bryson Gibson, who were seated at the supper table on the first floor when they heard a crackling sound overhead. Mr. Gibson went to the stairway and found that the entire upper story was a mass of flame. He ran out to procure a ladder and when he returned the fire had communicated to the first floor and they were unable to to save any of their household goods except a sewing machine and a few chairs. The cottage was constructed of pine and burned so rapidly that in thirty minutes after the fire was discovered there was nothing left of cottage and contents but ashes.

The loss falls heavily upon Mr. and Mrs. Gibson, who, besides losing their household goods, lost all their wearing apparel save what they had on.

Quite a large crowd assembled but could do nothing but save the surrounding property. The flames communicated to the roof of Briarbend Seminary but the fire was extinguished with but little damage to the building.

There was no insurance either on building or furuiture.

Not a B. & O. Passenger Killed In Six Years.

That the safety first movement among the railroads is bearing fruit is indicated by the fact that in six years the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company has not had a fatal accident to a passenger charged to its account. And in that period 128,119,933 passengers have been handled.

The above facts were set forth by the company at the International Safety and Sanitation Exposition recently held in New York. In recognition of what the company has done to prevent accidents and along educational lines a grand prize was awarded the B. & O. at the exposition.

The last great accident on the Baltimore and Ohio attended with loss of life occurred at Laurel Run, near Dawson, when 65 persons were killed. That was 10 years ago.

THE DEATH RECORD

PETER WELCH.

Peter Welch, the oldest resident of Allegany county, died at Barton Sunday afternoon February 1st, at 4:30 of complications due to old age. He was a few weeks more than 102 years of age. He was born at Castle Bar, County Mayo, Ireland, 1812. He came to this country 82 years ago and resided in Bloomington, Md., for a number of years, later he moved to Barton where he kept the Barton Hotel for about thirty years. Sixty eight years ago he married in Frostburg and is survived by his aged widow, Mrs. Ellen Welch and a number of children.

REV. DANA W. M. FEATHER.

The body of Rev. Dana W. M. Feather, who died in a Baltimore hospital was taken to his home at Albright, W. Va., for burial. He had been in charge of the Brandonville, (W. Va.) circuit of the Methodist Episcopal church for three years. Death followed an operation for acute appendicitis. He was 25 years old and is survived by his wife and one child.

MRS. ELIZABETH KIRBY.

At Hutton, this county, on Saturday morning, Feb. 7, Mrs. Elizabeth Kirby, in her eighty-first year.

She was the wife of N. W. Kirby, of Indianapolis, Ind., who died about eighteen years ago and is survived by her sisters, Mrs. Margaret Connell, of Oakland; Miss Helen Craig, of Hutton; Mrs. R. McKay, of Bremerton, Wash.; Mrs. Jackson Snider, Fairmont, W. Va., and a married sister in Nova Scotia, and her brother, Jas. R. Craig, of Hutton.

She was born near Glasgow, Scotland, and moved with her parents to Hutton in 1855. She lived in Indianapolis, Ind., for a number of years and returned to Hutton after the death of her husband.

She was a sufferer from rheumatism for many years and her Christian patience and gentleness was an inspiration to all who knew her. She was a life long Presbyterian. Her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. J. C. Ely, from the residence of Miss Elien Connell, Oakland, Tuesday. Interment in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

MEASORE AIMED AT THE LOCAL MARRYING PARSONS

A Proposition To Put An End To A Custom That Is Degrading.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 11.

An alleged ministerial combination in restraint of trade, that does not come under the provision of the Sherman law, is responsible for a Macedonian wail thas has reached the Legislature from far-away Garrett county.

It is in the shape of a bill introduced by Delegate Harvey. The measure prohibits any minister of the Gospel, or any other person who is now or may hereafter be authorized to perform the marriage ceremony from giving, directly or indirectly, any fee or reward to any hotel porter or other person who may direct or bring him couples wishing to be married.

Recently Oakland has become a popular Gretna Green for couples seeking wedded bliss in a manner less formal and conventional than usual. They come from the other counties of Maryland, from Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The half a dozen or so ministers of the town reaped in consequence a considerable harvest of fees.

Delegate Harvey's bill providing for the Garrett county school fund, was read a third time and passed yesterday.

Local temperance legislation for Garrett continues to be the absorbing topic among the legislators of that county. The scene of action for such legislation has been transferred to the House, however, where some lively doings are scheduled for the last part of the week. The House Temperance Committee now has three Garrett bills. Senator Speicher is the author of two of them, one providing for a countywide local option law and the other forbiding the manufacture or sale of liquor within a two mile limit of any schoolhouse or church outside the corporate limits of any town in Garrett. The third bill, the Shartzer measure, is a duplicate of the second Speicher bill. The Senator's measures both passed the Senate with little trouble. The local option bill was carried unanimously. Senator Benson of Baltimore county threatened trouble on the two mile limit bill because he objected to its provisions applying to a distillery within the county. Speicher had already lined up a majority for the bill and the latter was passed with only four dissenting votes.

The situation in the House is radically different from that in the Senate, however. In the House opponents of temperance legislation are strong and much skillful maneuvering and not a little fighting will be necessary if the bills are to come on the floor with favorable reports. Even then their fate will be problematical.

One of the Miller "boys" from the M. J. Miller distillery, of Accident, is here actively directing the fight against the anti-liquor bills. He has made a host of friends and insists that if he is defeated it will be only after a hard fight. The temperance folks also have some quiet lobbying going on but it cannot be determined just what effect this has had. Mr. Miller is pointing out to his friends among the legislators that the two mile limit bill is a personal drive at him and that its provisions are not aimed to injure any other business in the county. A hearing on the bills before the Temperance Committee will probably be held during this week and both sides have promised to make the fur fly.

The Anti-Saloon folks have not shown an untoward desire to help push along the Garrett temperance bills and it is feared that the League's manageas are too interested in their own measure to look out for local county legislation. The Anti-Saloon proposed Constitutional amendment creating a statewide prohibition will be introduced in the Senate this week. The League people are keeping quiet the name of the man who will father the bill but it is generally understood that he is one of the Eastern Shore Senators.

Senator Speicher is going into the limelight in other than temperance legislation this vear. He is the minority member of the Senate Elections committee and as such has been called upon to pass on the merits of the Ashburn-Harrison senatorial contest. The Elections Committee has had the case before it for several weeks but the majority members have been unable to agree on any report which would insure the Democrats standing together behind the recommendation in a fight on the floor. Speicher has let it be known that he will stick with Quince Ashburn, who was returned elected, and if the committee should decide adversely to the present holder of the seat the Garrett countian will be of the minority who will also file a report. Report has it that Senator Benson of Baltimore county and Maloy of Baltimore city, will stand with Speicher in favor of Ashburn. Senator John Walter Smith has thrown his whole energy into the fight to put Harrison over but he has used his influence, it is reported, to hold back a committee report because of his inability to secure a sufficient number of Democratic votes to sustain the majority.

Speicher will doubtless be backed on the floor by all of his Republican colleagues, eight in number, and only four additional votes from the Democrats are necessary to hold Ashburn in his seat. Ashburn will not be able to vote on the commitiee report, therefore 13 votes will block action of any sort. As Ashburn now holds the seat he will continue as Senator until the deadlock is broken.

The Republicans in both houses have become the objects of solicitous attention upon the part of Democratic leaders since minority Floor Leader of the Senate Zihlman issued his announcement that he would support the mass vote plan for nomination of United States Senators. It is rumored that others of the minority in the Senate will stand as a unit with Zihlman in his cry of fair play to the voters of the whole State. Nine Republican votes would make a formidable column of support for the mass vote combined with the strength of the four Baltimore city Senators and Senator Hammond of Howard, a close ally of former Senator Gorman.

Friends of the unit system have about given up hope of breaking the mass vote combination in the Senate and they will devote their attention to the Republicans in the House, who number 22. The Governor's position on the mass vote plan has not been made known by the executive but it is said that he will not bitterly oppose support of the system if the Republican legislators should elect to back the bill.

The Democrats have at last begun their fight to strip Governor Goldsborough of patronage. The first move was made on Tuesday in the form of a bill creating a new State Board of Education to be composed of five members, three of whom are named in the bill and who are Democrats. They are S. K. White of Wicomico, Dr. Josias S Bown of Baltimore county, and Clayton Purnell of Allegany. This trip with the Governor and the State Superintendent of Education are to compose the new board. The State Superintendent is to be elected by the other four members of the board. Mr. White is to serve two years, Dr. Bown four years and Mr. Purnell six years. At the expiration of the term of each the next Governor is to appoint his successor. If any of the board resigns or their places become vacant from any cause during the Goldsborough administration such vacancies are to be filled by the other members of the board. The latter will also elect the county school boards, which shall contain an equal number of Republicans and Democrats, but the State Superintendent, who will be a Democrat, will in the event of this cast the deciding vote in all matters of chosing county superintendents.

The Democratic state platform committee is behind this bill and the majority party leaders will call on all Democratic members to pass the measure over the executive veto. The Baltimore city bills to make the Liquor License and Police Boards municipal appointments have also been introduced but are not to become operative until October of 1915.

The only local measure of interest offered this week was the Shartzer measure to give state aid to people of Kitzmiller and Friendsville to protect against overflows of the Potomac river.

EAGLE ROCK.

As there have been no items in the paper from this place we thought a few would be accepted.

About fifty people attended the spelling bee at this place last Friday night, and all took an active part in the spelling. They surely deserve credit for it.

Miss Alta Paugh was shopping in Kitzmiller Thursday last.

Mr. John Upole was calling on friends near Short Run Saturday last.

Last Friday while some men were out hunting foxes, some dogs chased one to the home of Mr. George Tasker. His wife, who was Miss Grace Heinhin, ran out and seeing it, picked up a wash tub and running turned it over the fox and held him there until some of the men came and killed it. We all think the women are getting far ahead of the men.

Mrs. Tom Sollars is improving slowly, and we hope to see her among us again.

Messrs. Riley and Charlie Paugh were visiting in Blaine Saturday last.

Mr. George Tasker was visiting Geo. Moon's one day last week.

The school at this place is progressing nicely under the able managment of Miss Myrtle Wilson.

Mr. Robert Paugh and Misses Ivy Friend, Amy, Stella, and Ina Paugh were calling at Mr. Perry Paugh's Sunday last.

Dr. B. Frank Selby returned to his home in Oakland yesterday morning from Westminster, Md., to which point he had been called on Sunday to attend the funeral of an aunt.

Last night Dr. Henry W. McComas accompanied Mr. and Mrs. H. Lauer and their infant daughter, Mr. George Shartzer, Mr. Albert Ashby, Mr. Frank Smouse, of Deer Park, and Mr. D. E. Bolden, of Oakland, to Baltimore where they will become patients in Johns Hopkins Hospital for various ailments

ROBBERY AT DEER PARK

Safe in Store of J. S. Clary Blown with Nitro Glycerine Tuesday Night

Tuesday night or early yesterday morning the general store of J. S. Clary at Deer Park, was entered by burglars through a rear window of the wareroom, from which entrance to the store room was effected by forcing a lock on the connecting door.

Nothing in the store room showed evidence of having been disturbed except the safe, which was blown by a charge of nitro glycerine. The explosive wrenched the door from its hinges, the force being so great as to extinguish the flame in a gas stove left burning by the proprietor. Nothing was secured from the safe, however, the only loss being the damage sustained to the fixtures.

Oakland High School Notes.

The school was honored by a visit from Dr. Howell on Thursday last, while with us he delivered a most interesting lecture on bacteriology, paying particular attention to tuberculosis. What he said may be divided as follows: 1, Plants; 2, Germs; 3, infection; 4, cure.

Dr. Howell's lecture was thoroughly practical, and was enjoyed by all who heard it. Both faculty and pupils will begian to have him visit the school again.

The basket ball team went to Kingwood on Saturday to play the high school team there. The latter won, the score being 37-12. The team at Kingwood is in good practice, while ours is not. If our team would get down to hard work it would have no difficulty in winning a number of games. Kingwood will play the Oakland school a return game on Friday Feb. 13, at the Empire theatre.

The school is striving to make February a banner month for attendance. Let every student try to be at school every day, and the desired result will be achieved.

The graduating class has received class pins. They are made of solid gold, are circular in shape, and are enameled in green and cream, the class colors. The lettering on them is beautifully done.

Stella Sturm, a former student, has returned to school.

Mildred Thrasher was absent from school several days last week on account of sickness.

The basket ball team went to Mt. Lake Park Tuesday evening to play the team at that place.

The school will celebrate Lincoln's and Washington's birthdays on February 23d. Mr. Thayer will be the speaker of the morning, his subject being Lincoln, and Mr. Harned will address the school in the afternoon, Washington being his subject. The day promises to be one of pleasure and profit.

FOUR INJURED ON THE B. & O. AT DEER PARK

Freight Train Sidewipes Big Mallet Engine Sunday Morning.

Four men were injured shortly before noon Sunday at the tower at Deer Park, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad when extra westbound freight, engine 4247, sidewiped a Mallet helper engine, 2426, crossing over from the eastbound to the westbound track. The injured are:

Arthur Clark, engineer, Cumberland, badly scalded, right arm broken and injured about the back and hip. Condition serious.

T. H. Carney, brakeman, Hutton, Md., face and legs scalded. Condition serious.

T. A. Haines, fireman, Cumberland, cut and brhised.

B. J. Sheridan, brakeman, Cumberland, cut and bruised.

Immediately after the wreck all the injured men were brought to Oakland where their injuries were dressed by Dr. McComas. Later in the day Clark and Haines were transferred to Cumberland, where they became patients in the Allegany hospital, while Carney, whose condition was such as to prevent his removal, was sent to the local hospital in Oakland where he is doing nicely.

Sheridan's injuries are not serious.

Clark and Carney were caught under the debris and both were buried in the snow and mud. This probably saved them from being fatally scalded outright. It is said only Clark's arm stuck out from the mass under which he was held.

All tracks were blocked until late in the evening. Passengers of trains Nos. 55 and 16 were transferred, the former returning as No. 16 and the latter going west as No. 55. It was first intended to send 55 via Connellsville, but this plan was abandoned.

The freight engine was turned over completely while the helper was derailed and four or five cars were mashed up. The freight train was composed of sixteen loads of mixed commodities and two empties and the accident is said to have been caused by the freight going by the signal.

What It Means.

The fact that one mail order firm in Chicago, one only of many in the country, sold $93,000,000 worth of goods in 1913, indicates the inroads these houses are making among local merchants. This is an average of $1.00 for each inhabitant. In a town like Danvers it means the taking of $10,000 out of the local money circulation. It shows also what continuous advertising will do. If the other mail order firms are doing a like business, the country merchants had better get a hustle on before it is too late.—Tri-Town Weekly Press.

Dr. Henry McComas was advised by telegraph yesterday that his second son, Mr. Joseph McComas, had suffered an attack of appendicitis and was sent from his school near Washington to Baltimore to submit to an operation.

THE CASE AGAINST DR. STRACHN DISMISSED.

Exonerated at a Hearing For Giving a Young Woman Morphine.

Dr. Hugh Strachn, who was arrested by Deputy Sheriff DeWitt on the 23rd day of January last, upon the complaint of Anna Barbers, a young woman of Kitzmiller, for giving her an overdose of morphine in a glass of beer was completely exonerated on Monday last when his preliminary hearing came up before Justice Robert Fries of Oakland. All the evidence introduced proved beyond a doubt that the Doctor was not guilty of the offense, and much testimony was introduced upon the part of Dr. Strachn showing that the whole motive of the false charge was based on the belief that this woman, together with others in the plot, aimed to extort money upon the threat of being arrested. There was absolutely no testimony of any character in the case showing that the doctor was guilty of the charge brought against him, hence the action of the Justice in dismissing the case.

Big Tie Up on Grade.

The Baltimore and Ohio tracks on the Seventeen Mile Grade one mile west of Bloomington were tied up all night Friday until late Saturday, caused by the derailment of eleven loaded coal cars in an east bound freight. The accident occurred Friday afternoon about four o'clock and was caused by a bursted wheel. It was at such a disadvantageous point that nearly a day was consumed in restoring traffic. After this wreck was cleared another freight wreck in which several cars were derailed occurred at almost identically the same point.

Concerning Rev. E. Manges.

The current issue of the Young Lutheran, the official pulbication ot the West Virginia Synod of that church, says, concerning the Rev. E. Manges, of Oakland, who is soon to move from here and retire from the ministry:

Of course we knew that Brother Manges has resigned and all that, but as long as he was still on the field it did not seem as if we were really going to lose him. Now that he has set a date for going to another home, we realize that he will soon have finished his West Virginia work. That the congregation at Oakland will secure his worthy successor we will take for granted, and we trust it will not be long. We want Brother Manges to feel however, that the day he goes from our midst will be a sad one for very many. Would that we might keep him as an "Emeritus." I am very sure the Young Lutheran speaks for very many when we say, God bless and keep you and yours, Brother Manges, and do not forget us who stay and our work which has for so long been your work.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

For the Insane.

A third insane hospital loan is proposed by Senator Campbell, who introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $600,000, the money to be distributed as follows:

$140,000 for additional buildings at the Springfield Hospital at Sykesville.

$120,000 for additional buildings at Spring Grove at Catonsville.

$140,000 for additional buildings at the Crownsville State Hospital.

$130,000 for additional buildings at the Eastern Shore Hospital at Cambridge.

$70,000 for additional buildings at the Rosewood State Training School at Owings Mills. A half cent is to be added to the tax rate to meet the fixed charges and to provide for the sinking fund.

Harford County Game Laws.

Senator Archer proposes to amend the game law for Harford county so as to include among the birds it is now unlawful to kill all others except English sparrows, partridges, quail and woodcock. It is also forbidden to shoot or catch rabbits, partridges, quail, woodcock or squirrel between December 10 and November 10, or when the ground is sufficiently covered with snow to track rabbits or birds. The shooting of raccoons is prohibited from December 1 to October 1. All the fines imposed for violation are to be paid in full to the informers except when the arrest is made by the chief game warden.

Insurance Investments.

In the House Mr. Wilkinson, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, introduced a bill requiring that each life insurance company organized under the laws of other States or the United States and doing business in Maryland, now or hereafter, shall invest and keep invested in Maryland securities or in Maryland real estate a sum of money equal at least to 75 per cent. of the aggregate of the legal reserve required by the State of its domicile, to be maintained on account of its policies of insurance in force written upon the lives of citizens of this State.

For Mass Vote Primaries.

Senator Maloy, of Baltimore, introduced another bill regulating the manner of nominating and electing United States Senators.

It provides for nomination on the State-wide or mass vote plan in primaries, and gives the Governor power to appoint Senators to fill vacancies, the appointees to serve until the next election for Congressmen, when a new Senator is to be chosen. Provisions of the Corrupt Practices act are extended to the primaries for United States Senators.

Offer New Referendum Bill.

Delegate Addison, of Prince George's, introduced another initiative and referendum bill. It is similar in nearly every respect to the measure introduced in the Senate by Senator Ogden, of Baltimore.

Mr. Addison's bill is virtually the same as the Wisconsin law, which is claimed by many students of the subject to be about the last word on initiative and referendum legislation. It lets in the liquor question, which is shut out by the Ogden measure.

To Inspect Hogs and Horses.

Legislation providing strict health regulations and inspections for swine used for breeding purposes and for all horses brought to Maryland from other States is being prepared by members of the State Live Stock Sanitary Board. The latter are working in close conjunction with Senator W. Oscar Collier, who will probably introduce the bills.

Boys May Hunt As Usual.

The law will not interfere with boys under 18 years of age who would a-hunting go. The House Judiciary Committee reported unfavorably Mr. Shortzer's bill prohibiting boys under 18 years from carrying arms and airguns. The reported was adopted.

Bars Heavy Weights On Curtains.

Mr. Reviol, of the city delegation, introduced a bill to prohibit the use of 400-pound weights for raising and lowering curtains in theaters. Mr. Reviol says that in several cities serious accidents have been caused by the fall of these weights.

Wants $10,000 For Drawbridge.

Carrying an appropriation of $10,000, a bill to erect a drawbridge connecting St. Georges Island with the mainland was introduced in the Senate by Senator Chesley, of St. Marys.

To Stop Ball Playing On Sunday.

Mr. Sheritzer introduced in the House a bill to prohibit baseball games on Sundays in Garrett county.

After living in fear of arrest on the charge of robbing the money drawer of a store at Sharptown six years ago, a colored youth, who is now living in Philadelphia, returned this week and handed the firm $40 in cash, the amount he claimed he stole, with interest. He will not be prosecuted.

The 130-acre limestone farm of William H. Hykes, near Paramount, was sold to William Strock for $16,120.

The industry of canning crayfish, known in the market as Cape Spiny lobster, which began in the vicinity of Cape Town a few years since in a small way, has gradually grown in importance until the output for the season just closed aggregated nearly 50,000 cases.

More than nine hundred nurses are employed in the Moscow Hospital, the largest in Europe.

READY TO MAKE THE NEW MONEY

A Complete Set Needed Under the New Currency Law.

THE DESIGNS ALL PREPARED

Three Characters Contemplated To Meet the Requirements Of the Various Issues Provided By the Law.

Washington, D. C.—The system provided by the new currency law will require a new issue of paper currency, and the artists of the Bureau of Printing and Engraving, where the paper money is made, are already at work preparing designs. No official approval has yet been given to the designs, but the artistic merit of those already submitted has been applauded by officials of the Treasury Department. It will probably be a year before the new money will be required for circulation, and this will give ample time to the engravers to produce the best workmanship possible, if the designs are early passed upon. It is probable that the designs submitted will await the return of Secretary McAdoo for his official sanction.

The designs contemplate three characters of paper currency—the Federal reserve note which is to displace the emergency currency, the issue of which was extended a year by the new currency law; the Federal bank note, for issue as the circulation currency of the reserve banks, as the national bank note is now the circulation medium of national banks, and national bank notes to replace the circulation of national banks that do not cancel their present circulation and that take advantage of all or part of the 20-year period for the retirement of all national circulation.

The notes are to be made in value of $5, $10, $20, $50 and upward. The three characters of paper currency are to be similar in all respects, except that each will be distinguished for the character of currency that it is by the engraved words, Federal reserve currency, Federal bank currency or national bank currency and other necessary descriptive matter of similar character.

The size of the notes will follow the present standard, although it is most probable that a later issue will conform to the size proposed in an issue of paper currency by the last administration directed, and never put into circulation, and held up by this administration.

The faces of the five-dollar notes, as designed, bear the portrait of President Abraham Lincoln in miniature on the right-hand side of the note. The denomination is expressed in a large Arabic numeral, one at each of the four corners. There is a delicate and beautiful border around the edge of the note, leaving a wide expanse of white in the center. The back of this note bears designs illustrative of agriculture. At one end of the note is a scene depicting agricultural pursuits. At the opposite end is an allegorical group devoted to the same theme. There is again considerable expanse of white center.

Cleveland is to be the portrait for the ten-dollar note. Manufacturing is the theme for the back of the note, with a scene of a busy factory, and allegorical figures, following the same treatment, given the back of the five-dollar note. Commerce is to be the theme of the twenty-dollar note, and Jefferson the portrait. Grant's portrait is to adorn the fifty-dollar note, Graver's theme for the back.

With arts and sciences as the en-

The backs of the five and ten-dollar notes, and the face of the five-dollar note have already been drawn, and the drawings submitted for approval. Bureau draftsmen are now working on the designs for the other denominations.

THIS CELLULOID COLLAR FATAL.

Catches Fire and Kills Wearer While At Work.

Hanover, N. H.—A burning celluloid collar caused the death of William E. Stone, a painter, while at work in his shop. His clothes caught fire. Rolling himself quickly in a snow bank outside the door, he thought he had extinguished the flames, when a smoldering spark caught his celluloid collar. In a quick flash which followed Stone inhaled the flames.

WOMAN GUILTY OF MURDER.

Mrs. Ross, Husband Slayer, To Serve Ten Years.

Fulton, Mo.—Mrs. Susan Ross was found guilty for the second time of the murder of her husband, J. Haywood Ross, and was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. She was convicted of murder in the second degree. The sentence in the first trial was the same. Ross was found murdered in bed.

ADAMS KILLED AT CARD TABLE.

West Virginian Fires Fatal Shot At His Companion.

Williamson, W. Va.—Daniel Adams was shot dead by William Ackerman, whom he had mortally wounded in a quarrel at Matawan, near here. The men had been playing cards.

WOMAN SHOT THROUGH WINDOW

Unknown Assailant Kills Her At Breakfast Table.

Rhea Springs, Tenn.—Mrs. Hub Genter was shot and killed near here by an unknown assailant, who fired a shotgun thrown a window while the woman was sitting at the breakfast table in the home of James Smith, her uncle. Smith was wounded in the arm. Officers with bloodhounds are attempting to trail the assailant. No motive for the shooting is known. Mrs. Genter was Smith's housekeeper.

THE DISGRACE OF ILLITERACY

House Committee Shows Startling Condition.

PLAN URGED TO WIPE IT OUT.

According To Report the Census Shows That In 1910 Five Per Cent. Of the Population Was Unable To Read Or Write.

Washington, D. C.—With the view to inaugurating a concerted, nation-wide movement intended to place the United States at the head of the world's nations in literacy, the House Committee on Education unanimously reported the Lever bill for an investigation of illiteracy among the adult population of the United States and means of eliminating or reducing it.

The bill has been strongly urged by Dr. Philander C. Claxton, the new commissioner of education, under whose direction the investigation would be conducted. Dr. Claxton asked the House Education Committee to act promptly on the bill, so that plans may be ready for beginning this work next fall. Besides authorizing Dr. Claxton to make such an investigation the Lever bill would authorize him to advise and co-operate with school officials, teachers and others in devising and putting into operation such plans as will give to illiterate men and women and those of meager education an opportunity to learn to read and write and to supplement and extend their education.

"With the authority provided in this bill," Dr. Claxton said, "and an appropriation from Congress for a small group of men in the Bureau of Education to plan and direct the work, or even with no appropriation from Congress, it will be possible to obtain the co-operation of the states, counties, districts and municipalities and of churches, Sunday schools, women's clubs and other organizations interested in public welfare to such an extent that within the next 10 years the percentage of illiteracy in this country may be reduced to a fraction of one per cent."

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON MAY RUN.

Thinks He Would Be Happier In Congress Than In Danville.

Washington.—"Uncle Joe" Cannon, his friends in Congress learned, may run again for Congress. The former Speaker is lonely in Danville, he says, and may conclude to be a candidate. "I am not exactly unhappy," said "Uncle Joe." "I would rather be in Danville than wearing a path in Washington pavements. But I would rather be back here in the halls where I served nearly 50 years; I would be happier here."

EVEN EUCHRE UNLAWFUL.

Police To Raid Society Functions In East Liverpool.

East Liverpool, O.—Contending that places where bridge, euchre and other card games are played for prizes come under the law as much as do poker and other gambling rooms, Mayor Peter Schreiber announced that all such forms of amusements here must cease. Mayor Schreiber declared he was in earnest and would direct the police to raid social functions where card games were being played for prizes.

THE GATEWAY AMENDMENT.

Would Make It Easier To Amend the Constitution.

Washington.—Contending that the Constitution ought to be the direct declaration of the people, rather than the declaration of a legislative body, Senator Cummins and other members of the Judiciary Committee submitted a minority report, urging adoption of the so-called gateway amendment, to make the Constitution amenable without initiative action by Congress. It has been reported advisedly by the Judiciary majority.

$20,000 TO NEWSPAPER WOMAN.

Miss Bessie Beatty Gets Money In Trust For Poor Children.

San Francisco.—To Miss Bessie Beatty, a San Francisco newspaper woman, $20,000 is bequeathed in the will of Mrs. Mannie Clementine Newsom Maddock, probated in Oakland. The money is to be used in behalf of poor children as Miss Beatty sees fit. Miss Beatty is the originator of "Happy Land," her name for a yearly summer camp in which poor children are provided with outings.

SEVEN AMERICANS ARE PRISONERS

Held by Mexican Bandits Who Wrecked Tunnel.

VILLA AFTER DESPERADOES

Twenty-Two Of the Robbers Shot Last Tuesday—Bandits Also Destroy Two Important Bridges.

Juarez, Mexico.—Seven American railroad men are believed to be prisoners; the Great Cumbre Railroad tunnel through the continental divide is in ruins, and the Mexican Northwestern passenger train which left here Wednesday morning is a charred wreck at the mouth of the tunnel as the result of the depredations of members of the Maximo Castillo gang of bandits.

This information amplifying reports from Chihuahua was received here at the headquarters of the railroad. It corrects the statement that it was the Drake tunnel, a smaller bore south of Cumbre, that was destroyed. The Cumbre tunnel is the largest on the road, 3,700 feet long.

The names of the prisoners reported here are:

M. J. Gilmartin, superintendent of the road.

H. Schofield, superintendent of terminals at Juarez.

Lee Williams, assistant manager of the railroad commissary.

E. J. McCutcheon, engineer of the passenger train.

J. E. Webster, conductor.

H. F. Marsdens, express agent.

A seventh American is believed to have been on the train and was also employed on the freight train which was used to fire the tunnel.

Gen. Francisco Villa, commander of the rebel forces, now at Chihuahua, was enraged at the news, and in a telegram which passed through here instructed Gen. Felipe Macias, operating in the Casas Grandes district, to shoot every man who could not satisfactorily account for his presence there.

The bandits are believed to be operating in two forces of about 30 men each, as Cumbre is a hard day's ride from El Valle, near Casas Grandes, where 22 of the robbers were captured and shot last Tuesday.

The other detachment, believed to be under Castillo himself, did the wrecking, probably in revenge for the fate of his men at El Valle. He captured a train of stock cars Wednesday and ran it into the tunnel, where it was set on fire.

The tunnel was ablaze that evening when the passenger train from Juarez was captured and sent headlong into the roaring tunnel furnace, which was belching flames and smoke from its mouth.

Castillo then destroyed two neighboring bridges, one of them constructed of steel, and ran two locomotives over the embankment into a deep canyon.

Aroused to a high pitch of anger by the capture of American railroad officials and trainmen by Maximo Castillo's bandits, posses are being formed in the Guerrero district to assist the rebels in running down the bandits. The posse is reported to consist of cowboys from the Hearst ranch. Railroad employes and men from the Madera Lumber Company's plant are said to be among those who have volunteered to assist in the hunt.

STRANGE DISEASE HITS TOWN.

Nearly 1,000 Residents Of Grove City, Pa., Are Ill.

Grove City, Pa.—Nearly 1,000 residents of Grove City are suffering from a strange malady which physicians are unable to name. The disease resembles winter cholera and is contagious. Many persons were stricken in church Sunday and were removed to their homes. So many men are ill that several industrial plants are crippled severely. Physicians are baffled as to the identity of the disease and its cause.

THE NEW CORPORATION BILL.

Federal Control, Publicity and No Free Stock Are Provisions.

Washington.—An act that would force all corporations doing an interstate business to incorporate under Federal laws and comply with strict Federal regulations was introduced by Senator Nelson following the decision along that line in the Banking and Currency Committee hearings as to means of safeguarding the public in the listing of securities on the stock exchange.

HANS SCHMIDT FOUND GOILTY

Murder In the First Degree the Verdict of the Jury.

PENALTY DEATH IN CHAIR.

"I Would Rather Die Tonight Than Tomorrow," He Says—Counsel Undecided About Appeal.

New York.—Hans Schmidt was found guilty of murder in the first degree for killing Anna Aumuller, a young woman he had married through a self-performed ceremony while acting as a priest at St. Joseph's Church.

The penalty for the crime is death in the electric chair at Sing Sing prison. He will be sentenced this week.

Schmidt, whose defense was insanity, laughed bitterly when the verdict was pronounced. He had steadfastly declared himself guilty and at his arraignment before being held for the Supreme Court pleaded that he be punished by death. Later he protested against the insanity defense advanced by his counsel and said he would not assist them in any way if they prepared an appeal.

"I would rather die tonight than tomorrow," he said. "It is as it should be and as I wish it."

This was the second trial and the jury was out a few minutes less than five hours. At the first trial the jury disagreed. Alienists for prosecution and defense supplied most of the testimony at both trials. Schmidt's counsel hoped that if he was not acquitted on the grounds of mental unsoundness the degree of guilt fixed by the jury would be second degree murder; for the jurors, sending out for instructions shortly after retiring, were informed by Justice Vernon M. Davis that they could if they wished pronounce a verdict less severe than death.

A. G. Koelble, of Schmidt's counsel, asserted after the verdict that owing to the former priest's persistent silence concerning the crime it had not been possible to place all the facts before the jury. He said Schmidt was not guilty of murder, but had shielded a physician after the woman's death. She was not murdered, the lawyer declared. If the police would display energy, he said, they could get at the truth. The lawyer was undecided whether he would take an appeal. "Father Schmidt will never go to the electric chair," he added.

Anna Aumuller's body was cut up with a knife in Schmidt's flat on September 2 and the pieces, in several bundles, were tossed into the Hudson river, where most of them were found before suspicion was directed against Schmidt. The head was never recovered. Schmidt in his confession to the police said he was commanded to make "a sacrifice" of the Aumuller girl's life by his patron, St. Elizabeth.

KILLS HIMSELF IN CHURCH

Former Town Treasurer Commits Suicide In the Chancel.

Providence, R. I.—On his knees in the chancel of Grace Church, John Ogden, former town treasurer of North Providence, drew a revolver and shot himself in the head. He died almost instantly. Before he approached the chancel Ogden had been sitting in a pew in the rear of the church writing in a book, which he later handed to a deaconess. In the book were found notes to his wife and to the superintendent of a mill in which he had been employed.

COMIC SONGS AT FUNERAL.

Sung By 25,000 Jews At Request Of Yiddish Actor.

New York.—Twenty-five thousand mourners from New York's Ghetto turned out for the funeral of Zigmund Mogulesko, famous among the Yiddish as an actor and comedian. The crowd which followed the funeral procession, led by the Hebrew Actors' Club, was so unwieldly that police reserves were called out to keep order. In accordance with the dead actor's wish the mourners sang in Yiddish comic songs which he had written himself and made popular among the Hebrews of the East Side.

TWO KILLED BY EXPLOSION.

Five Hurt, Three Fatally, In Kentucky Sawmill.

Urban, Ky. Frank Pennington and Robert Haver, of this city, were instantly killed; Thomas Hayer, Daniel Cox and Robert Hampton were fatally burned, while John and Lincoln Hayer were seriously injured when a boiler in a sawmill exploded here. The mill was wrecked. All of the dead and injured were employed at the mill and reside here.

Williamsport, Pa.—Miss Sarah Eckroyd, of Pennsdale, has accepted the call to the pastorate of the Christian Alliance Church at Avis. She will assume her duties at once. Miss Eckroyd is 40 years of age. She has been engaged in religious work for a number of years and has lately been in charge of a [illegible] Alliance Church at Hughesville.

COMMERCIAL

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

Dun's Review says:

"There are further evidences of reviving business activity with the expansion in industrial operations constituting one of the best features of the situation. Somewhat less complaint is now heard regarding labor conditions as the number of unemployed while apparently still large has been considerably reduced of late. This obviously enhances the purchasing power of the people and confidence in the future is gradually strengthening."

Bradstreet's says:

"Optimism continues to spread, and in some lines of industry, particularly iron and steel, actual improvement keeps encouraging pace with sentiment. Withal, there is sufficient irregularity, primarily traceable to unseasonable weather conditions, to act as a check rein on the general tendency toward betterment.

"In the forefront is the fact that trade with the larger distributors is expanding, and for so early in the season it may be deemed to be encouragingly good, while movements on the whole surpass those of this time last year. Buyers are in the leading markets, and while representatives of some lines have devoted the week mostly to inspecting displays, gradual improvements is the order of the day."

KODAK SAFETY

The WASHINGTON who never FAILED

WASHINGTON CROSSING THE DELAWARE

WASHINGTON AND HIS FAMILY

MODERATION and determination are the two dominant characteristics of which time has not robbed Washington. Of them, the first is the one which has deprived him of a great deal of the appreciation which has been lavished on less deserving characters.

What ever the vices of the man, they were always held within respectable restraint. Whatever his virtues, he never gave them undue prominence.

So it is that, after more than a century, there has come a tendency to depreciate the ability of the one man who, more than any other, would naturally be exalted. For a long time it was held that his fame was tarnished because he swore real oaths at the battle of Monmouth. That was succeeded by the present epoch, which has chosen to regard him as a lovable gentleman, with enough horse sense not to make a fool of himself and, by a series of events over which he had no control, to become the father of his country.

And yet it is doubtful if another character of the age is more to be admired for its many-sided excellencies. As a man, warrior and statesman, Washington yields to no figure of his time.

What place Washington held, in his own day, must now become a matter of interest. Shortly after his death, Felix Faulcon voiced the opinion of the French parliamentarians when he addressed the legislative assembly as follows:

"The tomb has claimed him who was the model of republican perfection. This is not the time to trace all this truly great man has accomplished for the liberties of America, the generous inspirations which he imparted to the French who were attracted to his school of arms; the sublime act which will ever add luster to his memory, when, after having exerted his talents in giving liberty to his country, he voluntarily relinquished supreme power to conceal his glory in the obscurity of private life."

Naturally, Napoleon was attracted to the great general who led an army of ragamuffins to victory, after a long campaign of almost unparalleled vicissitudes, and whose power was attested by the fact that none of his general, except Wayne, accomplished much after they left him. When the news of his death reached France, the first consul issued the following order:

"Washington is no more! That great man fought against tyranny. He firmly established the liberty of his country. His memory will ever be dear to the French people, as it must be to every friend of freedom in two worlds, and especially to the French soldiers, who, like him and the Americans, bravely fight for liberty and equality. The first consul, in consequence, orders that, for ten days, black crepe shall be suspended to all the standards and flags of the republic."

At almost the same the Gazette de France said:

"Washington is dead! The news in the time of the directory it would have been imprudent to announce. Now, the heart may with confidence abandon itself to all the generous emotions of the soul, and we may dare to weep at the tomb of a great man. A general funeral service has been ordered in America, and this will be observed by the citizens of every nation. No period has sustained a loss so irreparable as the end of the eighteenth century."

This concluding sentence may be taken as generally expressing the estimation in which the "father of his country" was then held. Since then, with that flash tendency to appreciate high sounding phrases rather than sound statesmanship, it has become the fashion rather to exalt the orators and the writers, who had secondary roles, than to accept the verdict of colonial times.

It is doubly strange, too, that in a country whose citizenship is rapidly altering, because of the large and continuous additions from foreign lands, should have no one great work, not even an essay, which vitally and vigorously presents the character of its first great general, statesman and citizen.

When reading the first president's letters, it seems strange that his correspondence should never have excited more attention or study. By comparison they are almost unknown when one considers for example how much attention and controversy has been directed of late years to lives and writings of Hamilton and Burr.

Very strange it is, indeed, that the correspondence of so commanding a character as Washington should be so little known to the ninety and more millions of people who owe their liberty and prosperity to him. And to the fact that his letters are so little read may be attributed the further fact that his fame is that of a successful general rather than of a broad, constructive genius, whose all-seeing statesmanship guided a new nation of his own making to greatness.

Also, it is probable that no man who wrote as much as he did put so little on paper that is open to criticism. Read a dozen or more volumes of his correspondence, as compiled by Sparks, and you will find not one epistle which does not bear tribute to his love of freedom, his wisdom and kindliness of heart. All of them show why he never failed in anything of consequence he undertook. Without exception, they bear witness to the thought, the careful consideration, the sound judgment of the writer.

With these qualities dominant, there is lacking, as a matter of course, the bias, the egotism, the proneness to give way to the passions, that have caused so many able men to fail.

Above all, there is an abounding love of freedom, an all-powerful desire to serve the best interests of his fellowmen, that cannot fail to touch the heart of any one who cares to read the old volumes that have been shelved in favor of so much less worthy material.

Take him, for instance, as a soldier. His earlier show that he realized fully the difficulties of the tasks ahead of him. First of all, his breadth of vision prevented his army from being divided and subdivided by the claims of the various colonies that the troops they raised should be devoted to their own defense. As he wrote to the governor of Connecticut:

"I am by no means insensible to the situation of the people on the coast. I wish I could extend protection to all, but the numerous detachments necessary to remedy the evil would amount to a dissolution of the army, or make the most important operations of the campaign depend upon the piratical operations of two or three men-of-war and transports."

Again, when he was recruiting his forces, he was dismayed by the fact that not all the people were animated by motives as high as his. To his secretary, Joseph Reed, one of the closest of his friends, he wrote:

"Such dearth of public spirit, and such want of virtue, such stock jobbing, and fertility in all the low arts to obtain advantage of one knid or another in this great change of military arrangement, I never saw before, and I pray God's mercy I may never see again. What will be the end of these manœuvers is beyond my scan. I tremble at the prospect. . . . Could I have foreseen what I have experienced and am likely to experience, no consideration upon earth should have induced me to accept this command."

His letters during the winter at Valley Forge are models of their kind. But nothing he wrote, during his period of command, bears higher tribute to his character as a man than his letters to General Gage that "the officers engaged in the cause of liberty and their country, who by the fortune of war have fallen into your hands, have been thrown indiscriminately into a common jail, appropriated to felons."

General Gage insolently replied that but for his clemency the captured men would have been hanged, and made counter-charges that British captives were mistreated. To this Washington replied with the following letter:

"I addressed you, sir, on the 11th instant, in terms which gave the fairest scope for that humanity and politeness which were supposed to form a part of your character. I remonstrated with you on the unworthy treatment shown to the officers and citizens of America whom the fortune of war, chance or a mistaken confidence had thrown into your hands. Whether British or American mercy, fortitude, and patience are most prominent; whether our virtuous citizens whom the hand of tyrranny has forced into arms to defend their wives, their children, and their property, or the merciless instruments of lawless domination, avarice, and revenge, best deserve the appellation of rebels and the punishment of that cord, which your affected clemency has forborne to inflict; whether the authority under which I act is usurped or founded upon the genuine principles of liberty, were altogether foreign to the subect. I purposely avoided all political discussion, nor shall I now avail myself of those advantages which the sacred cause of my country, of liberty, and of human nature give me over you; much less shall I stoop to retort and invective, but the intelligence you say you have received from our army deserves a reply. I have taken time, sir, to make a strict inquiry, and find it has not the least foundation in truth. Not only your officers and soldiers have been treated with the tenderness due to fellow-citizens and brethren, but even those execrable parricides, whose counsels and aid have deluged their country with blood, have been protected from the fury of a justly enraged people. Far from compelling or permitting their assistance, I am embarrassed with the numbers who crowd to our camp, animated with the purest principles of virtue and love to their country.

You affect, sir, to despise all rank not derived from the same source with your own. I cannot conceive one more honorable, than that which flows from the uncorrupted choice of a brave and free people, the purest source and original fountain of all power. Far from making it a plea for purity, a mind of true magnanimity and enlarged ideas would comprehend and respect it.

What may have been the ministerial views which have precipitated the present crisis, Lexington, Concord and Charlestown can best declare. May that God, to whom you, too, appeal, judge between America and you. Under his providence, those who influence the councils of America, and all the other inhabitants of the United Colonies, at the hazard of their lives, are determined to hand down to posterity those just and invaluable privileges which they received from their ancestors."

To Washington's high personal character, and his lack of small weaknesses, his correspondence all bears testimony.

As a statesman, Washington was as sure, as broadminded and as determined as he was as a general. All his letters to his friends and to those who served him show that his efforts were directed toward the prevention, not only of entangling alliances abroad, but to calming internal dissensions and directing the business of the nation into healthy channels.

For a time the agricultural interests and the merchants saw the growth of manufactures with jealousy and distrust. But Washington yielded to no economic fallacies. Scarcely had the Revolution been brought to a successful termination when he wrote to the Delaware Society for Promoting Domestic Manufactures, in 1788, as follows:

"The promoting of domestic manufactures will in my conception, be among the first consequences which may naturally be expected to flow from an energetic government. For myself, having an equal regard for the prosperity of the farming trading and manufacturing interests, I will only observe that I cannot conceive the extension of the latter (so far as it may afford employment to a great number of hands which would be other wise in a manner idle) can be detrimental to the former. On the contrary, the concurrence of virtuous individuals, and the combination of economic societies, to rely as much as possible on the resources of our own country, may be productive of great national advantages by establishing the habits of industry and economy. The objects of your institution are, therefore, in my opinion, highly commendable; and you will permit me to add, gentlemen, that I propose to demonstrate the sincerity of my opinion on this subject by the uniformity of my practice in giving a decided preference to the products and fabrics of America, whensoever it may be done without involving an unreasonable expense or very great inconvenience."

Along educational lines Washington's ideas were equally sure and far-seeing. When the federal commissioners in 1795 were considering the erection of a univerity, he wrote to them as follows:

"It has always been a source of serious reflection and sincere regret with me that the youth of the United States should be sent to foreign countries for the purpose of education. Although there are doubtless many, under these circumstances who escape the danger of contracting principles unfavorable to republican government, yet we ought to deprecate the hazard attending ardent and susceptible minds from being too strongly and too early prepossessed in favor of other political systems before they are capable of appreciating their own.

"For this reason I have greatly wished to see a plan adopted by which the arts, sciences and belles-letters could be taught in their fullest extent, thereby embracing all the advantages of European tuition, with the means of acquiring the liberal knowledge which is necessary to qualify our citizens for the exigencies of public as well as private life; and (which with me is a consideration of great magnitude) by assembling the youth from the different parts of this rising republic contributing from their intercourse and interchange of information to the removal of prejudices, which might perhaps sometimes arise from local circumstances."

These few extracts have been selected at random from Washington's correspondence, extending over a period of 25 years. If they stimulate just a few persons to make a first-hand study of the life and writings of the father of this country they will have fulfilled their mission.

SAILORS' GREAT FEAR

FLOATING DERELICT ONE OF WORST PERILS OF THE SEA.

Forsaken Ships, Practically Unsinkable, Can Rarely Be Perceived Until Too Late to Avoid the Fatal Collision.

The dismasted, battered hulk of a derelict, floating so low in the water as to be almost level with the waves, is, of course, a very great danger to navigation, especially in foggy weather.

The majority of derelicts are sailing ships laden with timber. They may have been dismasted and rendered absolutely helpless in storms, partly demolished by fire, by collision with an iceberg, or by the mere force of the wave themselves. The crew, unable to make their ship seaworthy, may have abandoned it in the boats, or have been rescued by some passing vessel, but, whatever their fate, their forsaken ship, if laden with wood, remains practically unsinkable and is driven hither and thither over the ocean, at the mercy of the winds and currents.

In course of time the swelling of the wood cargo may burst the hull asunder, but until this happens, or until the vessel is driven ashore and broken into matchwood against some ironshod coast, it will remain a terror to passing ships.

Now and again a steamer may be rendered helpless owing to its machinery becoming disabled by shortage of coal, by fire or by the loss of its rudder or propeller in heavy weather. Its crew may decide to abandon it and take to the boats, but if they neglect to open the seacocks on their departure their ship may float for many a long day. The erratic movements of some derelicts are almost uncanny. Not so very long ago a Norwegian sailing ship called the Crown left Nova Scotia for a South American port. It was laden with timber, and while still in the North Atlantic ocean was overtaken by a terrible storm, which dismasted and left it a battered wreck.

The crew, realizing it was useless to remain on board, abandoned it and took to the boats, never to be heard of again, but their ship, although it vanished completely for no less than three months, was sighted at the end of this time on the edge of the Sargasso sea, a good 700 miles away from where disaster overtook it. Soon afterward it was sighted off Bermuda, but then disappeared again, and may still be drifting about the ocean.

Another sailing ship was abandoned off Cape May. The crew endeavored to destroy it by fire on their departure, but, although it blazed furiously, the sodden, waterlogged cargo eventually extinguished the flames. A few weeks later the hulk was off the English coast and it was thought it would be dashed to pieces on the shore, but, altering its course, it proceeded to the southward along the French coast and was next seen near the Azores. Having got thus far, it proceeded to cross the Atlantic, and after covering fully 6,000 miles in its wanderings, finally drifted ashore near Panama.

Derelicts are sometimes salved and bring in a large sum in salvage money to the crews of the ships who tow them into port. On one occasion an American steamer bound for Liverpool with a cargo of cotton ran out of coal off the north coast of Ireland. The sea was running high, signals of distress were made to a passing steamer, which passed a tow rope to the helpless ship. But the towing wire snapped and the crew were accordingly taken on board the newcomer, while the disabled vessel was left to drift.

A Liverpool tug heard of the affair, and being doubtless aware of the great value of the cotton cargo, determined to find the derelict and to tow it into harbor. After a protracted search it came upon it and eventually took it into Belfast, little worse for its buffeting. The enterprising tug netted no less than £7,960 for its share in the proceedings. By an act of parliament, passed in 1896, the master of any British ship sighting a derelict is bound to report the fact to the nearest Lloyds agent, so that if the abandoned ship is in the track of ships a man-of-war may be sent out to destroy or bring it into port.

Hymn Writer to Aid Girls.

Fanny J. Crosby, the blind hymn writer, is president of the Golden Rule alliance recently formed for the purpose of securing funds to erect a home for blind girls who may be in need of care and education. Miss Crosby was for many years a teacher in the New York institute for the Blind. There she formed the friendship of Grover Cleveland, who as a young man was secretary in the school. Her work in the Bowery mission is replete with incident. Already, while the alliance is yet in its infancy, a wide field of usefulness is being opened. Several instances of sightless little ones have come to it for treatment and care and complete cure has resulted in some cases, while in others provision has been made for permanent care of blind girls. The problem of educating girls in similar conditions is a serious one. Miss Crosby gives out a statement in which alluding to her recent severe illness she believes her life has been spared that she may complete the establishment of a home for blind girls. The Golden Rule alliance has headquarters at 75 Fifth avenue, New York.

Home Made Floor Polisher.

Take a wooden box, such as starch or cocoa is shipped in, and stretch several thicknesses of carpet or flannel over the bottom, allowing it to come well up on the sides and tack smoothly. Make a handle of two stout pieces of wood, thirty-six inches long, and join their upper end to a shorter piece of wood as a cross piece and nail all to the box. Place three paving bricks inside of the box and it will weigh sixteen pounds, just the weight sold for use by women. Rub always with the grain of the wood.

This, with the addition of housewife muscle and elbow grease, makes the work perfectly simple.

Pretty Utility Dress of Cloth

OUT of the conglomeration of styles which the beginning of winter ushered in, many are passing and a few are to remain for spring. Here is a pretty and rather plain cloth gown for present wear, which may be copied in taffeta silk, figured or plain voile (or both), in white embroidered fabrics—in fact, in any of the beautiful summer materials. It will be found strictly up to date when the time comes for wearing it.

A very pretty development of it shows a plain skirt, quite full enough to step in at the normal stride, with the hip drapery made of figured voile having a white ground with colored flowers. The bodice is made of this voile combined with shadow lace. There is a girdle of leaf green messaline ribbon and a sash which extends about the figure under the drapery and ties in a bow (at the right side) with short hanging ends. These pretty voiles sell at a very reasonable price—in the neighborhood of forty cents a yard—and make up into as elegant looking dresses as those that cost four or five times as much.

We are to have a spring and summer season with everything flower decked. Small flowers on hats, dresses with sprays or single blossom of small flowers, flowered ribbon girdles and vests, parasols with millinery flowers added for adornment, or with flowers printed in the coverings. A little study of the styles will betray the tendency to the quaint old-fashioned ideas in which flowers were the paramount means of expression in using color. Nothing prettier has ever been thought out.

The little gown pictured is not at all difficult to make. It is an "easy going" fit but must be draped and hung correctly. Almost any pattern house can provide a paper pattern for guidance in cutting this dress. More material is required this season than for the past two.

Flounces and hip draperies are to the fore, but it is not likely that we shall go to extremes in the matter of growing fond of voluminous skirts.

The narrow band of fur which finishes the bodice on the gown pictured can be omitted for spring or summer wear. But if the gown is made for wear in southern winter resorts this narrow border of fur appears on the sheerest of materials—as lace, net and chiffons.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

PRETTY BONNET TO ADORN THE SMALL MAIDEN

IT IS a delight to make the pretty little bonnets and caps which small daughters and little sisters look so adorably sweet in, and it is by no means difficult.

Here is one made of chiffon taffeta silk, with plaited ruffles of mousseline and lace. The puffed crown is simply a circle of silk about eighteen inches in diameter, with rows of shirring at the edge. This is sewed to a narrow covered head band or bandeau, bound with pin shirring wire.

Underneath the band the ruffles are placed after being gathered into ample fullness. The knife plaiting may be made of the same silk as the crown and need not be hemmed at the edge. It is poised under the lace.

By way of trimming, a narrow ribbon ruching is placed about the crown and a rosette of baby ribbon with hanging ends is placed at the side. Ties of ribbon about three inches wide complete this pretty piece of headgear.

Bonnets of this kind are made up in all the colors that children wear, and are very practical for almost every season of the year. Tiny boquets of fruit blossoms, little June roses, forget-me-nots, and little daisies are added. Flowers and ribbons are of all things the best for children's millinery.

When made of the darker colors, as brown or tan, with white or cream lace ruffles, bonnets of this kind are quite durable.

The dainty tints are not very successfully cleaned and therefore such millinery is for wear on dress-up occasions.

Coiffure Modes

There is more youthfulness in the style of hair dressing this season, and a number of chic women have discarded aigrettes and paradise plumes for theater wear.

The most novel decorations for the hair are an artistic plaque in oriental stones fixed to the back of the head. Beads, in harmonizing color, fall from the hair and encircle the neck.

A line of colored stones round the head, finishing at the back with wide tulle bow has been worn at the recent premieres of the Paris theaters.

Younger Parisian society women are not wearing so much in the hair as English society girls. They consider it more youthful to allow the hair to be dressed very simply and not an over-abundance of decoration.

Young debutantes and the "jeunes filles du monde" are wearing small silk flower wreaths or diminutive empire couronnes of tiny roses through which the hair is passed en bandeau, enveloping the head.

New Materials for Toilet Articles.

If you must be abreast of the times throw away or give away the toilet articles in silver, ivory or celluloid which have been your faithful friends for years, and get everything new in art glass, which comes in the most alluring tints of cream, rose, mauve and green and in classically severe designs. The little boxes for powder, rouge and soap have square bottoms like the base of a Corinthian pillar and convex covers like the dome of the Madeleine, while the clock cases, pin trays and mirror backs are equally plain and ponderous. If you don't care for toilet articles in glass, even of the most artistic sort, you may turn toward those in alabaster, or what looks like alabaster. These come in shapes similar to the articles in glass, but are pure white and promise to be more durable.

Powder Puffs for the Purse.

Little crocheted powder puffs are the latest novelty for the purse. They can easily be made at home.

Crochet two circular pieces about the size of a silver dollar out of mercerized cotton of any shade desired. Carefully sew them together, leaving small openings through which to pour in the powder. Fill the bag full with the powder, so that it will sift through easily when patted gently on the face. Then make a pretty edge around the circular piece by crocheting a few rows of plain chain stitch, each added row to be caught into the middle of the preceding one, which gives a sort of ruffle effect. An opening can safely be made by cutting a stitch or two when it is necessary to refill the puff.

Aid to the Stout.

Three-flounced skirts rather help the stout woman, the upper flounce disguising her embonpoint. The three are generally of the same depth, but vary in fullness. To be large around the hips, small at the knees, is one desiderstum in the aspect of the figure.

Beauty Spots.

Black velvet beauty spots, cut in disks, tie and little in triangles and in various odd designs, are sold by the box. The reverse side is covered with a gumlike substance which fastens the velvet securely to the skin when it is slightly moistened.

KNITTING ALWAYS AT HAND

New England Woman of the Old School Was Never Without That Favorite Occupation.

New England farmers less than a hundred years ago found their flocks of sheep one of the most valuable assets of the farms. The wool they turned over to the "women-folks," who picked and cleaned it. Then it was sent to the carding mill, where it was carded and made into rolls. In the farmhouse these rolls were spun into yarn on wheels turned by hand.

Since most of the wool was white and only a few pure white garments were needed, many of the farmers' wives colored their yarn. Then to their many accomplishments they added the art of weaving. They also knit. Knitting was a universal art. Every housewife and every girl knit.

Every self-respecting woman always had her knitting at hand. She knit as she talked, knit while visiting her neighbors, knit while she sat warming herself by the stove or the fireplace, knit when she was half-asleep and was waked up by dropping a stitch, knit in the morning, knit at noon, knit at night. The gentler sex of the whole countryside knit, knit; knit stockings for themselves and socks for the "menfolks;" knit white stockings and gray socks with blue toes, blue socks with red toes, and for variety, pied socks or ring-streaked and speckled.

They knit mittens, so comfortable on frosty days; mittens white, mittens gray, mittens blue or blue striped, with white for the boys, and such pretty red mittens for the dear girls; knit comforters to wrap round the boys' necks, white and blue shawls, tippets and leggings of various hues. While a part of the product of the knitting needles was sold, most of it went to home consumption.—Gertrude Anderson, in "When Neighbors Were Neighbors."

THE REPUBLICAN,
Oakland, Md.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 12. 1914.

HISTORY tells of a man who, to justify his actions said, "I am making a record." And he did. History sometimes repeats itself.

THE women of the country are getting into politics. The next Democratic State ticket in Kansas will have two women on it. As Kansas is a Republican State they may expect to be defeated.

TODAY is the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, the great war President of the United States. It will be celebrated all over this country of ours.

So far about two hundred and sixty bills have been introduced in the Maryland House of Delegates. About two hundred bills have been introduced in the Senate. But few of the bills have passed the third reading.

SENATOR SPEICHER'S local option bill is meeting with bitter opposition from the whiskey ring which is determined, if possible, to kill the bill by preventing it coming out of the committee's hands in the House. The Senator is determined that it shall pass the House and is earnestly doing everything in his power to secure its passage. This same ring tried to defeat his re-election out failed and we believe the Senator will defeat them again. The Senator has the utmost confidence of this community.

ONE of Garrett county's Delegates at Annapolis was recently seen in the private room of one of Oakland's lawyers holding a consultation with several saloon keepers of Oakland. Was it for the purpose of defeating Senator Speicher's county-wide local option bill that the meeting was held? The names of all parties assembled will be given if necessary.

A TELEPHONE message was received at Oakland suggesting that a fund of $600 be raised to pass Senator Speicher's local option bill. The author of the message must have thought that Maryland legislation was for sale cheap. It is needless to say that Senator Speicher did not send the message, and that no money was raised. The people of Garrett have the utmost faith in Senator Speicher and his ability to pass the bill.

THE Oakland Bar (Attorneys) Association has prepared a bill for passage at the present session of the legislature relating to the drawing of juries in Garrett county. It provides for the drawing of grand jurors and of petit jurors, the latter to report for duty the first Thursday of the court. The lawyers also passed a resolution that Senator Speicher should introduce the bill. By some means, unknown to the Bar, Mr. Shartzer got hold of the bill and introduced it in the House last Friday. It is up to Mr. Shartzer to explain how he obtained the bill and by whose authority he presented the same.

THE offices of the Baltimore and Ohio last year, according to a circular issued by that company, used 700,000 lead pencils, 1,000,000 pens, 23,000,000 pins, 18,000,000 envelopes, 14,000,000 sheets of carbon paper, 23,000,000 second sheets, 11,000,000 rubber bands, 570,000 blotters, 2,500,000 letter fasteners 2,000,000 file backs, 10,000 sponges, 3,300 rulers and other office articles in proportion. These supplies cost $60,000. It is believed that carefulness by those who use these materials will effect a reduction of fifty per cent in the quantity required.

THE Baltimore daily papers predict that Senator Speicher's local option bill for Garrett county will have a hard time getting through the House of Delegates. One or two of them predict that it will never get out of the committee's room. They admit that the Senator is popular and succeeds in passing his bills, but this time he has a hard proposition to handle. The Republican believes, that with the earnest support of Delegates Harvey and Savage he will see his bill a law and Garrett county have the right to vote wet or dry and that the result will be dry. Garrett county trusts Senator Speicher and pin their faith on his success.

FIFTEEN thousand dollars is sought from the State, in a bill introduced in the House of Delegates Monday night by one of the Garrett county delegation, to protect Kitzmiller and Friendsville from floods. This amount of money may be sufficient, should the measure pass, to make the preliminary surveys and pay the expense of a commission, but in so far as doing anything toward the actual work in protecting the two aforementioned towns from damage that ensue as a result of high water, it would fall very far short of benefitting anyone except the members of the commission that presumably is to be appointed to carry out the provisions of the measure. Why Oakland, the home of the sponsor of this measure, which suffers from freshets once to two or three times every year and as a result property owners are greatly damaged, should be overlooked in this highly commendable measure, The Republican is not informed.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Teaching of Seventh Day Adventists.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Of course the question of the Sabbath is a cardinal point with them, in connection with which is bound up the weal or woe of all who bear their testimony.

Their teaching is that of the third angel in Rev. 14. All who receive their testimony are sealed with the seal of the Living God and are among the 144,000 who are sealed of the twelve tribes of Israel. If they refuse they are doomed to the judgment proclaimed by the angel in Rev. 14 : 9-11. The keeping of the seventh day is the seal that marks the faithful. The rest are doomed as worshipers of the beast. This is another gospel, one without Christ and no Saviour in it.

They deny the immortality of the soul. They seem to think that the soul is not capable of any conscious existence apart from the body.

Death with them is the cessation of existence. When a man dies his soul dies. The soul then is nothing more than the animal life, and hence it ceases to exist and there is nothing but the body, which returns to dust in the grave. When believers die there is, with them, no intermediate state for the soul between death and the resurrection. Scripture bearing on this is wrested and tortured to set aside its force. When the Lord says, "Fear not them which kill the body but cannot kill the soul," it means nothing. When he reveals the state of men after death, in the unseen world, when the rich man is seen in hades in torment and pleading for a drop of water to cool his tongue, they say it is only a parable! It means nothing, or if it has any meaning it is the burning up of the wicked after the resurrection! But the destruction of the wicked after the resurrection is in hell (gehenna), not hades. Besides, the rich man had five brothers who he thought would listen to one who should rise from the dead, showing clearly that the passage describes a state of existence between death and the resurrection. The passage teaches a state of blessedness for the righteous and of torment for the wicked in the unseen world.

When Jesus said to the penitent thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," they say it only means that the Lord said it that day, and not that the thief would be with Him. Thus they make the Lord use an expression which would falsify the hopes of His people, by leading them to suppose that they would not be in Paradise as soon as death set the soul free from the body. A false system that must trim the Word of God to fit it may accept this, but an honest soul who feels the power of truth shrinks back with horror from such mockery.

They teach the annihilation of the wicked after resurrection. They believe the wicked will be raised up and consumed into nonexistence amid the dissolving elements when the earth is destroyed. Here again they correct the Scriptures. We need not be surprised then to find them attacking the atonement of Christ.

In Lev. 16 we have in type the great atoning work of Christ. In that chapter we find two goats were chosen one whose blood was shed to make propitiation before Jehovah, and the other to bear away the sins of the people. This one was called the scape-goat. Both were types of Christ, one as making propitiation, as in Rom. 3 : 25, the other as the sinbearing substitute, according to Rom. 4 : 25 and 1 Pet. 2 : 24, who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree.

The Adventists make satan to be the scape-goat, and thus one blessed aspect of the Lord's atoning work is attributed to satan and Christ is robbed of half of His glory.

Their theory is: There is a sanctuary in heaven like the one that is on earth, to which all the sins of God's people are being transferred, and where they have been accumulating for ages past. This sanctuary is to be cleansed. In fact, they believe the cleansing began in 1844 and is nearly done now. This accumulation of sins will be removed from the sanctuary and laid upon Satan as the scape goat at the coming of the Lord, when the wicked will be given to the slaughter and their putrefying flesh and bleaching bones lie unburied, ungathered and unlamented from one end of the earth to the other end thereof.

The earth will then be a scene of desolation, when satan will be confined a thousand years. According to this we do not have a completed work of atonement. Their theory is that Christ could not have entered the holiest till 1844. It is horrid absurdity denying the finished work of Jesus. Heb. 10 shows the way was opened into the holiest by the death of Jesus, and that for nineteen hundred years the saints have had access into the holiest by the blood of Jesus.

They even deny the Eternity of the Son of God. With them Jesus had a beginning. He was a Son of God because God was His Father, but He was the Son-God, and when he died on the cross the divine part died as well as the human. He ceased to exist save that flesh that was nailed to the cross. So they bring a Christ to fit their system, not the Christ of God.

It aims to bring Christians under the law and rob them of the liberty into which grace brings them. It would destroy the fabric of Christianity and substitute for it a lifeless Judaism, which can only plunge the soul into darkness. "We are not under law but under grace": Rom. 6 : 14.

It destroys the whole fabric of Christian truth. Christians must turn away from it with horror. Avoiding the snare that is spread for the unwary. The movement is of the enemy and not of God and should be avoided.

Yours truly,
FIRST DAY

A Writar Claiming No Connection with The Seventh Day Adventists, Takes Exceptions to "First Day's" Exposition of That Sect's Belief.

To the Editor of The Republican:

To read the article over the signature of "First Day," in last week's issue of "The Forum" one would almost think that to be a "Sabbath keeper" is almost next to committing the unpardonable sin itself.

While I am not a Seventh Day Adventist, nor even a Sabbath keeper yet I hope "First Day" will pardon me if I try to present a few arguments on the other side of this question, for like all questions it has two sides to it.

"First Day" admits that the law has not been changed, also that there is no scriptural authority for the changing of the Sabbath to the first day of the week, and furthermore that the Christians in apostolic days observed the seventh day as the Sabbath, but he objects because the assemblies spoken of in Acts 17:2 were Jewish assemblies and not Christians. Well what if they were? We have no Saviour to trust in but Jesus Christ who was according to the flesh a Jew; no other apostles and prophets but Jewish; no other than Jewish Scriptures; and indeed Jesus said himself that "Salvation is of the Jews." Now if Christ and the apostles kept the seventh day for the Sabbath, and as "First Day" tells us we have no scriptural authority to change it, where does the authority come from to change it?

The Papacy claims that she has changed the Sabbath, and that her ability to do this is a proof of her authority.

The "Catholic Mirror" (Cardinal Gibbons official organ,) Sept. 23, 1893, says, The Catholic church for over one thousand years before the existence of a Protestant, by virtue of her divine mission changed the day from Saturday to Sunday.

In "A Doctrine Catechism" p. p. 174, 181 are found these questions and answers.

Ques.—Have you any other way of proving that the church has power to institute festivals of precept?

Ans.—Had she not such power, she could not have substituted the observance of Sunday, the first day of the week for the observance of Saturday the seventh day, a change for which there is no scriptural authority."

Ques.—How prove you that the church hath power to command feasts and holy days?

Ans.—By the very act of changing the Sabbath into Sunday.

The first law for Sunday as a weekly day of observance on record, human or divine, is by Constantine, A. D. 321, at that time heathen Emperor of Rome, and a sun worshiper.

"First Day" cites Rev. 1:10 to prove that the first day of the week is called the "Lord's Day" Lets see what the passage really does say: "I was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." Does this text say what day of the week the Lord's day was? We must learn that from other scriptures.

In Mark 1:27 Jesus says, "The Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath." God expressly declares that "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." Ex. 20:10.

The Lord through Isaiah calls it "My holy day." Isa. 58:13. Therefore according to the Holy Scriptures, which "cannot be broken" (John 10:35) the seventh day of the week is at once both the holy Sabbath and the Lord's day, while the First Day has no claims whatever to either.

Summing up the whole subject in as few words as possible we find that there is no divine command for Sunday observance; there is not a least hint of a Sunday institution; Christ never changed God's Sabbath to Sunday; He never observed Sunday as the Sabbath; the Apostles never kept Sunday as the Sabbath, there is no prophecy that Sunday would ever take the place of the Sabbath; neither God, Christ, angels nor inspired men have ever said one word in favor of Sunday as a holy day, on the other hand, God claimed the seventh day as his own; He blessed and sanctified the seventh day; He commanded that the seventh day be kept holy; He has uttered fearful threatenings against those who profane the seventh day, He has given great and precious promises to those who keep holy the seventh day; everything that is necessary to give importance to the day that is calculated to induce a proper observance of the day is produced in favor of the seventh day, but nothing of this kind can be produced in favor of the first day no sanctity, no commandment, no penalty, no blessing.

An Unreasonable But True Fox Story

To the Editor of The Republican.

Last Friday, February 6th, 1914, the sportsmen of Eagle Rock, and Mr. Tilden Harvey of near Kitzmiller, joined together for a fox chase. They went on Simpson with their excellent hounds where one among the largest red foxes that roam the woods of Garrett stays. They have been chasing him many times, but were unable to bag him. He has been a shooting target for years, many times having the fur shot off his coat but he was generally out of killing range. He has been living upon chickens and lambs taken from Mr. Geo. W. Harvey during the summer season. It has been the desire of the sporting element to bag that particular fox, for he is extra large and fine in color.

One evening about dusk Mr. Cyrus Harvey heard the sheep bell. Knowing something was chasing his sheep, he shouldered his Winchester and went to investigate. When he found the sheep they were rounded up. Looking closely he saw an object directly between him and the sheep. The fox was watching the sheep, but when he saw Cyrus he ran so he could not shoot him without endangering the lives of the sheep. This fox was noted for his cunning, but he was trapped at last.

They succeeded in jumping the fox and the chase started. It was music to hear the hounds chasing him off the mountain, through the rocks, over the valleys or any way that he may be able to fool the dogs. The chase lasted several hours, but at last the fox succeeded in eluding the hounds. Believing himself safe he stopped to rest, after which he started for the mountain again. On the way he passed by Mr. George Tasker's, when a small dog ran out and hamstringed the fox. The fox would wheel around to fight but the little dog would be gone. When the fox would start to run the dog would ham him again. Mrs. Tasker saw him, ran out and beat the fox, but not succeeding in killing him, she ran to the house and got a wash tub, ran back and threw it over him. She kept the fox a prisoner until some of the men folks came home.

If the reader of this story don't believe it go to Mrs. Tasker's and she will show you the hide.

REPUBLICAN LOVE FEAST

To Be Held at Hagerstown Next Thursday.

Republicans and Progressives of Washington county are looking forward with much interest and pleasure to Thursday, (today,) Lincoln's birthday, when they will enjoy a love feast. With a dozen or more distinguished out-of-county guests, they will fraternize at a banquet at the County Club at Hagerstown. The affair is accepted already as a bond that will the more closely unite the two elements of the party in the county, and, like the dinner at Cumberland in December last, prove to be an important factor in bringing into a harmonious and working whole all political factors in the county opposed to the Democratic party.

Already there are 235 acceptances. There are prospects that many who are anxious to attend will be squeezed out because of the lack of accommodations. Among the distinguished out-of- county guests will be: Senator Thomas Sterling, of South Dakota; Governor Goldsborough, Senator William P. Jackson, Thomas Parran, Oliver S. Metzerott, Robert P. Graham, Col. W. Bladen Lowndes, Taster Lowndes, Lindley Sloan, Matthew Sloan, Brook Whiting, Andrew Ramsey, Judge Henderson, Judge Keedy, Colonel Carrington, B. H. Warner, Jr., Thomas Dawson, Senator Zihlman, W. W. Brown, C. C. Holtzman, Senator Snader, Senator Speicher, Senator Mathias and B. H. Warner, Jr.

Governor Goldsborough and other guests from Baltimore will come to Hagerstown in a private car, with Col. W. Bladen Lowndes as host.

A Towering Sycamore Has Fallen in the Mountains.

Mr. John Chaney, popularly known for nearly three quarters of a century as "Long John," died February 1st, 1914, at his home near Avilton, in Garrett county, Maryland. He was eighty four years old and, in his socks, stood six feet and eleven inches. In the death of Mr. Chaney a singulary fashioned land mark disappears from the human highway. His scant frame and steeple-like height made him curiously conspicuous in assemblages of men. Managers of leading circuses of the United States sought his friendship and made tempting inducements for his entrance in their organizations. When they had a performance within his reach, it was their habit to forward him a complimentary ticket and, not only to bow him to a "seat on the platform" but assign him to the place of honor at the head of the street parade.

His was truly a sunny nature brimming over with merriment in conversation, while his sprightly mind with quaint originality found expression in a ready tongue. The recorder hereof has spent hours late in the winter nights listening to narratives in his inimitable manner of occurrences treasured in his mind as an observant pioneer in the wilds of a sparsely settled mountain region. With deep relish he would produce the story of a courtship in the first dawn of his early manhood with a coy beauty in Cumberland. How after a careful sprucing from head to foot, which with him was a long strip of decoration, he would arrive at the Queen City in time to gallant the blushing divinity to church. But, said he, from the minute I entered the door, the preacher lost whatever grip he may previously have had on any part of his congregation, all eyes centered upon the pew we took, no little to the confusion of the one lass in all the world he was then so inclined to please. And he would illustrate by a side wise inclination how he tried to get his head from way up yonder over all other heads, and how he would frown at the "fools in the church," but all to no purpose. Then after the service how the whispered comments reached the ears of the shrinking beauty and compelled him to leave the field in defeat.

But he chose another and better fortified position from which he threw down a new challange and won the prize. He is survived by a numerous posterity dispersed over a wide range of country.

It is difficult to picture the locality of his long life and customary walks, of the tall form and beaming face, and understand he is no longer there.

He won friends and made no foes, and has left behind him cherished memories strengthened by bonds too strong to loose their clasp even at the grave.

RELLIS

BITTINGER.

Immediately after Ground Hog Day it seemed as though that old time prophet was going to score a failure but on the following Friday winter set in again in real earnest, and on Saturday night the thermometer recorded zero weather.

Austin Bittinger returned last Thursday from a week's visit to his mother's home near Deer Park.

L. M. Lininger purchased a fine four year old Belgian horse last week.

Chauncey Broadwater, who is employed on P. H. Yost's farm near Grantsville, passed through this village last Saturday on his way to Accident.

Charles Wiley spent last Saturday and Sunday in Cumberland.

Jacob Brenneman made a business trip to Grantsville last Saturday.

O. C. Buckel's new store is nearing completion, and he expects to move his stock of merchandise into the new room in the near future.

Mrs. T. B. Wiley and Mrs. Albert Brenneman were shopping in Grantsville recently.

Samuel Broadwater, of New Germany, was a business visitor to this village last week.

STEYER.

Mr. Vertie Wolfe, who spent a few days at his home near Fellowsville, has returned to Steyer.

Mr. A. J. Wilson made a business trip to Shaw a few days ago.

Mr. Luther Stafford spent Sunday at his home in Keyser.

Mrs. Scott Harvey, Mrs. Elmer Harvey and Mrs. Hester Harvey passed through our village one day last week enroute to Blaine, W. Va., where they spent the day visiting friends.

Miss Jessie Thompson spent Sunday at J. T. Steyer's.

Messrs. Arthur and Harry Hardesty were seen on our streets one day last week.

Mr. W J. Cover spent a few days at his home in Terra Alta, recently.

Mr. Roy Stafford was calling on Miss Minnie Trickett of Oakland, Sunday last.

Mr. Luther Stafford made a business trip to Terra Alta a few days ago.

Mr. Earl Hamill moved from Chaffee to our village last week.

A crowd of our young people enjoyed a very pleasant sled ride up to the home of Mr. W. T. Steyer, last Saturday night. Among these in the party were Messrs. O. D. Eastman of Chicago; Tom Schaffer of Mt. Storm; V. I. Steyer and J. E. Steyer, and Misses Jessie Thompson of Dobbin; Effie Shaffer of Mt. Storm, and Nora Steyer of Steyer.

Messrs. A. I. Wilson and S. B. Hill were calling on friends at this place Sunday.

Miss Lida Steyer was the guest of Miss Myrtle Wilson Sunday evening.

Wishing the Republican success.

GORMANIA.

Weather is very cold and stormy at this writing. Some predict six more weeks of winter

Schools on both sides of the river are progressing nicely.

The Gormania school literary society rendered a tine program Friday night last, consisting of songs, two selections by the band, readings, dialogue and debate, the question being, "Resolved. That the pen is mightier than the sword."

County Superintendent of schools, Mr. Harman Groves visited the Gormania school a couple of days last week. He seemed to think the school was advancing rapidly. We wish to congratulate its fine teachers.

Mrs. Ernest Hilleary was in town Friday having some dental work done.

Mr. Harley Hank who is working at Blaine, is home for a few days.

Irvin Neville, book-keeper for Hamill Coal & Coke Co., was visiting his parents over Sunday.

Mrs. Mabel Neville, Lora Fouler and Professor Holmes attended reading circle at Bayard Saturday.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

The furnace in the M. E. church has been abandoned on account of the cost of the gas and four gas heaters have been installed in the church.

Sunday night special services will be commenced in the Loch Lynn U. B. church. Rev. Bauman will be assisted by Revs Waters, of Grafton, and Herndon, of Buckhannon. A great revival is anticipated.

Misses Blanche and Josie Cale left on train No. 1, Tuesday night for Kansas City, Mo., where they will visit a sister. They will be gone about two months.

Tuesday morning the ice on the lake was six inches thick

Saturday, March 14, the competitive examination for postmaster for this office will be held in Oakland.

Saturday evening, 14th, a spelling bee, under the auspices of the M. E. Ladies' Aid, will be held at Haydenhurst, commencing at eight o'clock. A silver offering will be taken and refreshments will be served free. The invitation to be present is general.

Rev. L. A. Rudisill came up from Annapolis Thursday night of last week and remained with his family until Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lysle Schill spent Sunday with Mrs. Schill's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Prevost.

SILVER KNOB.

Messrs W. J. Sanders and George N. B. Dumire have been engaged recently in making mine ties and props.

Mr. Harry Yoast was disappointed in not getting his props out of the woods during the good sledding snow.

The Teddy Bear Lumber Company of Oak Corner, near Silver Knob, is doing a rushing business.

The weather is very rough at Silver Knob at this time.

Mr. E. Sims has taken the contract to make mine props for Mr. Frank Strawser, near here.

The weather verifies the fact that the ground hog saw his shadow on the 2nd.

The silver Knob school is progressing nicely under the management of Miss Bertha Nicholson, teacher.

Sarah Abernathy, (widow), Wm. Abernathy, Sylvia L. Abernathy, Sarah E. Bosely, Martin Abernathy and Eva G. Abernathy, Plaintiffs, vs. Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodore Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John A. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy, Defendants.

No. 995 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, containing about 150 acres, of which Ezekiel H. Abernathy died seized and possessed, and for a distribution of the proceeds amongst the parties entitled to receive the same.

The bill states that the said Ezekiel H. Abernathy was in his lifetime possessed of a tract of land containing 150 acres, being a part of "Hineches Discovery," and which is located in Garrett county.

That being so seized he departed this life several years ago and left surviving him a widow, Sarah Abernathy, and the following children: Susan, a daughter, intermarried with Louis Grant; Rosetta, a daughter, who intermarried with Thomas L. Wildman; Sarah E., a daughter, who intermarried with Thornton C. Bosely, the said Bosely now being dead; Martin Abernathy, a son, whose wife's name is Eva G.; Theodore, a son, whose wife's name is Laura E.; William, a son, whose wife's name is Sylvia L.; John S., a son, whose wife's name is Elizabeth.

The Bill further states that the said Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodore Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John S. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy are non-residents of the State of Maryland; that said land is running down and depreciating in value; that the same is not susceptible of partition without loss and injury, and that in order to make division of the same it will be necessary that said land be sold and the proceeds divided amongst those interested.

The Bill prays for a decree for the sale of said property; that the proceeds be distributed amongst the parties entitled to receive the same, and for general relief.

It is therefore, this 14th day of January, in the year 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 16th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this Bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 9th day of March, next, to show cause, if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Irene Hayes, vs. Elza L. Hayes.

No. 1913 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, Irene Hayes, a vinculo matromonii, from the defendant Elza L. Hayes.

The bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the 28th day of December, 1901, and resided together as man and wife until October, 1907.

That the defendant without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than six years, and is deliberate and final.

That one son was born as a result of said marriage, to wit: Emmerson Hayes, on the 13th day of October, 1902.

That the defendant has failed, neglected and refused to contribute any thing toward the support of the plaintiff ever since said separation.

The Bill further states that the defendant has been guilty of the crime of adultery since said marriage.

And further states that the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, and avers that the defendant is a non resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 13th day of January, 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 13th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of the Bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 2nd day of March next, to show cause, if any he has why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Mrs. James Willison entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Orborne, of Fairmont, W. Va., who is here as the guest of Mrs. Willison. Among those present were Mrs. Idie T. Hayes, Mrs. R. B. Ward and Miss Weems.

Last Saturday Mrs. Idie T. Hayes entertained a few friends in honor of her house guest, Mrs. R. B. Ward. Among those paesent were Dr. and Mrs. Ely and their guest Miss Hawley; Dr. A. Moore and Mrs. Moore, and Rev. and Mrs. Shearer.

On February 22 Doctor Archibald Moore will preach to Oakland Lodge, No. 192, A. F. & A. M. in the Methodist church, at the hour of ten thirty. The Lodge will assemble at the Lodge room at ten o'clock and march from there to the church. All members of the Fraternity are cordially invited to be present.

In this issue of the Republican we are publishing a long list of tax sale notices for County Treasurer J. B. Emory. The properties advertised to be sold are located in District No. 7, and are all desirably located for either dwelling or agricultural purposes. Attorney E. H. Sincell is Mr. Emory's legal representative in this lot of sales.

Chas. H. Bill, a Grantsville capitalist and all around good fellow, was in Frostburg on Tuesday. He spent a short time here renewing old acquaintances, then took a car for Lonaconing to visit his brother Frank and family, who reside there.—Frostburg Spirit.

The Board of County Commissioners with all members present, is in session this week checking up the assessment books preparatory to making the annual levy which, under the law, is made in April of each year The checking process eliminates to a great degree the liability of having an erroneous basis to work upon when the Commissioners meet as a tax levying body.

The home of Mr. B. T. Bray of Swanton was totally destroyed by fire on Monday February 2d; cause is unknown and Mr. Bray only saved a few household articles. He has a large family. He will begin a building at once. Mr. Bray is a worthy gentleman and good citizen. Neighbors are at work now helping to get out lumber to rebuild. There was no insurance.

Dr. R. A. Ravenscroft, who came up to his home in Garrett county remained at Accident until Tuesday, when he returned to Baltimore, taking with him as a patient to be entered in one of the hospitals of that city Miss Lillie Georg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Georg, of Accident. Miss Georg has been suffering for some time past with an affection of the throat and for the relief of this trouble she will be operated upon after her arrival in the city.

Messrs. S. Lawton & Sons have disposed of their entire stock of hardware, plumbing materials and gas fittings, the same being sold at public auction by the firm on last Saturday. The store room in the K. of P. building which has been occupied by them for upwards of a year, is now for rent. Hereafter the Messrs. Lawton will devote their entire time and energy to the garage and automobile business with headquarters in the Nally building on Second street.

Our town is a place in which to hustle for trade advancement. But our town is not alone a place of trade. It is a place of homes and acquaintanceships and friendships. Making money is great business and very much worth while if money making does not require all the while. We must mix our money with friends and fellowships! Else we shall have the money and nothing else. And what is trade and commerce without friendships? Even the lower animals require friendship.

When Senator Speicher's bill relating to prohibition of saloons within two miles of churches and schoolhouses in certain sections of Garrett county came up for its third and final reading Senator Benson nearly precipitated a debate. He declared that he could not vote for the bill on the ground that it would put out of commission a distillery. He said that to legislate it out of business seemed to be a wrong course to pursue. A vote was taken and the bill was passed, 18 senators voting for and four aganist it.

GOT IN BAD WITH HOUSE ELECTIONS COMMITTEE

Garrett County Delegate Called To Time After Making an Assault Upon A Collegaue.

Last Thursday the Sun and the Star of Baltimore and the Times of Cumberland gave an account of Mr. Shartzer's personal and unjustifiable attack on Mr. Savage. It is to be regretted that the delegate should so far have forgotton his manhood as to make such an unwarranted attack on his collague. The Times of Cumberland of Friday, in its Annapolis letter says:

A clash between two members of the Garrett county Delegation, which occured before the House Committee on Elections, has caused considerable comment among the members and is greatly deplored by the friends of the participants, Delegates Shartzer and Savage. Mr. Shartzer is financialy interested in the Garrett Journal, published at Oakland, which is being conducted as an independent paper. Under he State law, all printing and election advertisement has been published in the Oakland Republican and the Oakland Democrat, "two papers of opposite political faith," as provided by State law. Mr. Shartzer has introduced a bill providing for the awarding of this election advertising to but one paper in Garrett county, and that to be the lowest bidder after ten day's notice by the Election Supervisors. Messrs. Harvey and Savage, two other members from Garrett county, are opposed to this bill, claiming that it conflicts with the State law which provides for such advertising to be published in "two newspapers of opposite political faith," and the House Election Committee gave both parties to the controversy a hearing Tuesday afternoon on this measure.

It appears that Delegate Savage, prior to his election to the House, was a member of the Board of Election Supervisors for Garrett county, and it further appears that under a misapprehension the Election Supervisors charged and were paid for their services for both the primary and the general elections last held. It also appears that immediately their attention was called to the fact that the law entitled them to pay for only the general election, the Supervisors promptly returned the check received from the County Commissioners in excess payment.

At the hearing on Tuesday afternoon before the House Elections Committee, Delegate Shartzer became incensed at the opposition of his colleagues, Delegates Harvey and Savage, and the controversy between the contending parties became acrimonious in the extreme, and Mr. Shartzer openly and with some severity charged Delegate Savage with try. g to mulct the tax payers of Garrett connty out of the money which he had erroneously received, but which, Mr. Savage explained, he had returned.

The argument became very heated, Mr. Savage meantime defending his position dispassionately before the committee. Mr. Shartzer's vehemence, however, necessitated Delegate Reinhart, of the Allegany Delegation, who is chairman of the Elections Committee, to call Delegate Shartzer to order and to conduct himself with the dignity becoming the committee.

The incident caused no end of gossip around the capitol in both the House and Senate, and considerable interest has been aroused in the Garrett situation.

It has been apparent for some time that there has been friction in the Garrett Delegation, but this has been the first open breach before the body officially. It is practically certain that the Election Committee will report the bill unfavorably. Meantime the Garrett Delegation continues to be divided upon many of the bills introduced for that county Delegate Shartzer opposing the Savage and Harvey bills and these two antagonizing those Shartzer bills which do not meet with their approval.

Mr. Savage offered to support Mr. Shartzer's bill if he would amend it by inserting, "two papers" instead of "one" making the lowest bid, claiming that to use only one paper would be to deprive a majority of the voters of the county the right of such notice.

HAS DONE WONDERS FOR MR. SHIFFLETT.

Erman Shifflett, Near Elkton, Gives His Experience.

Bear's Emulsion is not only good for coughs, colds, bronchitis and lung strengthner, but it also builds up the system, gives color, strength and health; the way you should look and feel if you want to keep the Tuberculosis germ out of your body. This preparation can be had at your drugstore at one dollar a bottle, six bottles for five dollars.

I have had a cough for four years and tried everything my friends told me of. Had taken medicine from three different doctors, and had used nearly every patent cough syrup I saw advertised and none did good any longer than I was taking it.

Then I got Bear's Emulsion; I am now feeling like a man. The cough has left me; my stomach is much stronger and my bowels regular. It is the best thing to stop a cough, heal up the lungs and build up the system that is made. If any of my friends want to know any more about this medicine. I will be glad to tell them.

Mrs. G. W. Haulenbeek Much Better.

Mrs. G. W. Haulenbeek is spending the winter in Baltimore at the home of her son, Mr. Elmer Haulenbeek, undergoing treatment at the hands of Dr. W. T. Willey of that city. Every day, for the space of two hours, Mrs. Haulenbeek submits to an application of ice over the heart, and this has proved of great benefit. She has gained sufficient strength to walk just a little about her room with the assistance of a crutch, and this is most encouraging.

Since leaving her home at Deer Park last November, Mrs. Haulenbeek has not been able to leave her son's house, although the weather in Baltimore has been most propitious, not a particle of snow falling in Baltimore the whole winter.

Cashier Winters Resigned.

J. E. Winters tendered his resignation as cashier of the First National Bank at Grantsville at the last meeting of directors and on Saturday last left for his home near Frostburg. It is not known who will be his successor. Mr. Winters, in his stay in Grantsville made many friends who are sorry to have him go, as he was always courteous and anxious to please in his capacity of cashier.

Has More Apples.

Mr. M. M. Fazenbaker, Magistrate in District Four and the "Apple King" of Garrett county, last year raised over three hundred bushels of fine apples, while his neighbors' crops were practically a failure. While there has been a great demand on Mr. Fazenbaker for apples he still has about thirty five or forty bushels left, and if he don't sell them all, they are so well preserved he will have apples in his cellar when this year's crop comes.

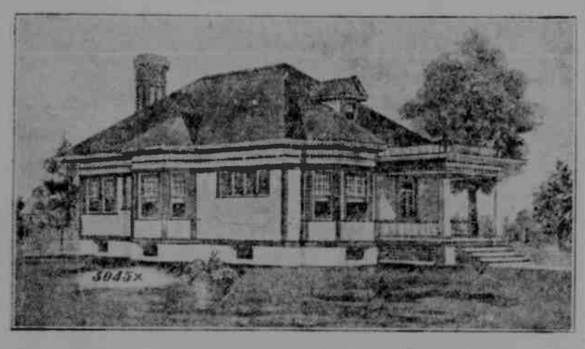
THE AMERICAN HOME

WILLIAM A. RADFORD, EDITOR



Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 173 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The biggest thing in any man's life is his home. It is the inspiration and the center of all his ambition, of all his hope for success. Without a home, a man is a ship at sea without a rudder. A home gives a man a reason for living. Every man craves it, every man needs it.

And in these days it is possible for anyone who is paying rent right along to save for himself the landlord's profit, and own his own home. There are many landlords that are not only making a living, but growing wealthy, by borrowing money, building houses with it, and renting them to people who, if they realized it, could, with little effort, just as well build or buy homes for themselves. One hundred dollars saved up and paid down will be accepted as first payment on a moderate cost home in almost any town or city in the United States, and will start you on the road to ownership. The rest always comes easier, for there is now a constant incentive to added effort and thrift.

Of course, there should be reason in this as in other things. One should not buy too expensive a place, any more than he should attempt to "show off" by buying too elaborate and expensive clothing. The more expensive home will come later if you first "make good" by adjusting your demands to your abilities, and exercising patience. In the meantime, remember that you are saving the landlord's profit. You are also reaping the "unearned increment" of increased valuation on your property, and it is a fact that in any live, growing city or town the appreciation in value of property will more than offset depreciation and cost of upkeep on the improvements thereon. Then, again, there is the great satisfaction and pride of being under your own roof which cannot be sold over your head, and the delight of being able to "potter around" and fix things up according to your own fancy, knowing all the while that everything added in the way of convenience or improvement is so much added in dollars and cents to the value of the property.

That this is no dream is strikingly demonstrated by the prevailing popularity of the cozy cottage type of dwelling commonly designated as the "bungalow"—a word of East Indian origin—and the extent to which buildings of this class are being multiplied all over the country. This type of house—built either wholly one-story or with a few rooms directly under the roof in what would otherwise be the attic—is such as to lend itself to a great variety of treatment and arrangement, these features, however, being governed altogether by the individual tastes and requirements of the prospective occupants.

Floor Plan.

A very attractive, cosy and well-arranged six-room cottage home of the type referred to is illustrated in the half-tone perspective view herewith and the accompanying floor-plan. The width of the house is 31 feet; its length 47 feet. The basement extends under the entire house, and there is an attic. The rooms are all well lighted, the three bedrooms, each of which has capacious closet of its own, are arranged along one side of the house, the other side being devoted to the waking activities of domestic life. The front porch is sufficiently large to provide a shaded outdoor gathering place for the family in fine weather. The front door opens into a vestibule, from which, through a door at the left, we enter the cheery living room with its large bay window at the front end. Four small casement windows also admit light over the library bookcase or other furnishings that may be ranged along the side of the room. The living room opens directly into the dining room through an opening flanked by two columns. At one end of the dining room, another bay window admits ample sunshine, and enlarges the view to be had from the inside; at the other end, doors open into the front and middle bedrooms. Connection between dining room and kitchen is through the pantry, which is lighted by a window and provided with a shelved cupboard or buffet for china, glassware, etc. A small hallway leads directly from the dining room to the bathroom on the middle line of the house, at the rear. This hallway has a linen closet, and opens on the right into the rear bedroom, and the left into the kitchen. A rear porch off the kitchen gives access to and from the back yard.

The cost of building such a house as this would range in different localities from $2,300 to $2,500.

VARIOUS EMOTIONS OF LOVE

Always at First General and Vague It Sometimes Remains Impersonal Through Life.

Swedenborg says that in its early and elemental forms our love is attached by sex, not yet by one of the sex. Even in babyhood girls may show a decided preference for men. Love of a whole sex is already awake in them, but they are rarely devoted to one man to the exclusion of all others, writes Richard C. Cabot in the Atlantic. A newcomer is especially welcomed. This means that their love is at first general and vague, though later it may attach itself to one individual and cleave to him, forsaking all others. This lesson we sometimes fail to learn. We then remain impersonal and desire the emotions of love, as many people desire the emotions of music, without any awareness of an individual or of the meaning of the piece. To yield to such a desire is villainy in case we really know better (as we usually do); but not otherwise. When we listen to good music we are actually listening to the outpourings of the composer's heart. He is speaking to us earnestly and intensely, and we are listening to him, not to it. And yet it is often no crime to drink in music merely as pleasure; indeed, for most people it cannot be a crime because they know no better. But it is always a ghastly mistake, for it is treating music, which is a bit of a person's life, as a means of sensual gratification.

Didn't Flatter the Bishop.

Bishop McDowell has recovered from his recent illness sufficiently to receive his friends and entertain them with a story now and then. Some Years ago the bishop was presiding over a conference in the south. At the close of the session an old negro mammy, who had been an interested listener throughout the proceedings, approached the bishop to congratulate him.

"Ah's done attended confunces hyah since befo' the wah," she said. "Ah's seen Bishop Simpson an' Bishop Fowler an' Bishop Merrill, but Ah nevah saw no bishop who could preside lak you."

Bishop McDowell thanked her for the the compliment and was about to turn away.

"But," added the old negress, "A'm getting on in years now; Ah's pretty old, an' Ah speckt ma judgment ain't as good as it once was."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Tell It to Luke McLuke.

The bustle, popular with the women and the jokesters of the '70s, has returned to Pittsburg. It moved down Fifth avenue this afternoon attached to a very pretty young woman who said she was Miss Collingwood. When the girl and the hustle turned into the avenue from Smithfield street there was a gasp from the crowd and inquiries of "What is it?" Elderly persons paused to inform the multitude that it was a bustle.

By the time the young woman had traveled a block, Pittsburgh's busiest thoroughfare was filled from curb to curb with a crowd.

Two policemen finally took Miss Collingwood in tow and led her into a banking house. Later she and her bustle were whisked away in a motor car.—N. Y. Times.

Seemed What She Wanted.

"I see this medicine is good for mas and beast. Yes," said the druggist. "Gimme a bottle. I believe that's the right combination to help my husband."—Kansas City Journal.

HEDGES AFFORD PROTECTION TO INSECTS

Wheat Field Destroyed by Grasshoppers Originating in a Rocky, Neglected Ravine Lying Between Them.

Wheat Fields Destroyed by Grasshoppers Originating in a Bordering Uncultivated Field.

(BY F. M. WEBSTER.)

Insects outnumber all other forms of animal life inhabiting the face of the earth. If the entire insect population of a single acre of arable farm land, in any part of the United States, could be brought together and carefully examined, hundreds of different kinds would be found, some of them doubtless new to the naturalist, the majority new to the farmer, but all either directly or indirectly affecting the financial interests of the latter. Comparatively few of these insects would be found actually to prey upon the grain or grasses over this limited area, the remainder being enemies either of the few destructive species or of each other. But the farmer himself would probably know little regarding the habits of any of them, despite the fact that he may have spent the most of his life in their midst, and sustained greater or less animal loss by reason of their ravages.

The business of farming has made immense strides within the last fifty years, but advancement in a knowledge of insects has not kept pace with this progress. Indeed, the modern farmer who plants his grain with a grain drill, harvests it with a self binder, and threshes it with a steam threshing machine, probably knows little if any more of these insects than did his grandfather, who a century ago sowed his grain broadcast, reaped it with a hand sickle, and threshed it with a flail. Inconsistent as it may appear, not one farmer in ten has even a business acquaintance with those insects that may cost him anywhere from 5 per cent. to 35 per cent of his crop. This apathy in regard to insects is doubtless due in part to their generally minute forms and obscure habits of life. But much is due to the innate propensity of men in general to consider the ravages of insects as insurmountable and incomprehensible phenomena of nature, like storms, floods, or unseasonable frosts, that must be accepted without question and without recourse. Indeed, in the minds of some they are dictated by a Providence whose acts are final and above question. Precisely a similar opinion relative to smallpox was held by the old Arabian physicians and by mediaeval schools.

A better knowledge of some of the fundamental principles governing insect life and development than at present prevails would teach the farmer that insect depredations are not to be placed in the same category with floods, storms, and unseasonable frosts, all of which are natural phenomena, not influenced by the acts of man. Ravages of insects, though natural, are in many instances the direct results of man's efforts to bring large areas of country out of a state of nature into a high state of cultivation. To destroy hundreds of kinds of plants, growing over large areas of country, replacing these plants with a selected few and increasing the proportion of these to the greatest extent possible is agriculture itself, and though it is practically feeding the civilized world, it is nevertheless contrary to the long-established natural order of things.

Probably not 5 per cent of the different kinds of insects that inhabit a farm are injurious, while many times as many are the farmer's friends, because they are engaged in destroying the pestiferous ones. In fact, the two prime elements in restraining insects are their natural enemies and unfavorable weather. It must be remembered, however, that weather affects both friends and foes. Probably many outbreaks of insects are not due to weather conditions especially favorable to the pests, but rather to those conditions fatal to their natural enemies; relieved of the restrain exercised by their enemies, the species at once develop in myriads and destroy the crops of the farmer.

Farmers have aggravated the situation by leaving uncultivated fields. These areas may be the margins of such fields, along fences or roadsides, or neglected patches, which, on account of their stony soil, or perhaps through other causes, remain uncultivated and neglected year after year. Neglected Osage orange hedges, with the usual equally neglected grass land along either side, form most attractive places for the chinch bug to pass the winter, and in the west destructive outbreaks of this pest have been traced directly to them. In the east outbreaks of the army worm are frequently to be traced directly to the densely grassy roadside, fence row or neglected orchard. The writer has seen whole fields of spring-sown oats destroyed by caterpillars of a small moth that hatched from eggs deposited in the neglected ground along a fence. In most studies of the outbreaks of insects pests, it has been found that these invariably originated in neglected patches in cultivated fields or else in the waste lands in the vicinity of the borders of such fields, or neglected roadsides, where the young insects fed until they were able to make their way to the crops.

A Well Kept Roadside Offering no Protection for Over-Wintering Insects.

The farmer should understand, that he can fight the enemies of his crops to greater advantage in these areas, by cutting old grass, weeds and shrubs and carefully burning them, than he can after they have become winged and widely spread in his fields.

WINTER PLOWING SAVES MUCH WORK

Freezing and Thawing Will Pulverize Soil to Bottom—Manure Is Also Essential.

Sod ground plowed any time when the weather permits will be well rotted and can be prepared for seeding as soon as the ground is in condition to work in the early spring. Oats and barley seeded early the ground being thoroughly mellow and flue, will nearly always yield a profitable crop of heavy grain and good straw. If there is a thin crust of frozen soil or even a light fall of snow on the ground when it is plowed it will work no injury, but will rather be a benefit. Sod land may be plowed when wet in the late fall and early winter months, the freezing and thawing during the winter will pulverize the ground clear to the bottom, giving a fine mellow soil for planting in the spring. Heavy sod should be plowed fully six inches in depth. It requires a stout, well-trained team and a good plowman to do good work. Most of the large farmers are using the three-horse sulky plow. These plows are easy to handle. More ground can be plowed in a day. The draught is easier on the horses and plowman. For potatoes and truck crops manure first from the stables and corn straw spread on top of the sod and then plowed under will make deep mellow and fairly rich land. This is the method followed by most of our large truck farmers and it is a good one. For fine seeds, such as onions, beets and most of the roots the ground must not only be deep, well filled with rotted manure, but there must be a generous dressing of fine, rich manure to spread on top of the ground and well mixed with the top soil with spring-tooth harrow and the ground made fine and level with the smoothing harrow. The smaller and choicer vegetables are mostly grown by gardeners. This method gives a mellow seed bed, one that will hold the light summer rains necessary for rapid growth and early maturity of the crop planted. Truckers nearly always have one-third of their land seeded to clover or rye and vetch to plow down to green manure. Gardeners, on the other hand, use large quantities of manure, follow close planting and all ground under crop both winter and summer. This is known as "full cropping."

Separate Sow With Litter.

The sow and litter will fare better if they are kept separated from the herd until the pigs are at least a month old.

Fighting Ringworm.

Ringworm is a contagious disease due to a fungus. Man, horses and cattle are commonly affected, and it is easily transmitted from one animal to another. The affection first asserts itself as a ringlike patch, with the hair broken off. The usual location is on the skin around the eyebrows, or muzzle, scattering from there over different parts of the body.

Treatment is sometimes easy, more often difficult to completely eradicate. All brushes and utensils in contact with infected animals should be sterilized. Wash the patch with soap and water, and apply tincture of iodine or lard and salicylic acid, six parts to one of salicylic acid.

Meal for Fattening.

In a general way there is little difference in the feeding value of wheat meal and corn meal, pound for pound, for fattening hogs. A mixture of the two, half and half, is better than either alone.

The KITCHEN CABINET

NEVER attempt to bear more than one kind of trouble at once. Some people bear three kinds—all they have had, all they have now, and all they expect to have.

—Edward Everett Hale.

FOR THE CHILDREN'S LUNCH BASKET.

The best stand by for any lunch is the sandwich, which may be varied ad infinitum. They may be made of white, brown, graham, rye, whole wheat, raisin, or nut breads.

For the little child who needs just a lunch, one or two graham crackers, one or two bread and jelly sandwiches, a small apple and a slice of sponge cake will make a good meal.

Cheese, fish and eggs in various forms or combinations may be used. A bit of chicken, lamb or beef roast, light desserts leaving out rich pastries and greasy, highly seasoned foods, tea and coffee.

Baked Apples.—Wash and core tart apples, plunge in a kettle of boiling water, drain and let cold water run over. Place in a pan in a hot oven and bake until tender. Then the skin may be easily removed before serving. Sprinkle with sugar and serve with sugar and cream.

Rice Cooked In Milk.—Wash a fourth of a cupful of rice, add it to a cup and a fourth of milk heated in a double boiler; stir the rice in with a fork and let it cook 20 minutes. Add a tablespoonful of sugar, salt to taste, and cook 20 minutes longer or until the milk is all absorbed. Serve warm with thin cream and sugar.

Never teach a child to like coffee or tea by warming the milk with those beverages. When a child refuses to drink its milk, give it straws to drink through, and serve the milk in a pretty cup or mug. Clear broth or gruel may be served this way, also.

A child has a natural craving for sweets, and this should be satisfied with good pure sugar in some form. A sandwich with butter and brown sugar or scraped maple sugar is always well liked.

When the tiny tot goes to kindergarten with his lunch basket, give him just enough to break his fast, and not enough to keep him from enjoying a good meal at noon.

Rice cooked in milk in the oven is a very simple, easy desert, and one good for the little people. Add a quarter of a cup of rice to a quart of milk, a handful of raisins, pinch of salt and sugar to taste. Bake until thick. Serve with a bit of butter and grated nutmeg, creamed with sugar, if so desired.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

During the winter, while oranges and grapefruit are abundant, is the time to make our marmalade.

Grape Fruit Marmalade.—Wash and wipe three each of grape fruit, oranges and lemons. Throw away the thick end pieces and cut the remainder into very thin slices. Reject all the fiber and thick tissue, and for each measure of fruit allow three of water. Put into a kettle and stand well covered for 24 hours. Then put on to the range and cook one hour, then add an equal measure of sugar, allowing a little more for good measure. After the boiling point has been reached allow the marmalade to simmer until it jells. Pour into glasses and seal with paraffine.

Fresh Cocoanut Cake.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one cup of light brown sugar. Beat in one whole egg and one yolk; add three-fourths of a cup of milk alternately with two cupfuls of flour mixed with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Pour into a square tin and bake in a moderate oven. When cool, cover with the following icing: Boil together a cup of brown sugar with a third of a cup of water until the sirup will spin a thread. Have ready a well beaten egg white, and add this sirup by tablespoonfuls, beating all the while. Spread on the cake and sprinkle thickly with freshly grated cocoanut.

Apple Kuchen.—Sift two cupfuls of flour with one-half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Cut into this four tablespoonfuls of shortening; add a beaten egg and three-fourths of a cup of milk. Put this into a well greased pan and place baking apples, pared and cored and cut in eighths overlapping over the top. Bake until nearly done, take out and sprinkle with sugar, cinnamon and bits of butter. Return to the oven and bake until a rich brown. Serve while warm.

SYMPOSIUM ON BREAD MAKING.

To have good results in bread making, one must have good yeast, the right temperature and careful handling.

If one uses the dry yeast, add one cake to a pint of potato water and a cup of mashed potatoes, a tablespoonful of sugar and a little flour, enough to make a thin batter. Set away to rise from noon until night, then set the bread, using a half a cup for three loaves of bread. This yeast will keep until it is all used, if kept in a cool place. Salt is added when the bread sponge is set. Knead the bread into a stiff loaf at night, then in the morning, the first thing, cut it down, then knead; let rise and make into loaves. When more than double its bulk it is ready to bake. When baked, do not cover with a cloth, but let it cool in a free circulation of air.

Light Rolls.—To two cupfuls of bread flour add a quarter of a cup of yeast, one and a half cupfuls of milk and water mixed, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls each of sugar and butter, beat well and let stand until light and full of bubbles. When ready to knead, add a well beaten egg and flour enough to make a dough stiff enough to handle. Knead, using just as little flour as possible until the dough feels elastic. Let it rise again until double its bulk, form into rolls, brush with butter, and when light bake in a hot oven.

Caraway Sticks.—Use the dough made for light rolls. Roll a small piece in the hands until a roll three inches long with tapering ends is formed; score with a sharp knife, brush with butter, sprinkle with salt and caraway seeds, and when light bake in a brisk oven. Keep well apart in the pan or they will not have a nice crust.

Raisin and nut bread may be prepared by adding the desired amount of fruit and nuts to the same dough used for the rolls.

Poppy seed and chopped almonds may also be used to sprinkle over rolls or a sheet of dough, which can be served in slices when baked.

A delicious fruit bread has grated lemon rind, chopped figs, raisins and almonds.

A WORD ABOUT CHEESE.

Cheese is one of our most highly nutritious foods, and one which will, with a bit of bread and fruit, make a well balanced meal.

The information that cheese is indigestible has been handed down from one generation to another until some people really believe it.

One reason for this belief is the fact that it is eaten on top of a meal which is too much for a stomach to dispose of easily, and the attack of indigestion is attributed to the cheese, when the whole meal itself is to blame.

The varieties of cheese are bewildering and are indeed a study. The history of different cheeses as to their origin is exceedingly interesting reading.

The kind of cheese to serve with certain courses is now a puzzle to many an entertainer for it is quite a breach of culinary etiquette to serve the wrong one at any course of the dinner.

Some of the popular cheeses are, Neufchatel, Gruyere, Roquefort, Camembert, Fromage de Brie, Gorgonzola, Sapsago, Stilton, Cheddar, Edam and Parmesan, not forgetting our own delicious American cheese of various kinds, which are a close second in many cases to the foreign products.

For macaroni cooking and all au gratin dishes there is no cheese that equals the Parmesan; it is procured already grated, and if bought in the Italian market you are sure to get the real thing.

If one has the leisure to look about in various shops and will collect the different varieties of cheese, study their history, where made and how, the knowledge will be forever helpful in one's travels.

For rarebits, souffles and the like there is no cheese which approaches the good old New York; in fact it is good anywhere and at any course.

England's Great Storm.

Grievous as has been the damage wrought in Europe by recent storms it is unlikely that they were more violent than England's great storm of 1703. A strong west wind had set in about the middle of November and it increased in violence until on the morning of the 26th few people ventured out of their houses, and on that night houses were unroofed, buildings torn down and thousands of people were killed. About 2,000 stacks of chimneys were blown down in and around London. In the Thames only four ships remained between London bridge and Limehouse; 500 wherries, 300 shipboats and 100 lighters and barges were entirely lost, and many were badly damaged. The damage in London alone was estimated at $10,000,000.

Public Opinion.

Public opinion is what we think other people are thinking; or it is what we think other people think we think. When we think we are thinking like other people, then we think they are thinking as we think. That is what we think is public opinion.

When we meet someone who does not think as we think, then we think that is not public opinion. When we meet, or hear of, a number who do not think as we think, then we think that what they are thinking is something contrary to what public opinion ought to be, and, indeed, will be, as soon as they all begin to think as we think they ought to think.

Public opinion is of two kinds—what it is not, and what we think it is. On the other hand, what we think is public opinion may not be what we think it is.

A VALENTINE HEART

By Joanna Single

THAT night Nancy returned from the office to find her brother's home, which she shared, full of St. Valentine sentiment. Allan had brought Maude a bracelet and theater tickets—his wife liked such attentions. Helen, her sister of eighteen, was blushing and blissful over Jack Harlan's extravagance in violets; even Baby May had come from the kindergarten with her fat hands full of lace-paper hearts. And it was the maid's afternoon off, so Maude asked Nancy if she would mind washing the dinner things. And would she be lonely if they all went out and left her with May, already asleep?

Nancy did not mind the dishes or being alone—she saw too many people downtown to want them at night. She thought of her unfinished book and a quiet place by the sitting room fire. However, as she buttoned Maude's theater waist up the back, and later helped Helen pin her mass of violets to her white party dress, and saw them all off, she felt alone—the odd one. She had caught a glimpse of her rather worn face in the glass over Maude's shoulder, and missing its fine strength, saw only the record of twenty-nine years in it. What had been ailing her lately?

With her characteristic refusal to procrastinate, she sat down in the dusk to think it out. She was not going to permit herself to grow into a state of discontent or unhappiness. Certainly every one was kind to her at home—and in the office.

Suddenly she frowned. Perhaps she was letting Flossie, the new stenographer, get on her nerves. The girl, dimpled, curly-headed, silly, was too obviously trying to attract her employer's attention. Nancy reflected that it was none of her business, but no woman likes a sister woman to make a fool of herself—and no woman can be a man's private secretary for six years without having an interest in his welfare. John Steele deserved a better mate than that—and yet Nancy knew that strong men, past their first youth, were prone to make just such a mistake.

She shook herself free of the thought and returned to herself. The plain fact was that her business gave her little time to cultivate her old friends, mostly married now and engaged in their own affairs. Her brother was wrapped up in his business and family. She, Nancy, was too much alone, growing too introspective. She was losing her individuality and independence, and needed to take more care of herself, mentally and physically.

Still in her black office dress, with its white collar and cuffs, she stretched out a little in the big chair by the fireplace where the fire was low, and, not wanting the lights, sat thinking. She put up her hands in a fashion of her childhood and rumpled her heavy brown hair, usually so trim; her sweet, steady gray eyes filled with tears, which she promptly suppressed. Self-pity, she thought, was the last straw of humiliation! Why should she be sorry for herself? If the office irked her, why not take a rest? Her grandmother had, with the year past, left her a little money. She would resign. Why had she not thought of it before? Flossie could take her place, and she would travel and find broader interests.

Then it came upon her how much John Steele had been in her mind, and she fought it out with herself on the spot. She would not, simply because she was lonely, let herself fall in love with the only attractive man near her own age whom she saw much of—and her employer, at that. That was too banal! What would he say when—she resigned? Would he care? He was not so foolish! No; he had showed her every courtesy in the office—the same courtesy he showed to all women, but never the little light attentions he showed even to Flossie, to whom, that very morning, he had, on entering, tossed a smile and a rose as one would a ball to a kitten.

The girl was so soft and pretty—he could not be blamed. But she, Nancy, would straightway resign before she made a fool of herself. It was high time.

It had grown dark in the room, and she was still lost in planning for the coming year when the doorbell roused her. Flushed and startled, not stopping even to smooth her hair, she went into the hall, where the light burned low. She opened the door.

She did not realize that it was John Steele till he asked, with an attempt at lightness, if he might see Miss Stanton, Miss Nancy Stanton.

"She welcomes you," she answered, lightly enough, deciding he had called to talk business—he often asked her advice, and she knew he had some important matters under consideration. She bade him enter, and he followed her into the sitting room, where she turned on the lights, half blinding herself by the sudden glow. She pointed to the big chair where she had been sitting, and then began to resuscitate the fire; but in his mastering way he put her aside and went at it himself. Then he turned and faced her, noting her flush, her lovely disordered hair, her bright, steady eyes. But she returned his gaze, making herself rise to the situation, as he questioned her.

"What were you doing in the dark? Where is your family?"

"It's St. Valentine's day, and they're out junketing. As to what I was doing, Mr. Steele, if you must know, I was resigning my secretaryship with you. Just as you rang I was wording it—wondering whether to be businesslike and polite, or to say simply, 'I'm tired of working for you. I want to go abroad this spring, and I intend to do it—let Flossie have my place!'"

She held up her head and smiled at him. Why couldn't the man say something instead of staring at her?

"You anticipate me," he replied gravely. "I came to discharge you. I don't think I can—keep you in the office any longer. In fact, Nancy," he stammered like a boy, "I can't bear the sight of you in that office a moment longer! Oh, can't you see what a sentimental fool you have made of me? What are you going to do with me? See what I did today—wait a moment!"

He went into the hall while she stood half dazed. What was he trying to say, and bungling it, too, this clear-headed man of business? Was he jesting? He returned with a purple box, which he handed her.

"See—violets! The thought of you made me buy them and wonder all day if I dared bring them to you! And here!" He drew something from his pocket. "Here is a lace-paper heart surrounded with doves and roses! Would you mind taking that, too, as part of my general silliness? What do you think of me?"

She was very pale now, but waited in silence.

"I've done even a madder thing—brought you my heart; all I have, all I am and ever shall be! Could you manage to work with me instead of for me? Couldn't you love me a little?—no, I mean with all your heart, for you're no halfway woman, Nancy! Will you?"

She nodded, hoping she was not going to be foolish enough to cry because she was so happy.

"I think I—could," she murmured "I think I should like that—even better than—my—present position!"

He caught her hands in his and looked at her with delight. The violets fell unheeded to the floor and the lace-paper heart fluttered and fell just out of reach of the fire ready to lick out a lean tongue for it.

Then John Steele suddenly clasped her close in his arms as if he never would let her go. They stood a long time before the fire, then they sat down to talk about it—so many things had to be talked over.

"Something was in the air today," he finished presently, "that gave me courage. And on the street this morning a fool girl I know tossed me a rose. When I entered the office I met Flossie's unendurable, dimpled simper, and I threw the rose at her. Then I looked at you and seemed to see something new in your face—I believe it was the first time in the months since I have known that I loved you that I saw a sign of personal regard for me, a something that gave me leave to speak my heart out! I don't know what the look meant, but it brought you nearer—it somehow made you human—it—"

Nancy finished for him.

"It was 'human'—very human and like a woman! It was plain, vulgar jealousy! I could have crushed Flossie, curls, dimples, smile and all, for that rose! How hateful my face must have been!" Then they both laughed and forgot all about Flossie.

CLEANED THE DOC'S BUGGY

Which Was Not What Boys Intended to Do, but That Was the End of the Adventure.

"I remember," said Uncle Josh, who had just finished a hearty dinner and was in the humor for telling a yarn, "I remember one balmy day in July when the other boys and I decided to steal old Doc Hoffum's horse and buggy and drive to the river to go swimming. Doc was visiting at our house that day, and it looked easy to us to drive two miles over to the river and get cooled off and then bring the horse and buggy back before the old man missed them.

"There were a good many of us and we were not dressed very fine. Slim, for example, was attired in a long linen duster that flopped out behind. The springs allowed us to bump pretty hard, there being so many passengers, but we got to the river safely.

"We had a bully swim, but Slick said he thought we ought to wash the buggy while we were there. The way to do it, he said was to run the buggy into the river.

"We unhitched the horse and proceeded to back the buggy into the water. But the buggy got away from us, and away it went, much further than we expected. We couldn't hold it and so it disappeared entirely. A couple of bubbles came up and that was all!

"While we were diving to locate the buggy the horse got away, and we all took after him. We chased him around a clump of trees, half of us on one side and half on the other to head him off. Both parties rounded the clump of trees at the same time and ran plump into a camp meeting, mostly women!

"We let the horse go then and by that time we had forgotten where we left the buggy."

"I suppose some one stole all your clothes while you were gone," suggested the man from Topeka.

"No," said Uncle Josh, "we found our clothes, and from their position on the bank we figured out where the buggy ought to be. One of the camp meeting people brought the horse back and we got a rope from him and dived around until we got the rope tied to the buggy. Then we got it out on the bank. That is the only time Doc Hoffum's buggy was ever clean!"

"Didn't it hurt the buggy?" asked the man from Topeka.

"Didn't harm a thing but the squeak. The bath utterly destroyed that. Old Doc Hoffum often wondered what had become of the squeak, for he missed it badly. The horse missed it, too. It was a good, soothing sound that the two of them were accustomed to doze by as they jogged over the road."

Even Thing.

"Sir," began the man with the newspaper in his hand, as he turned to the man on his right, "this is an age of deception."

"I quite agree with you," was the reply.

"Nothing is what it seems to be."

"No, nothing."

"For instance, you have been trying for the last ten minutes to get hold of my watch. I wear a chain, and the natural inference is that there is a watch on the end of it."

"But there is no watch."

"No, sir. I wear the chain for an ornament. You have simply thrown away your time."

"And on your part," said the man who had failed, "you took this scarf pin for a real diamond, and have made no less than three trials to secure it."

"And it is not a diamond?"

"No, sir—only a dry goods store rhinestone, but I wear it for an ornament, and it serves my purposes. You have wasted your energies. It's an even thing, however, and let's go for that old duffer as he gets off the car and whack up on the boodle."

What! Against Veils in Girlington?

The vicar of Girlington, Bradford, Rev. George Pedley, deals in his parish magazine with the wearing by women of motor veils and shawls in church.

"Many years ago," he writes, "we forbade the use of shawls in church. Much was said at the time, but the rule is observed. Too often a shawl is a convenient cover for an untidy head and dirty appearance. There is, however, a respectable makeshift springing up in the form of a motor veil.

"There are all the signs of respectability otherwise, and therefore assurance that the person possesses hat or bonnet.

"Twice lately this 'get-up' has been seen at the service of holy baptism. We object to it . . . because it shows a sad want of reverence."—London Globe.

May Have Meant the Clown.

State senators are placed in a new classification by an Italian who was desirous of becoming a citizen of the United States. He was being examined for admission before Justice Crane in the Queens county supreme court, at Long Island City. Justice Crane came to the question:

"What is a state senator?"

"I don't know," was the reply.

"Did you ever see one?" asked Justice Crane.

"Oh, yes, I see them," said the applicant.

"Where?" asked Justice Crane.

After considerable thought the man replied: "They keep them in circuses, I see them there."

He was advised to devote further time to study.—New York Sun.

Rare English Coin.

A unique gold coin has just been purchased for the nation by the trustees of the British museum, with the assistance of private subscribers. It is the only known example of the gold coinage of the Anglo-Saxon King Offa (A. D. 757-796), the most celebrated of all the Mercian princes, the friend of Charlemagne, and the recipient of many present from that emperor. It is the earliest gold coin that can be definitely ascribed to any English king. Although struck by a Christian king, it bears a Mahommedan inscription in Arabic.

Her Only Justification.

Senator Root's capture of the $10,000 Nobel peace prize recalls the Rooseveltian dictum that Root is the ablest man in America.

"It recalls also many stories of Mr. Root's brilliance at the bar. One of these stories is about a woman who sued a railroad company for $25,000 for the loss of her thumb, which had been destroyed in a rear-end collision.

Mr. Root—a young man then—opened the defense with the words:

"Twenty-five thousand dollars for the loss of a thumb. Well, gentlemen of the jury, the only justification I can see for so exorbitant a claim is that it was the thumb the lady kept her husband under."

His Guess.

Bacon—I see Kansas City, Kan., had [illegible] divorces in 1912 against 1,234 in 1911.

Egbert—I take it that some of the 1,234 divorced in 1911 didn't marry again, then.

Practical Effect.

"Can't that man get along in his talk without so many 'damns?'"

"I'm afraid not. He's a mill builder."

The man who wastes his time doesn't seem to realize that he will need it all before he dies.

There's Many a Way.

G. Roy Hill, secretary of the Automobile club of Minneapolis, has invented this:

A motorist was telling of a trip through the Red River valley. The party, he said, came to a stream, but the bridge had been washed away during a cloudburst.

"After we got on the other side we found ourselves on the finest kind of a road," he pursued.

"Yes," he was asked, "but how did you get your car across that stream?"

"Oh, we just sat down and thought it over."

Melting Aluminum.

While charcoal should be invariably used in melting brass and bronze, states the Brass World, it is not only useless in melting aluminum, but dangerous. Aluminum is so light that the charcoal is apt to become intermingled with it, and the castings made from it will have small specks and pieces in them.

INSURANCE MAN TALKS.

A Temperance Talk to Voters

BY JASON KEP

Sometime ago while in conversation with an insurance man, I asked him if he thought that a moderate use of intoxicating liquors had tendency to shorten life, that I did not mean hard drinkers; but what is called regular bitters men.

He said, "We do not think, we know that it does. You know that life insurance is considered cold blooded and in a sense it is; for we do take anything for granted, we do not do any guess work or we would soon be out of business. Now here are some figures that ought to satisfy you on that question. They are the result of many years of observation and count."

Comparison of length of life of drinkers and abstainers, compelled from life insurance tables of mortality:

Total abstainers at 20 years of age, expectancy 44 years. Moderate drinkers at 20 years of age, expectancy 31 years. Hard drinkers at 20 years of age, expectancy 15 years. Abstainers average life 64 years. Moderate drinkers average life 51 years. Loss 13 years. Hard drinkers average life 35 years. Loss 29 years.

I said, "Do you mean to tell me that those figures represent facts? the true state of affairs?"

"Those figures are the result of many years of careful study, and have been taken from our policy holders list. Many companies will not accept risks on moderate drinkers and the lines of all insurance companies are being drawn closer year by year. Experience has taught us that a large percentage of moderate drinkers become hard drinkers, yet any one of them would become indignant if you suggested that he might be one of them.

We know that alchohol taken into the system tears down the tissues of the body and weakens it and leaves it less able to withstand or throw off disease.

The harm worked by alcohol upon the health does not always at once show its ill. It may be unnoticed until some other cause reveals the weakness.

Surgeons dread operations upon regular drinkers, for the chances are they will spoil their general average.

When a drinking man gets pneumonia the bets stand about five to one that the undertaker gets a job. Heart failure among that class is getting to be as common as wonder berries.

Pshaw, what is the use of my talking, you couldn't beat it into the average public citizen with a base ball bat. They don't case and each one thinks he is too blamed smart to let it get him.

The most young fellows start to drink for the same reason that Eve swiped the apple. She knew it was mighty risky business, but she wanted the experience and she got it. Yes and we all have to suffer from the blamed foolishness of these fellows who start to drink. Not counting the hardships of their wife and children; but look what it does to the balance of us, 50 per cent of the paupers, 55 per cent of the insane, 85 per cent of the criminal court work and 90 per cent of our murder and suicides are caused by drink.

Now any sane man knows that it increases our taxes; we must give up just that much more of our hard earned dollars to pay for the added expense. Isn't it about time to take some rational thinks on the subject?

We have fooled along for years trying to regulate it and made a foozle of it. Every place where there is a saloon you will find drunkenness on the increase. Why? Because you can not regulate a thing that is inherently wrong. There is only one way to handle the liquor traffic successfully and that is to kill it.

Don't bring up that fool statement "you can't stop it you must regulate it." That is the saloon keepers slogan. It is all bosh. You are just acknowledging you are too weak to govern yourselves when you let less than 5 per cent of the people dictate what you shall do. Prohibition doesn't stop murder but the penalty attached makes the old boy stop-look-listen.

They said you couldn't stop slavery, that it was Divine Right, but we did and the slave holders see that it is better for them, better for the slaves and better for the Government.

If we blotted out the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors it would be better for the liquor men. Would add 20 years to their average life, better for everybody, and it would cut off the premature death of the 152,000 who die drunkards every year.

Gee! that is more temperance than I have talked in five years. When I look around and see the millions of intelligent people who seem to take no interest, I get disgusted and close up like a clam.

I said, that was a pretty strong temperance lecture. You could do a lot of good if you would get busy and help to educate the people. You know all the inside facts and could make a lot of converts to the cause. There are thousands of people just like you; they know that if the 35,000,000 million church members fully understood the situation and were shown their duty, they would come into line and push, but like you they have closed up like a clam and like you, have worked and voted for wet candidates, while the real temperance people have been moving heaven and earth to try and elect dry legislatures.

You know the people have been trying to get a local option bill through the Pennsylvania legislature. You know the men you worked for, made speeches for and voted for have voted against it year after year.

It is just such men as you who have held back the temperance movement.

You are a blamed good fellow, but not a temperance man. If you are a temperance man you are not a good citizen for you don't shoot as you pray.

Better turn over a new leaf, join in and work and vote for dry men, for Temperance.

He said he would hereafter. Will you?

JASON KEP.

The man Who Makes A STUDY OF HIS APPEARANCE
is the man who best appreciates the detail of the tailoring we turn out The workmanship passes without a question, the fit is naturally a matter of course, but the shape we mould into the garments give them a character that finishes them off and makes the satisfaction of the owner complete.
All this is a bid for your next tailoring order. We know we can make you the best clothes you ever wore. We want you to know it. That order is the best and only sure way to settle the question.

OPTOMETRIST
IS Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 30 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 20 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientinc accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

HUDSON Six-40
$1750
(f. o. b. Detroit)

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country
See This Innovation
A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.
They were sold on these startling facts:
That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.
That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.
That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.
That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.
Think What This Means
Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.
Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far undersells any Four in its class.
You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.
A Distinguished Car
In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.
Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.
Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.
And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.
Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

NATIONAL ROAD IN GARRETT COONTY TO RE COMPLETED

Bids for the Resurfacing of the Highway Asked By The Road Commission.

The State Good Roads Commission, by a ivertisement in this paper today, invites bids for the resurfacing of the Old National Road from Grantsville to Keyser, a distance of about six miles, which will complete that portion of the historic road lying in Garrett county and which will give the residents of Garrett county an unbroken stretch of modern highway reaching from the Pennsylvania State line on the west to the Allegany county line on the east, a distance of about twenty eight miles.

With the letting of this contract by the Commission work in building good roads in Garrett county will be carried on at three different points within the county—that portion of the highway from Piney Bottom to Avilton, trom Grantsville to Keyser and from Hoyes to Accident. It is expected that the Commission will in a very short time ask for bids for the completion of the proposed improvement of the road system in the county for the building of a section of road from Accident by way of Kaese's Mill to intersect the Pike at Keyser, which will give the people of the county a well built system of highways beginning at Oakland and running through the western section of the county to the Pike which will enable automobilists to reach Pittsburg on the west or Baltimore on the east within comparatively few hours after leaving the county seat of Garrett.

SPELLING BEE LARGELY ATTENDED

Much Interest Was Manifested at the Gathering Last Thursday Evening.

The spelling bee conducted under the auspices of the Civic Club of Oakland at the Court House last Thursday evening, was largely attended and interest in the affair was manifest throughout the evening.

Mrs. Richard Connell and Mr. E. Z. Tower were captains of the respective sides, while Capt. Sanner was pronouncer.

Mrs. Connell's side carried off the honors, seven remaining standing when the last of Mr. Tower's side went down. Mr. C. F. Dodge, of Terra Alta, lost out on the word teetotaler.

The affair being given by the Civic Club a silver collection was tak en a the door amounting to something over $23.

SENATOR SPEICHER AN EXTREMELY HAPPY MAN

His County-wide Bill Safely Through Committee and Virtually a Law.

Annapolis, Md., February 18.

Senator Harvey J. Speicher is the happiest man in Annapolis today. After weeks of pulling, fighting and maneuvering his Garrett County Local Option bill is practically a law as far as all purposes and interests are concerned. The bill has safely reached the third reading file in the house and its final passage and signature by the Governor are conceded even by the bill's bitterest opponents. And the trick was turned without a single fight or debate on the floor of either branch of the Assembly. But the result was not obtained without a struggle. Seldom has there been more pressure brought to bear in Annapolis on a single county's legislation than was used in this local option fight and the credit for ultimate success belongs almost wholly to the Garrett Senator.

For weeks the latter, like an alert watchdog, has followed the progress of his bill, which incidentally was the first measure introduced in the Senate during the present session. Whenever a rough corner of opposition was encountered Speicher was on the job to smooth out the trouble and he has finally received his reward. Personal pleas, pressure from high sources and even a bit of politics were necessary to finally put the bill over. The trick was finally accomplished yesterday afternoon when the House Temperance Committee brought in a favorable report on the bill. The stage settings had previously been arranged and though the opposition was still apparent no attack or attempt to amend the bill was made because its opponents realized that they had a majority of the votes in the House against them. Senator Speicher was in the chamber when the report was read and he breathed a sigh of relief when the Speaker announced that the House accepted the report and that the bill should be printed for its third reading and final passage.

"My, that's a load off my shoulders," he sighed, a happy grin spreading over his face. "I'll have a good night's rest tonight and I believe I'll deserve it." Several friends of the Garrett countian who were nearby hurried to his side to congratulate him.

So quietly did the bill go through that uninitiated would believe that not an iota of opposition existed towards its passage but such was not the case. Earlier in the day Senator Speicher and the Garrett House delegation had appeared before the Temperance Committee to urge a favorable report. In opposition to them two residents of Oakland made vigorous speeches for an unfavorable report. Speicher acted as the spokesman for friends of the bill and he made a telling argument. Within a half hour after the hearing a report went out that the committee would offer a favorable report. And still the opponents of the bill did not give up hope.

Members of the House of both political parties were appealed to fight against the favorable report but the pleas were unavailing. A mysterious but strong influence has been at work earlier in the day in anticipation of the of the report and though many of the lawmakers expressed their sympathy and their personal views against the bill none seemed willing to make the fight to overrule the committee's report.

The apparent probability of lack of organized opposition did not cause Speicher to let up for a single mimute Clear up to the time the report was made he campaigned for the bill. And the results were an acceptance of the favorable report by a unanimous vote.

Though he tasted defeat there is one opponent of the bill who fought a good fight. He is William Miller, the Garrett distiller. For weeks he has haunted the corridors of the Statehouse, buttonholing the legislators and pointing out to them the drastic features of the Speicher bill. He worked faithfully, tirelessly and not until convinced that a majority of the House were against him did he give up the fight. Many of Mr. Miller's personal friends were among these he counted on for support but as had been stated before a stronger influence had been at work and none of these men would show their friendship to the extent of "bucking" the committee's report. The committee itself, or at least a majority of its members, are believed at heart to be against the local option legislation, but Speicher by his maneuvering had brought the Garrett House members together as a unit and the latter united with him in appealing for the bill. Hence the committee in making an unfavorable report would have been compelled to ignore the wishes of the solid county representation.

While the fight has been a bitter one it was fought without personal feeling or animus. Both Speicher and Miller of the opposition, fought in the open, each grasping support where he could, and when the combat was over the two men shook hands and acknowledged each others' prowess.

Plainly speaking, Senator Speicher's friendship among members of the majority party was the instrument which turned the trick. The sentiment of the House is anything but favorable towards temperance and left to themselves the members, it is believed, would nave made short work of the Garrett bill.

An instance of that was shown late last week when the Speicher and Shartzer bills prohibiting the sale of liquor within two miles of any school house or church outside corporate limits was walloped to a standstill. The temperance committee reported unfavorably on the Shartzer bill and the anti-temperance folks within a few minutes had tied the subject up so tight as to prclude its reopening during this session. Therefore the change in sentiment was all the more remarkable. But as had been said before the fight is over and the bill within a few days will receive its final passage and will go to the Governor to be signed.

Throughout the fight Speicher has played a clever game. He introduced the bill as early as possible in the session, by quick thinking had it referred to a select committee instead of the regular temperance committee and again had it passed by the Senate before opponents of the bill knew what was going on.

Another important point about the bill is that it sets a precedent for the session in that the House Temperance Committee will have a hard time to turn down any county delegation which appeals solidly for favorable action on temperance legislation.

The local option fight has been so absorbing that little else has been done from a county standpoint. On the House side the Garrett delegatihn has offered little new legislation. Mr. Shartzer's election bill to provide for all election advertising in a single paper has been given its final quietus. Other county measures are due for reports within a few days.

The Assembly has done little other than accomplish routine work during the past six days. Last week the Democrats in the Senate on a strict party vote unseated Quince Ashburn, Fusionist of Worcester, and seated Orlando Harrison, Senator John Walter Smith's friend. The trick was only accomplished after Senator Speicher, mihority member of the Election Committee, had rallied the other Republican Senators about him and had waged a strong fight to save Ashburn.

The mass vote talk is still going the rounds with the Smith people working like mad to defeat the bill and extend the county unit to senatorial primaries. Oyster legislation is the big talk of this week. The tidewater legislators are bent on repealing the Haman planting laws and the Shellfish Commission acts and on wiping out the entire oyster culture industry. On the House side the oystermen are making a telling fight and they stand a strong chance of putting over their plans. The Democrats have decided to make road legislation a strict party measure and last night a caucus was held to determine what amount the loan should be and whether $1,000,000 for a new Light street bridge near Baltimore should be included in the amount.

Governor Goldsborough has started to send his batch of appointments to the Senate for confirmation. All of the blue bag must be in by February 25. The Governor started the ball on Monday night by reappointing Dr M. Bates Stephens as Superintendent of the State Board of Education.

FELL AND BROKE LEG

Robert Wolf Slipped And Was Painfully Hurt This Morning.

This morning as he was on his way to work in the Liller barber shop Robert Wolf slipped on the pavement fronting the residence of Mr. David Durst on Oak street and broke his leg just above the knee. He was taken to his home where he is being attended by a physician.

Terra Alta Civic Club

The Terra Alta Civic Club has been organized by women of Terra Alta with the following officers: Mrs. A. J. Elliott, president; Mrs. C. T. Kelly, first vice president; Mrs. G. D. Furbee, second vice president: Mrs. J. H. White, recording secretary; Mrs. S. M. Scott, Jr., corresponding secretary; Mrs. D. L. Wotring, treasurer.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. Richard Connell, of Oakland, a member of the Oakland Civic Club, who in a good talk outlined the work to be covered by such a club.

George W. Haulenbeck Hurt

Mr. George W. Haulenbeck, 70 years old, 315 East Twenty-fourth street, attached to the law department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, was badly hurt yesterday morning when he was struck by a bicycle ridden by a boy on the sidewalk. The accident occurred at Twenty-fourth and Barclay streets. The police, did not learn the identity of the boy. Mr. Haulenbeck was taken to his home and attended by Dr. W. T. Wiley, 2129 St. Paul street. Later he was taken to the Church Home and Infirmary.—Baltimore Sun of Friday.

MARYLAND'S GOVERNOR STANDS ON HIS RECORD

Goldsborough Says He Has Given a Non-Partisan Administration.

Concerning a number of partisan hills now before the Legislature designed to grab from the Governor the right of appointment to various offices Governor Goldsborough said:

"Since my election to office I have endeavored to make my administration as nearly non-partisan as it was possible for a man who held office as the representative of a party to make it. As evidence in proof of this I can point to the type of men on the various boards of Baltimore city. In my campaign I promised that I would if elected not permit the police force of Baltimore to meddle m pohtics and that I would name a type of men on the Police Board that would give proof to the citizens of the State that I meant what I said, and that this applied likewise to the police examiners and the Liquor License Board.

"Since the induction into office of these boards the conduct of their official duties has received almost universal commendation. The only complaint I have heard has been from a party standpoint; that, in fact, they could not be used to play Republican politics.

"The work of the Liquor License Board in clearing out numerous saloons in the red-light district was an initial work, not only in Baltimore city, but elsewhere. I do not recall any other city where just such an effort has been effectively used by the license board and I was told by a visitor the other day from another state who was looking into the questi n that nowhere had this work been done more effectively.

"Likewise in my campaign through the state one of the strongest arguments used against my election was that I would put the schools into politics. I repudiated the indictment then and I have not been and will not be convicted under it. Upon my entrance into office I found the school boards of all the 23 counties dominated by their Democratic membership and the county superintendents in all the counties belonged to the same party.

"There have been about seven or eight changes in county superintendents, the remaining being undisturbed, and in every instance where there was a change, it is my judgement, it made for the betterment of the schools and the uplift of the people in the several counties. This statement will, I believe, be borne out by a majority of the impartial people in the counties referred to.

"The State Board of Education while now having on it a majority of its members who are Republicans, has confirmed the nomination of B. F. Purdum, a Democrat, as Assistant State Superintendent of Education, as named by Dr. M. Bates Stephens, the Superintendent.

"In the selection of Republican and Democratic School Commissioners it has always been my aim to get as representative a type of citizen as it was possible to get. I understand a bill has been introduced in the senate by Senator Price while, if passed, would legislate out of office the present State Board of Education, creating a new board, to serve at a salary of $2,000 a year each, and composed of three members, S. King White, of Wicomico; Dr J. S. Bowen of Baltimore county, and Clayton Purnell, of Allegany, the last gentleman being a member of the present board, whose term expires in May next.

"So far as I am capable of judging the reason underlying this desire to grab the school boards of the state is clearly political, some of the advocates of the bill being those who are now connected with the educational system of the state, if I am credibly informed, others who used to be associated with it but who are now out of office, and in one instance one now holding a minor or a not a day job, here in Annapolis, and other gentlemen of more or less political prominence and not of any other prominence throughout the state.

"That the present State Board of Education is an intelligent, wide-awake and progressive body is a fact well known to every impartial person who is interested in the cause of state wide education. Proof of this has been given by their acts since being in office and by the policies for the future, as expressed in their annual report to the Legislature.

"As to the hospitals for the insane, I take it for granted that all fair minded people who know anything about these institutions will admit that the administration of their affairs during the past two years has not been contaminated with politics. Indeed, they have been run upon a high plane of efficiency, and in 1913 a system of co-operative purchasing of supplies of saving many dollars to the tax payers of the state.

"As to penal institutions, my well known interest in the reform of them is such as to vouchsafe that the politicians are not to hold sway over the unfortunates within their walls, and I have urged and helped to bring about many measures of reform which have proved most humane and to the great betterment of the criminal classes.

"A commission appointed by me has been studying this subject, and will soon make its report, to be followed by a bill under which, I understand, a state wide commission would be appointed to have full care and direction of the penitentiary and the House of Correction, as well as provide for an advisory board on pardons, and in all likelihood recommended an indeterminate-sentence statute.

"It is not out of place to call attention to the character of work done by the justices of the Peoples Court and likewise the excellent administration of the Bereau of Statistics and Information which has charge of the enforcement of the Child Labor law, and also the work being done by the Ten Hour Law Bureau for Woman.

"In recently appointing two members of the State department of Health, it may be noticed that one of the gentlemen was a Republican and one a Democrat. This is true also of two trustees just named for the Maryland Agricultural College.

"As another instance that the administration of my office has been free from unfair partisanship it may be recalled that I had no hesitancy in issuing a writ of election for a United States Senator to succeed Hon W. P. Jackson, just so soon as I had been advised of the proclamation by Secretary of State Bryan of the ratification of the Seventeenth Amendment, and this was done in the face of much opposition and of scores of legal opinions that there was no legal or constitutional warrant for the issuance of such writ."

TO OIL 77 MILES OF ROADS.

Highway Commission Invites Bids For This work.

In another column of this paper today announcement is made that the State Roads Commission will oil all the improved sections of the National Highway in Washington, Allegany and Garrett counties. This aggregates nearly 77 miles, and 233,232 gallons of oil will be used. The oiling will be done in the spring, and sealed proposals are asked by the Roads Commission. This will include only stretches of roadway of the National Highway that have been macadamed, oiled and improved in recent years in the above counties, from the Washington county line to the Garrett county line.

Sealed proposals to do the work will be received by the State Roads Commission, at its offices, 601 Garrett Building, Baltimore, until Febuary 26, 1914, when they will be publicly opened and read. Bids are to be made in writing, and forms, specifications and all information will be furnished by the Commission upon application. The successful bidder will be required to give bond for $5,000 and comply with the Acts of the General Assembly respecting contracts. Garrett county will have over 20 miles of oiled roads when the work is completed.

THE DEATH RECORD

THOMAS HARRIS

Thomas Harris, aged fifty years, died at his home in Mountain Lake Park Saturday morning after an illness of about seven years of tuberculosis of the spine. He is survived by his wife and five children. He was a carpenter by trade. He was a member of the M. E. church and a most excellent citizen. His funeral occured from his late home Monday, the services being conducted by the Rev. Marquess, pastor of the Park church.

ALEXANDER WILEY

Alexander Wiley, of near Bittinger, died Monday morning aged more than eighty-three years. He was the eldest son of Holmes Wiley, a mighty hunter of big game in his day, and was a life-long resident of the county. A more extended notice of his death from the pen of our Bittinger correspondent will appear in this paper next week.

The Ladies Thimble Club of Oakland, gave an elaborate dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Weber, on Tuesday evening, which was attended by the members of the club, their husbands and a few invited guests.

Miss Margaret Howell returned home yesterday afternoon from a month's visit to Baltimore relatives.

Miss Nell McComas went to Baltimore yesterday to visit relatives for a short time.

GOLDEN JOBILEE OF THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

Semi Centennial of Institution of First Lodge to Be Universally Observed.

The "Golden Jubilee" ot the Knights of Pythias will be observed this coming week in more than 7000 cities, towns and villages in the United States and Canada, and will commemorate the semi-centennial of the institution of of the first lodge of an organization whose career and progress has been the marvel of the world's greatest "fraternal age."

Teaching lessons which inspire manhood at its highest and best, to nobler efforts in making the world brighter and better, the development of the spirit of Fraternity among men, has been one of the most significant of the marvelous achievements that have signalized world-progress; and in the broad field of fraternal endeavor, occupied by more than 6000 different organizations, whose out-reach ot influence is so wide as to include one man in every three on the continent, no society or organization laurelled with grander achievements than the Order of Knights of Pythias, which in a period of half a century, has grown from a single lodge of thirteen government clerks, instituted in Washington February 19, 1864, to a continent-wide fraternity with nearly 800,000 men in more than 7800 lodges, making it the third largest society of its kind in the Western Hemisphere.

The Order of Knights of Pythias had its conception in the dramatic a and thrilling story of the friendship of two Pythagoreans—Damon and Pythias, in Syracuse, Cicily, during the reign of Dionysius the elder, 406 B. C.

A young schoolmaster. Justis Henry Rathbone, read the story in the drama of John Banin, an Irish litterateur, who put the incident into dramatic form in 1821. Young Rathbone was so impressed with the story that when he moved to Washington in the latter part of '63 to become a government clerk, he resolved to write the ritual of a new fellowship and base it on the friendship of Damon and Pythias. This was during the crises period in the nation's life; the Civil War had been in progress for nearly three years, and there was a great need of new alignment of the brotherhood of man. Rathbone, on February 16, 1864, read his ritual to four fellow clerks, and they were so impressed with its value that another meeting followed four days later with 15 government clerks present. At the meeting, in Temperance Hall, Washington Lodge, No. 1, Knights of Pythias was instituted and a new chivalric force was projected into the life of the nation. Of the "original thirteen" two—Abraham D. Van Derveer and Edward S. Kimball—are still living and retain their member ship in the Order.

It was at first thought that the Order should be confined to Washington, and its membership restricted to government clerks; but the principles it enunciated were needed elsewhere the new society began to grow at the close of fifty years it is ex in membership by only two one centuries old and the other to celebrate its centennial in this country. Today there are 7800 lodges, and nearly 800,000 men in the Order; and the slogan is "A million members in our Golden Jubilee year, 1914.

The FUTURE of AVIATION

FUTURE OF AVIATION AS AN ARTIST SEES IT

THEN years ago, among the sand dunes of North Carolina, a slim, gaunt, intense Ohioan stretched himself downward on a narrow ledge surmounted by yards of outstretched muslin, a compact, powerful little engine purred at his heels, and a giant, inanimate thing of spruce and cloth swept like a falcon out over that silent, sea coast desert. A little telegraph office at Kitty Hawk, N. C., an hour later startles a world with the laconism: "The Wright brothers have flown." It was the word civilization had awaited hundreds of years. For the dream of flying is as old as civilization decade has passed since man "sprouted his wings." The world has watched him from his first weak, tiful bounds from mother earth for brief seconds aloft to his hours and even a day in steady sustained flight. It has ceased to marvel, and it expectantly has come to look to the future—to wonder "what next." Ten years ago Wilbur Wright flew at Kitty Hawk for 59 seconds. Today the record for sustained flight is 14 hours and 1,300 miles.

In ten years the aeroplane has made more rapid strides than did the automobile. More than a thousand men, with a fair percentage of women, today are driving aeroplanes in all parts of the world. The first successful flight of the Wrights has almost been forgotten so great has been the progress of the aeroplane and the increase in the number of aviators.

The English channel has been crossed and recrossed by one, two and three persons in an aeroplane, aviators have swept up and over the fearsome peaks and abysses of the Alps; whole continents have been crossed in aviation races; the United States has been spanned by an American, who lost his life in a comparatively trivial exhibition feat. But the present asks: "Well, what of the future? What will these birdmen be doing ten years from now?"

From the stage of pure amusement, the period when aviation was alone for the daring, those who were counted foolhardy and the show people of the air, flying is working toward a commercial stabilization. The men who cling to aviation today are those with ideas of making it a recognized asset of commerce. The era of aerial transportation is upon us.

They will have crossed the Atlantic ocean, penetrated the dismal jungles of Africa, scanned the tropical fever-ridden areas of the Amazon, brought back the word from the remote regions of ice and snow? Perhaps. But greater still, aeroplanes will be a proven adjunct of commerce. Our mails will be shot to almost inaccessible points through the air. The trackwalker of the great railroad system will give way to the critical eyes of a man-bird sweeping swiftly along the ribbons of steel. Through tangled wood and over swollen river the telegraph and telephone lineman will skim with his vision focused on narrow strands of copper wire. Far into Alaska, reached today only by toiling dog train and intense suffering, will go the aviator with mail supplies and even luxuries. These are but a few of the suggestions of aeronautical activity.

There are aviators flying today who, seemingly, are almost as safe in the air as if on land or on the water. After all, most of the deaths of aviators have been due to accidents which resulted from carelessness on the part of some one, either the flyer himself or his mechanician.

So confident are aviation experts that the aeroplane has been developed to a stage where it can be used in every day business that many of them are attempting to adapt it as a carrier of the mails. Many of the Alaskan wastes and sparsely settled regions of the west could be traversed in hours where now it requires days.

The French government was the first to apply the aeroplane to the practical delivery of the mails. The aeroplane has given a fast mail service in parts of desert Africa. Henry Woodhouse, an expert on things aeronautical and editor of Flying, a magazine devoted entirely to the airmen, recently predicted wonderful progress in the aeropost.

"Each month," he wrote, "something happens to emphasize more forcefully the value of the aeroplane for mail carrying, and whereas it is usually demonstrated in places where there is an efficient mail-carrying service—by the ordinary methods—it is made more and more evident that aeroplane mail service will be a boon to such places as Arizona, Colorado, Texas, New Mexico, Nevada, Alaska, the Philippines, Canada and South and Central America.

"The conquest of the desert by aeroplane is complete. Traveling a mile a minute, it crosses from oasis to distant habitation in a few hours. The French government in the last six months has employed twoscore of aeroplanes to carry mail, provisions and passengers from Casa Blanca, the port, to different points along and across the desert. With this aerial service it has been found that intercommunication and transportation between points on the desert is faster than in certain places in Europe and America. The aeroplane has shown that it is to become a potential factor in solving the problems of advancing civilization in Morocco, Algeria, Tripolitania, Congo, the Soudan and in Zambesi.

"It already has saved thousands of lives in the French campaign in Morocco and Italian campaign in Tripolitania—for which it has never received credit from the world at large—by always watching the movements of the enemy, thus avoiding those unpleasant surprises which have crimsoned the pages of the history of the conquest of Africa.

"Other demonstrations have been given practically each day of the last year. Every one of the flights of Garros, Brindejonc de Moulinais, Guillaux, Rider and the threescore of other airmen, who make flights of from 500 to 1,300 miles a day, are forceful demonstrations of the increased swiftness in mail carrying which the aeroplane affords."

Advocates of the aeropost for Alaska point out that last September United States army engineers traveled half way across Alaska to a point two degrees from the arctic circle—traversing altogether about 826 miles—in 19 days. The aeropost proponents say any of the well-known cross-country aeroplane drivers of today could have accomplished the trip, with or without mail, in one day and many others could do it in three days at most.

United States government officials have indicated their willingness to help in developing the aeroplane for the mail service. Postmaster General A. S. Burleson, in a recent letter to Woodhouse, showed his desire to encourage the aeropost advocates as much as he can.

"I fully realize," he wrote, "the necessity of keeping abreast of the needs of the postal service for the rapid transmission of mail and of using every possible facility to this end. In line with this conviction the department is ready at all times to give careful study and consideration to such new means of transportation as may be discovered and developed. We have repeatedly given official aid to aviation meets throughout the country by establishing special postal stations and authorizing the transportation of mail temporarily by aeroplane.

"These activities, of course, are recognized as experimental, but I am persuaded that the time is rapidly approaching when the department will be called upon to give serious consideration to the feasibility of aerial mail transportation. The adoption of such means, however, can only be brought about after it is demonstrated they can be furnished and maintained within the proper limits of economy."

That no future war will be fought without the aid of the aero scout is a foregone conclusion. This is evidenced by the invaluable aid the aeroplane gave the French and Italians in their recent troubles in Morocco and Tripoli, and to the various armies engaged in the recent warfare in the Balkans. United States army aviators every day now are scouting along the Mexican border watching over the huge army camp in which men are living every day on the chance trouble with Mexico may start at any time.

Increase is being made in aeroplane equipment of [the world's armies every] week. France leads in the number of aeroplanes. [Total more than 265,] and the French have one aeroplane for the navy.

Russia has 116 army aeroplanes and Germany has [Japan has 10, Great] Britain has about 30, Italy has 25 and the United S[tates about 25. England] has six for the navy. [illegible] Japan [Italy have four each] Russia has one and Germany two.

Cross-country flights in 1912 and 1913 show conc[lusively aeroplanes can] be relied upon to cover great distances at high spee[d. The greatest flight in] 1912 was that of Andreadi, who, in a Nieuport machi[ne from Sebastopol] to St. Petersburg, 1,670 miles. He took 25 days for t[he trip.

Great things are ahead of the aeroplane. A priz[e of $50,000 has been of]fered for the first flight across the Atlantic ocean. N[o car or the year after] some venturesome aviator, using a hydroaeroplane, [probably will have at] tempted to fly from England to America or from A[frica to England, and] the success of the venture will mark [illegible] [day as a war agent,] [continent and cross]ing.

passengers, the es[tablishment of aerial ferries and the inspection of long sections of railroads.] Already it is being utilized by telegraph line inspectors in remote sections of the far west.

It is Editor Woodhouse who points out that railroad inspectors could cover more ground and make better and quicker reports by the use of the aeroplane.

"Using an aeroplane," he declares, "inspectors can inspect the road at a speed of between 40 and 70 miles an hour. By using moving picture machines an inspector can photograph the line at the rate of 50 miles an hour, and allowing six hours of traveling to each day he can in three days present to the executive officers of a railroad a film showing the detailed conditions of 1,000 miles of road, which the officials can go over at their meeting and know the exact state of the road and the land adjoining the road.

"As was shown by the experiences of C. P. Rodgers and Robert Fowler in their trips across the continent, rails offer certain advantages over broken country for landing on and starting from. An aeroplane having wide roller wheels finds the rail an every-ready platform to land on and start from.

"A railroad considered the matter of using aeroplanes a year or so ago, but they were deterred from employing them by the excessive cost of securing competent aviators to operate them. At that time competent aviators were still drawing large incomes from exhibition flying, and as that particular railroad which was willing to consider the employment of aeroplanes found that it required 12 aeroplanes for the purpose, the salary item became too excessive to be practical.

"But now that competent aviators can be had at from $50 to $100 a week, and almost any intelligent mechanic can be trained to operate the kind of machine needed for railway surveying, the proposition assumes a practical aspect and there is no doubt that railroads will readily see the advantages of using aeroplanes for this particular purpose."

Editor Woodhouse, like many other aviation experts, believes it will be only a question of time when the aeroplane will be developed for use in connection with the revenue cutter service, irrigation service, life saving and light house service and in the bureaus of fisheries, forestry and gological survey of the national government. South and Central America are as yet practically virgin territories for the development of aerial navigation.

Aviation experts are engaged in devising the best way to make an aeronautical map of the world. Tremendous increase in air navigation, combined with the widening radius of dirigibles, crossing countries, continents and even seas, as they have, has made the necessity for the aeronautical map imperative.

The need of well trained, capable young men to take up aviation is pointed out by Woodhouse, who believes, with President Richard C. Maclaurin of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, that it is a duty on the part of educational institutions to provide instruction in aeronautics.

"Aerial flight of today," Dr. Maclaurin says, "is either an engine of war or an exciting amusement. Its greatest use at present is for pleasure, but before it can be very greatly developed it must be freed from its more serious dangers.

"The men who must see to making reasonably safe the sport of flying must be trained engineers and men of science, and such men are produced in the higher technical schools and colleges. It is for such reasons that the Massachusetts Institute of Technology now makes official a line of work that heretofore has been possible only as an adjunct to other courses."

And so aviation as a science stands. Men in every walk of scientific endeavor are trying to improve it. The nations of the world are spending $89,000,000 this year to forward the progress of aviation. With expenditures increasing every year wonderful things can be expected in the next decade. In the meantime constructive geniuses like Orville Wright and Glenn H. Curtiss are working in secret to improve the aeroplane, and flying geniuses are working in public to show it to the world.

The Wrights, Wilbur and Orville, were the first to demonstrate that a heavier-than-air machine could be made to fly. Before them, for many generations, men had tried to solve the problem of aerial navigation, but the spherical balloon up to 1903 practically had been the only air craft that could be relied upon to carry passengers.

Some of those pioneers in the search for flying honors previous to the success of the Wright brothers are: Prof. Samuel P. Langley, one time secretary of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington; Sir Hiram Maxim; M. Clement Ader, who was killed during his experiments; Otto Lilienthal, a German; Octave Chanute, civil engineer; Percy Pilcher of England, killed when experimenting; Prof. John J. Montgomery of California, and many others.

NAME GOT HIM IN TROUBLE

"Bogus" He Pronounced It, and Recruiting Officer Didn't for Some Reason Seem to Like It.

Cecil W. Bogess recently enlisted in the United States navy, but his name came near keeping him out of the service. Mr. Bogess, it seems, pronounces his name "bogus," and to that fact was due the trouble he encountered when he applied for enlistment. This is what happened when Bogess appeared before Lieut. Eldred B. Armstrong, U. S. N., and asked to be enlisted:

"What is your name?" asked Lieutenant Armstrong.

"My name is 'Bogus,'" answered Mr. Bogess.

"We don't take bogus names here," declared the lieutenant. "You might as well come clean with your legal name. We haven't time to spend in joking in this office. What's your name?"

"It's Bogus," repeated the applicant, honest it is."

The recruiting officer wondered if it was the heat and implored the young man to divulge the name he inherited from his parents and the one they decided to bestow upon him.

Bogess sighed and muttered something under his breath. The lieutenant objects to muttering, and his ire was aroused instantaneously.

"I'll get this over," he [illegible]ed. "Tell me your name or get out of here. We aren't taking men into the navy who have no names."

"But my name really is Bogus," reiterated the other. "If you don't believe it you can write home. Everybody knows me down there."

Then it occurred to Lieutenant Armstrong to hand a piece of paper and a pencil across the desk to his troublesome caller and told him to write his name and address.—Fleet Review.

Making Ready for Summer Time

THE "summer girl" should take to heart that good old adage which advises that in times of peace we should prepare for war. Now that days are cold, evenings long and spring styles already fairly well settled, she should get ready for the summer season. All of her dainty lingerie—so much more worth-while when made at home—and several of her pretty gowns will make the last of winter fly away. The work is so interesting and its constant suggestion of springtime so inspiring!

If one knows how to embroider even a little bit, the smartest of white voile gowns made up with laces, should be got under way. Fashionable embroidery for gowns will not try any one's eyes, for it is done in bold stitches, like the strokes of a paint brush.

Flounced gowns and draped skirts are to be with us this spring. Printed voiles and cotton crepes will be popular, and taffeta silk has an assured triumph before it.

White voile and lace may be combined to make a dress like that pictured here. There is a plain foundation skirt of net or a very thin fabric, with a flounce of lace about the bottom. Over this are three plaited flounces of voile, draped as shown in the illustration.

The bodice is a drapery of lace over a baby waist of voile. For the more practical American girl this French design is likely to be changed a little. The voile underwaist is to be made with round Dutch neck and elbow sleeves, over which the same simple drapery of lace will fall. This makes a dress that is appropriate for both afternoon and evening, and is one of several styles for gowns of the same character.

The summer girl must provide herself with sashes and girdles. With them she can ring changes on her pretty clothes. Beads, too, must not be neglected in her summer equipment. And it is not a matter of quality so much as of color that counts in beads.

Winter days and evenings will not be dull for the young woman who is enterprising enough to engage in the most absorbing of occupations, and that is, getting together and making ready the new wardrobe. It is a pity to leave this work to some one else and not to put into each pretty gown and accessory something of one's personality.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY

WHITE CRAPE, COMBINED WITH BLACK, FAVORED

THE small round turbans and hats which are so popular in our new styles are particularly adaptable to hats of crape.

For hats of this kind the shapes chosen are those that set squarely on the head, with average-size crowns and narrow brims.

The model shown can hardly be excelled as an example of beautiful millinery made of crape. The composition of the hat is simple and the workmanship and materials flawless—as they must be in millinery of this character.

The drooping brim is covered with a fold of black crape and over this a second fold is placed. These crape folds are cut on the bias of the fabric, which makes the "rib" or ridge, run straight across them.

The crown is covered with one end of a long crape veil laid in a box plait at the front, and with three deep plaits at each side. The shape is decorated with a wide bias collar of white crape stretched about the crown and brim and tacked to place so that it conforms to them. This wide collar is finished with a narrow fold of crape at the upper edge.

The veil is hemmed, by band, at the bottom and along the sides. The bottom hem is three inches wide, but side hems are only a half inch in width.

The weight of the crape veil used in the manner described here, is evenly distributed and it hangs straight from the back.

There are not many crape hats that can be successfully made outside a millinery workroom. But the simplicity of this design makes it possible for the expert needle-woman to put it together at home. It is, nevertheless, a beautiful model from one of those Fifth avenue houses that specializes in hats of this kind.

PLAITS ON THE UNDERSKIRT

Indispensable for Wear on the New Evening Gowns That Are Being Worn.

Many of the new evening gowns show plaited underskirts. The plaits are either of the accordion order or quite flat; they fluff out at the hem in a most engaging manner, and for dancing they are quite ideal, because when made of Oriental satin or charmeuse they cling in about the feet and look eminently graceful.

For walking costumes also plaited skirts become more and more fashionable.

Two of the most notable dress artists of the Rue de la Paix have always refused to countenance ultra tight or ultra-short skirts. On one occasion a famous dressmaker was heard to say that he had never in his life permitted an entrave skirt to leave his establishment. And then the majority of the noted painters who have recently interested themselves so much about modern fashions have voted in favor of plaited skirts and floating draperies.

These experienced artists have pointed out, and with reason, that a charming woman becomes doubtly fascinating when she is enveloped in mystery, when her pretty feet are partly hidden, when her graceful form is disguised and yet displayed by skillfully arranged draperies.

How to Place Your Rugs.

To preserve harmony in a room, the rugs, whether one or more, must be laid on the floor with the edges parallel with the edges of the floor; not thrown on, creating all sorts of ugly spots by the rugs and by the floor spots left around them. If one rug is used it should conform as nearly as possible to the room proportions, particularly when the room is pleasing in its proportions. When the room is not so the rug may help to make it so. For example, if the room is too long for the width, select a rug which will nearly cover the room in width and will leave a considerable area of floor exposed at either end. This will tend to shorten the appearance of the room and to shorten it in length by opposition of direction. If a room is to be distinctly a period room, an Oriental rug can seldom be used to advantage.

Modish Handbags.

Handbags are usually in satin or velvet. Even for morning or shopping, except with a dark-colored tailor-made, one may carry a bag in very smooth and shiny leather, very long in shape and lined in black with very simple clasps. Very dressy bags are made in silk broche with white, cream or pale blue flowers on a white ground. An additional smartness is given by tiny flowers embroidered over beads. For evening, handbags are entirely made of beads, and only just large enough to hold a handkerchief. The clasp is a jewel in gold or silver.

What She Wanted.

"I suppose," said the new saleswoman, "that you want a suit that will make you look attractive to your husband?" "Attractive to my husband!" echoed the shopper. "I should say not. He wouldn't know if I wore a suit ten years old. What I want is something that will make my next-door neighbor turn a pale pink green with envy."

CRUST COVERED BOY'S HEAD

Bolton, Ga.—"My little boy's head was covered with a hard thick crust which cracked with the least pressure causing a discharge of bloody corruption which was so offensive that I could hardly hold him. He was very cross. Some called it milk crust, another running tetter and another eczema.

"After trying several patent medicines I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After using the sample I purchased some Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment three days I was able to remove all the crust and in one week he was entirely cured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment also cured my baby of an ulcerated sore behind her ear and now we think we cannot keep house without them." (Signed) Mrs. Charles Poss, Nov. 5, 1912.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering Last Found Help in Lyd E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Queen's Close Friend.

Mount Stephen, whose husband is likely to succeed Lord Strathcona as high commissioner for Canada to London, is probably Queen Mary's closest and most intimate friend. Before her marriage in 1897 to the Canadian millionaire peer, she was Miss Gian Tufnell, and was lady-in-waiting and the favorite companion of the late duchess of Teck. She has been the friend and confidante of the queen from her girlhood, as well as a great favorite with all the members of the Teck family.

Statesmen and Large Families.

The revival of discussion on the failing birth-rate recalls some of the schemes of statesmen and others to encourage the rearing of large families. Pitt, for example, said that they should make relief in cases where there was a large number of children a matter of right and honor, instead of a ground of opprobrium and contempt, and he added that that would make a large family a blessing, and not a curse. Napoleon offered to take under his own charge one member of any family which contained seven male children. And Louis XIV., for whom no extravagance was too great, had exempted from public taxes all those who married before the age of twenty, or had more than ten legitimate children.

SCHOOL TEACHERS, Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I had used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head, and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general "gone" feeling, with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years back I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friends made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Soon I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."

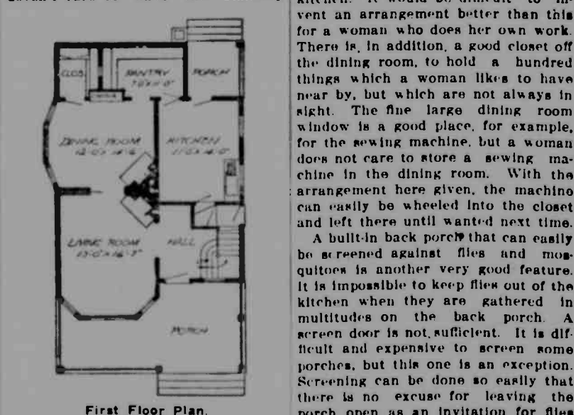
Almost perfect as regards comfort and economy is the little house illustrated in the perspective view and floor plans herewith. It is a six-room house 27 feet wide by 38 feet long, exclusive of the porch. It would be difficult to put the same amount of building material together in any other form to make such a perfect arrangement of rooms, and not exceed in cost the amount of money that this house can be built for. Prices vary so much in different parts of the country that it is impossible to make an estimate of cost which will apply to every location; but a range varying from $1,400 to $1,700 may be given as a rough estimate for this cosy little cottage.



The tastes of individuals in selecting materials has a great deal to do with the cost of a house in quality of finish and hardware. The cost of extra fine locks and hinges is not so much in itself, but if the same grade of furnishing is carried throughout there will be a great difference in the final footing up of the bill. We have all heard of the story about the man who was ruined by a pair of lace curtains. When the curtains were hung it was discovered that everything else about the house must be in keeping or the curtains would not look right. It seems very easy to set a higher standard, but it is difficult to live up to it, because any high ideal standard has so many branches leading off in different directions, and it is the following up of the different branches that involves so much expense.

This is a style of house that will never go out of fashion. We may have

Second Floor Plan.

fads about different kinds of entrance ways and different artangements of rooms; we may do away with the front room; but after we have experimented with all the different arrangements possible to make, we shall come back to the front hall and front stairway going up from it, with a good, comfortable living room to one side, as an old standby for the most satisfactory and desirable entrance to a dwelling. Every woman likes to have a front hall and a front stairway, and she doesn't care to have the stairway placed in some inconvenient corner just because that happens to be a fad. Some of the peculiar structures that are now being built will be considered freaky and undesirable in a few years' time. They may look very pretty when new, and the oddities worked into them may appeal for a time to certain young folk who think they want something smart or a little different from the ordinary, but such people usually acknowledge after a while that they made a mistake in selecting the house plan they did.

First Floor Plan.

One of the most desirable features in this house is the two open fireplaces—one in the living room and the other in the dining room. It is intended, of course, to heat the house with a small furnace in the cellar, but there are many days in the spring and fall when we do not want a furnace fire, and yet the house is too chilly and uncomfortable without some artificial heat. Then, too, there is a saving in the winter time by running the furnace low and having a grate fire to keep one room warm enough to sit in. A temperature of 60 or 65 is warm enough for the whole house if you have the dining room or living room heated up to about 72. By managing this way, probably a ton of coal would be saved during the winter.

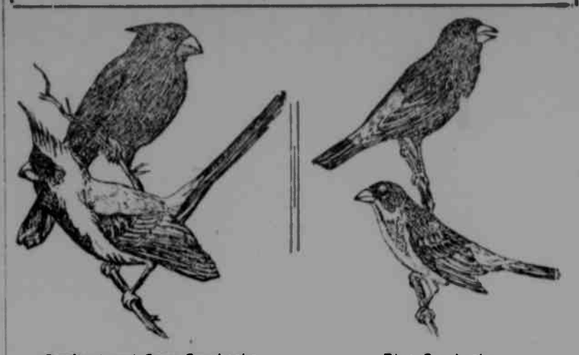
But there is a greater advantage than this. The open fire is not only the most cheerful fire that you can have, but it is the best ventilator that was ever put into a house. You can not have good air in a dwelling without some proper means of changing it, and this should be continuous. You can open the doors and windows once in a while, and let the foul air out and the fresh, pure air from the outside come in and take its place, but you can't be doing this all the time. On the other hand, a fire in the grate is drawing the foul air from near the floor all the time and sending it up the chimney. Good air from outside comes in through the cracks around the doors and windows to take its place. Some people make the mistake of using double windows and rubber strips to keep this pure air out. I don't understand intelligent people doing that way in these days of education. Everyone understands that pure air is absolutely necessary for good health, and I cannot understand the peculiar mental process by which people can deliberately set themselves to work to shut out their greatest necessity. I have acquaintances who never open a window if they can help it. I notice they usually open their pocketbooks every little while to pay a doctor's bill. There is, however, no law to compel them to breathe pure air if they don't want to.

Another point of superiority about this house is the arrangement of the dining room, china closet, pantry and kitchen. It would be difficult to invent an arrangement better than this for a woman who does her own work. There is, in addition, a good closet off the dining room, to hold a hundred things which a woman likes to have near by, but which are not always in sight. The fine large dining room window is a good place, for example, for the sewing machine, but a woman does not care to store a sewing machine in the dining room. With the arrangement here given, the machine can easily be wheeled into the closet and left there until wanted next time.

A built-in back porch that can easily be screened against flies and mosquitoes is another very good feature. It is impossible to keep flies out of the kitchen when they are gathered in multitudes on the back porch. A screen door is not sufficient. It is difficult and expensive to screen some porches, but this one is an exception. Screening can be done so easily that there is no excuse for leaving the porch open as an invitation for flies and mosquitoes.

Recognize Equality of Women.

In the Pacific ocean, far beyond China and Japan, lie the only two countries in the world which fully acknowledge the equality of men and women by giving political rights to all citizens of twenty-one, regardless of sex. They are New Zealand and Australia.



New Zealand was the first by a dozen years to put her daughters on a suffrage equality with her sons. It was in 1867 that the cry was raised, "Shall our mothers, wives and sisters have suffrage?"

The answer was given in 1893 by the full enfranchisement of women. In Australia the chance came more gradually, province by province. But a few years ago the final concession was made, and now Australian women, like their sisters of New Zealand, are the equals in this way of their husbands, brothers and sons.

VALUE OF GROSBEAKS TO AGRICULTURE

Cardinal and Gray Grosbeaks. Blue Grosbeaks.

(By W. L. McATEE.)

Seven kinds of finches, commonly known as grosbeaks, are to be found within the boundaries of the United States. The majority of these are good friends of the farmer and deserve to be widely known in order that their services may be appreciated. The grosbeaks are easily distinguished from other finches by their stout forms, bright plumage, massive bills and melodious voices. All of these birds perform invaluable service to our farmers by destroying certain of our own worst insect pests.

The rose-breasted grosbeak, potato-bug-bird, has an extensive range, breeding from Kansas and the mountains of Tennessee north to Canada and north and east to the Atlantic ocean and Newfoundland. The rose-breast has long been held in high esteem because of its habit of preying upon the potato beetle, and the name potato-bug bird suggests its important services in this direction. Larvae, as well as adult beetles, are consumed, and a great many are fed to nestlings. No less than a tenth of the total food of the rosebreasts examined consists of potato beetles—evidence that the bird is one of the most important enemies of the pest. Its services in devouring other exceedingly harmful insects are scarcely less valuable.

The cardinal, redbird, ranges from southern Mexico, Lower California, and Arizona, north to Iowa and Ontario, and east to the Atlantic coast. It is a great enemy to the rose chafer, cotton worm, plum or cherry scale, and other scale insects, and attacks many other important insect pests, including the zebra caterpillar of the cabbage, the cucumber beetles, billbugs, locust flea-beetle, corn-ear worm, cotton cutworm, southern fig eater, codling moth, and boll weevil. In addition it consumes a great many seeds of injurious weeds. Thus its food habits entitle the bird to our esteem as its brilliant coat and spirited song compel our admiratoin.

The black-headed grosbeak, western grosbeak, ranges from southern Mexico to British Columbia. North Dakota and Nebraska. It fills the same place in the west that the rose-breast does in the east, and economically is fully as important. Instead of being regarded as an enemy by western orchardists, the blackhead should be esteemed as a friend, since it is a foe to the worst pests of horticulturists — the scale insects — which compose a fourth of its food. The black olive scale alone constitutes a fifth of the bird's subsistence, and the frosted scale and apricot scale also are destroyed.

The blue grosbeak is a small but beautiful bird which breeds over the southern two-thirds of the United States. Blue grosbeaks do no damage during the nesting period, and, in fact, are of great value to any farm they choose for a home, since they eat many insects. A tenth of the subsistence is made up of purslane caterpillars and cotton cut-worms, enemies of sugar beets and cotton. Because of its effective warfare on these pests, the blue grosbeak is an efficient ally of the farmer and deserves to be protected.

The gray grosbeak, parrotbill, enters the United States only in Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico. Like the blue grosbeak it is more fond of caterpillars and grasshoppers than of other insects. Weevils are next in order of preference. In August and September seven-tenths of the gray grosbeak's food is weed seed, five-tenths consisting exclusively of the seeds of two of the most important weeds of the south, namely, foxtail, and bur grass. So far as known, the gray grosbeak eats practically no beneficial insect and damages no crop. This, in addition to the fact that it feeds upon noxious weed and insect pests, entitles it to complete protection.

Planting wild fruit is important for the purpose of attracting birds. Besides the fruits above mentioned, the following are valuable: Dogwoods, hollies, juniper, bayberry, Virginia creeper, blueberries, blackberries and wild grapes. Not all the thickets on a farm should be removed, since they serve to harbor birds, to protect them from enemies, and to furnish nesting sites. Where thickets are lacking, the growth of artificial ones should be encouraged for they are very attractive to grosbeaks, particularly to the cardinal.

A permanent drinking and bathing place on the farm and in the garden is to be numbered among the most potent attractions for birds, and with a little ingenuity one can be prepared in almost any locality. Winter feeding serves to attract the cardinal, which relishes corn, sunflower, and other seeds, and takes kindly even to table scrap. If particular premises prove congenial as a winter home, the bird is likely to prefer them in summer.

No efforts to attract grosbeaks will succeed, however, unless protection is assured. Grosbeaks are already protected by law in practically every state, but, since the machinery for the enforcement of the laws is often ineffective, statutory protection must be supplemented by individual action, particularly under trespass laws.

THROW AWAY THAT BIG CLUB

Every Time You Strike a Meat Animal With It You Injure Its Value at Market and Your Bank Account Must Suffer.

A lot of systematic money savers are the meat handlers of the United States.

We refer to the men who buy live stock and convert it into cuts to be sold over the butcher's counter. They are constantly warning the grower of live stock, the men who handle it in transit to market, and alike those who handle it at market, to "LAY DOWN THE CLUB" and avoid bruising the animals.

The men who buy live stock, upon slaughtering it and finding bruised carcasses, are losers where they are unable to discount the losses by buying the stuff at a lower figure than prevails for sound animals free of bruises, which have been handled by men who have a LITTLE HUMANE CONSIDERATION FOR THEIR PROPERTY.

The club in a live stock handler's fist, swung in a ft of temper upon the back of an animal, acts as a boomerang in that it rebounds and hits the purse of the owner of the animal a hard blow.

The big packers keep a careful record of their live stock purchases. THEY KNOW THE ORIGIN OF A BRUISED ANIMAL and the seller is held to account for their loss. His punishment comes INDIRECTLY, but it is a PRICE PUNISHMENT, which should teach him that inconsiderate treatment of live stock IS NOT GOOD BUSINESS POLICY.

Exercise care in handling your live stock at home; insist upon careful handling in transit and at market.

Everybody hates a club swinger. He is a fellow whose mentality appears weak. There are on the statute books severe penalties for inhumane treatment of animals, but the severest penalty for a man who wields a club over the back of an animal ought to be the guilt of his conscience.

Let's throw away the club and handle live stock in a manner which will insure its delivery at the slaughter house in condition to command the highest price BY REASON OF ITS FREEDOM FROM BRUISES WHICH NEVER OUGHT TO BE FOUND ON THE CARCASS.

The Separator Helps.

The fine working parts of the cream separator will collect more dust, grease, etc., during the cold weather than in the summer, making it necessary to run some coal oil through it to clean and loosen it up.

The separator now supplies cream that is pure cream at all seasons. There was never a more opportune time for home butter making. If done in the proper manner it can easily compete with the creamery, for the latter has all classes of milk supplied.

Protein in Dairy Ration.

The farm-dairy ration without clover is short of protein, and without roots or ensilage it lacks succulence. Oil meal furnishes both in the cheapest form, as grain. In other words, protein in oil meal is cheaper at $30 a ton for the oil meal than in corn at 50 cents a bushel.

Bad Management.

If your hens do not produce eggs in winter, make up your mind that management is at fault.

Catch Sea Cow on Coast.

Whether the skill shown by William Steamer, negro fisherman, in lassoing a large shark at the Breakers Hotel pier, caused the appearance there of a sea cow has stumped even the old time yarn spinning fishermen who pride themselves as solvers of acquatic riddles.

A score of persons were gathered on the pier watching several West Indians draw in their nets. Much to the surprise of the spectators and the negroes the sea cow was brought to the surface of the water. Fishermen well acquainted with these waters say that the sea cow is now extremely rare, so much so in fact that it is against the law to kill one. Consequently, after the negroes had hauled it close enough to the pier so that its cumbersome form could be seen the cow was released. In view of Steamer's feat and the later incident, the waters around the pier have been called the corrall.—Palm Beach (Fla.) Dispatch to New York Herald.

Uric Acid Is Slow Poison

Excess uric acid left in the blood by weak kidneys, causes more diseases than any other poison.

Among its effects are backache, headache, dizziness, irritability, nervousness, drowsiness, "blues," rheumatic attacks and urinary disorders. Later effects are dropsy, gravel or heart disease.

If you would avoid uric acid troubles, keep your kidneys healthy. To stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills—the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Queen's Close Friend.

Mount Stephen, whose husband is likely to succeed Lord Strathcona as high commissioner for Canada to London, is probably Queen Mary's closest and most intimate friend. Before her marriage in 1897 to the Canadian millionaire peer, she was Miss Gian Tufnell, and was lady-in-waiting and the favorite companion of the late duchess of Teck. She has been the friend and confidante of the queen from her girlhood, as well as a great favorite with all the members of the Teck family.

Statesmen and Large Families.

The revival of discussion on the failing birth-rate recalls some of the schemes of statesmen and others to encourage the rearing of large families. Pitt, for example, said that they should make relief in cases where there was a large number of children a matter of right and honor, instead of a ground of opprobrium and contempt, and he added that that would make a large family a blessing, and not a curse. Napoleon offered to take under his own charge one member of any family which contained seven male children. And Louis XIV., for whom no extravagance was too great, had exempted from public taxes all those who married before the age of twenty, or had more than ten legitimate children.

SCHOOL TEACHERS. Also Have Things to Learn.

"For many years I had used coffee and refused to be convinced of its bad effect upon the human system," writes a veteran school teacher.

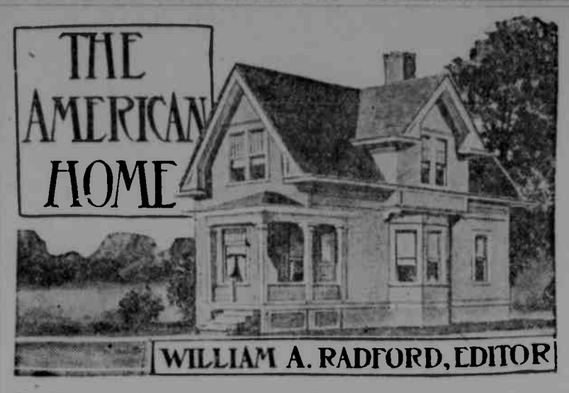
"Ten years ago I was obliged to give up my much-loved work in the public schools after years of continuous labor. I had developed a well defined case of chronic coffee poisoning.

"The troubles were constipation, flutterings of the heart, a thumping in the top of my head, and various parts of my body, twitching of my limbs, shaking of my head and, at times after exertion, a general "gone" feeling, with a toper's desire for very strong coffee. I was a nervous wreck for years.

"A short time ago friends came to visit us and they brought a package of Postum with them, and urged me to try it. I was prejudiced because some years back I had drunk a cup of weak, tasteless stuff called Postum which I did not like at all.

"This time, however, my friends made the Postum according to directions on the package, and it won me. Soon I found myself improving in a most decided fashion.

"The odor of boiling coffee no longer tempts me. I am so greatly benefited by Postum that if I continue to improve as I am now, I'll begin to think I have found the Fountain of Perpetual Youth. This is no fancy letter but stubborn facts which I am glad to make known."



Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Write for a copy of "The Road to Wellville."

Postom now comea in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and augar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

Almost perfect as regards comfort and economy is the little house illustrated in the perspective view and floor plans herewith. It is a six-room house 27 feet wide by 38 feet long, exclusive of the porch. It would be difficult to put the same amount of building material together in any other form to make such a perfect arrangement of rooms, and not exceed in cost the amount of money that this house can be built for. Prices vary so much in different parts of the country that it is impossible to make an estimate of cost which will apply to every location; but a range varying from $1,400 to $1,700 may be given as a rough estimate for this cosy little cottage.

The tastes of individuals in selecting materials has a great deal to do with the cost of a house—in quality of finish and hardware. The cost of extra fine locks and hinges is not so much in itself, but if the same grade of furnishing is carried throughout there will be a great difference in the final footing up of the bill. We have all heard of the story about the man who was ruined by a pair of lace curtains. When the curtains were hung it was discovered that everything else about the house must be in keeping or the curtains would not look right. It seems very easy to set a higher standard, but it is difficult to live up to it, because any high ideal standard has so many branches leading off in different directions, and it is the following up of the different branches that involves so much expense.

This is a style of house that will never go out of fashion. We may have fads about different kinds of entrance ways and different arrangements of rooms; we may do away with the front room; but after we have experimented with all the different arrangements possible to make, we shall come back to the front hall and front stairway going up from it, with a good, comfortable living room to one side, as an old standby for the most satisfactory and desirable entrance to a dwelling. Every woman likes to have a front hall and a front stairway, and she doesn't care to have the stairway placed in some inconvenient corner just because that happens to be a fad. Some of the peculiar structures that are now being built will be considered freaky and undesirable in a few years' time. They may look very pretty when new, and the oddities worked into them may appeal for a time to certain young folk who think they want something smart or a little different from the ordinary; but such people usually acknowledge after a while that they made a mistake in selecting the house plan they did.

First Floor Plan.

One of the most desirable features in this house is the two open fireplaces—one in the living room and the other in the dining room. It is intended, of course, to heat the house with a small furnace in the cellar; but there are many days in the spring and fall when we do not want a furnace fire, and yet the house is too chilly and uncomfortable without some artificial heat. Then, too, there is a saving in the winter time by running the furnace low and having a grate fire to keep one room warm enough to sit in. A temperature of 60 or 65 is warm enough for the whole house if you have the dining room or living room heated up to about 72. By managing this way, probably a ton of coal would be saved during the winter.

But there is a greater advantage than this. The open fire is not only the most cheerful fire that you can have, but it is the best ventilator that was ever put into a house. You can not have good air in a dwelling without some proper means of changing it, and this should be continuous. You can open the doors and windows once in a while, and let the foul air out and the fresh, pure air from the outside come in and take its place, but you can't be doing this all the time. On the other hand, a fire in the grate is drawing the foul air from near the floor all the time and sending it up the chimney. Good air from outside comes in through the cracks around the doors and windows to take its place. Some people make the mistake of using double windows and rubber strips to keep this pure air out. I don't understand intelligent people doing that way in these days of education. Everyone understands that pure air is absolutely necessary for good health, and I cannot understand the peculiar mental process by which people can deliberately set themselves to work to shut out their greatest necessity. I have acquaintances who never open a window if they can help it. I notice they usually open their pocketbooks every little while to pay a doctor's bill. There is, however, no law to compel them to breathe pure air if they don't want to.

Another point of superiority about this house is the arrangement of the dining room, china closet, pantry and kitchen. It would be difficult to invent an arrangement better than this for a woman who does her own work. There is, in addition, a good closet off the dining room, to hold a hundred things which a woman likes to have near by, but which are not always in sight. The fine large dining room window is a good place, for example, for the sewing machine, but a woman does not care to store a sewing machine in the dining room. With the arrangement here given, the machine can easily be wheeled into the closet and left there until wanted next time.

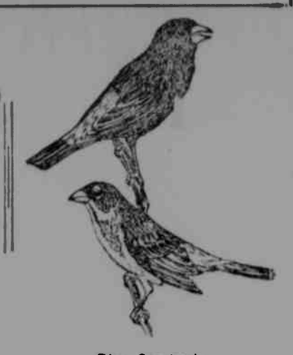
A built-in back porch that can easily be screened against flies and mosquitoes is another very good feature. It is impossible to keep flies out of the kitchen when they are gathered in multitudes on the back porch. A screen door is not sufficient. It is difficult and expensive to screen some porches, but this one is an exception. Screening can be done so easily that there is no excuse for leaving the porch open as an invitation for flies and mosquitoes.

Recognize Equality of Women.

In the Pacific ocean, far beyond China and Japan, lie the only two countries in the world which fully acknowledge the equality of men and women by giving political rights to all citizens of twenty-one, regardless of sex. They are New Zealand and Australia.

New Zealand was the first by a dozen years to put her daughters on a suffrage equality with her sons. It was in 1867 that the cry was raised, "Shall our mothers, wives and sisters have suffrage?"

The answer was given in 1893 by the full enfranchisement of women. In Australia the chance came more gradually, province by province. But a few years ago the final concession was made, and now Australian women, like their sisters of New Zealand, are the equals in this way of their husbands, brothers and sons.



To Keep Waxed Floor In Order.

Go over the floor once a week with a mixture of equal parts of turpentine, sweet oil and vinegar, using a soft cloth. Polish after this with a soft rag, which may be wrapped around a floor broom.

VALUE OF GROSBEAKS TO AGRICULTURE

Cardinal and Gray Grosbeaks.

Blue Grosbeaks.

(By W. L. M'ATEE.)

Seven kinds of finches, commonly known as grosbeaks, are to be found within the boundaries of the United States. The majority of these are good friends of the farmer and deserve to be widely known in order that their services may be appreciated. The grosbeaks are easily distinguished from other finches by their stout forms, bright plumage, massive bills and melodious voices. All of these birds perform invaluable service to our farmers by destroying certain of our own worst insect pests.

The rose-breasted grosbeak, potato-bug-bird, has an extensive range, breeding from Kansas and the mountains of Tennessee north to Canada and north and east to the Atlantic ocean and Newfoundland. The rose-breast has long been held in high esteem because of its habit of preying upon the potato beetle, and the name potato-bug bird suggests its important services in this direction. Larvae, as well as adult beetles, are consumed, and a great many are fed to nestlings. No less than a tenth of the total food of the rosebreasts examined consists of potato beetles. evidence that the bird is one of the most important enemies of the pest. Its services in devouring other exceedingly harmful insects are scarcely less valuable.

The cardinal, redbird, ranges from southern Mexico, Lower California, and Arizona, north to Iowa and Ontario, and east to the Atlantic coast. It is a great enemy to the rose chafer, cotton worm, plum or cherry scale, and other scale insects, and attacks many other important insect pests, including the zebra caterpillar of the cabbage, the cucumber beetles, billbugs, locust flea-beetle, corn-ear worm, cotton cutworm, southern fig eater, codling moth, and boll weevil. In addition it consumes a great many seeds of injurious weeds. Thus its food habits entitle the bird to our esteem as its brilliant coat and spirited song compel our admiratoin.

The black-headed grosbeak, western grosbeak, ranges from southern Mexico to British Columbia, North Dakota and Nebraska. It fills the same place in the west that the rose-breast does in the east, and economically is fully as important. Instead of being regarded as an enemy by western orchardists, the blackhead should be esteemed as a friend, since it is a foe to the worst pests of horticulturists — the scale insects — which compose a fourth of its food. The black olive scale alone constitutes a fifth of the bird's subsistence, and the frosted scale and apricot scale also are destroyed.

The blue grosbeak is a small but beautiful bird which breeds over the southern two-thirds of the United States. Blue grosbeaks do no damage during the nesting period, and, in fact, are of great value to any farm they choose for a home, since they eat many insects. A tenth of the subsistence is made up of purslane caterpillars and cotton cut-worms, enemies of sugar beets and cotton. Because of its effective warfare on these pests, the blue grosbeak is an efficient ally of the farmer and deserves to be protected.

The gray grosbeak, parrotbill, enters the United States only in Texas, Arizona, and New Mexico. Like the blue grosbeak it is more fond of caterpillars and grasshoppers than of other insects. Weevils are next in order of preference. In August and September seven-tenths of the gray grosbeak's food is weed seed, five-tenths consisting exclusively of the seeds of two of the most important weeds of the south, namely, foxtail, and bur grass. So far as known, the gray grosbeak eats practically no beneficial insect and damages no crop. This, in addition to the fact that it feeds upon noxious weed and insect pests, entitles it to complete protection.

Planting wild fruit is important for the purpose of attracting birds. Besides the fruits above mentioned, the following are valuable: Dogwoods, hollies, juniper, bayberry, Virginia creeper, blueberries, blackberries and wild grapes. Not all the thickets on a farm should be removed, since they serve to harbor birds, to protect them from enemies, and to furnish nesting sites. Where thickets are lacking the growth of artificial ones should be encouraged for they are very attractive to grosbeaks, particularly to the cardinal.

A permanent drinking and bathing place on the farm and in the garden is to be numbered among the most potent attractions for birds, and with a little ingenuity one can be prepared in almost any locality. Winter feeding serves to attract the cardinal, which relishes corn, sunflower, and other seeds, and takes kindly even to table scrap. If particular premises prove congenial as a winter home the bird is likely to prefer them in summer.

No efforts to attract grosbeaks will succeed, however, unless protection is assured. Grosbeaks are already protected by law in practically every state, but, since the machinery for the enforcement of the laws is often ineffective, statutory protection must be supplemented by individual action, particularly under trespass laws.

THROW AWAY THAT BIG CLUB

Every Time You Strike a Meat Animal With It You Injure Its Value at Market and Your Bank Account Must Suffer.

A lot of systematic money savers are the meat handlers of the United States.

We refer to the men who buy live stock and convert it into cuts to be sold over the butcher's counter. They are constantly warning the grower of live stock, the men who handle it in transit to market, and alike those who handle it at market, to "LAY DOWN THE CLUB" and avoid bruising the animals.

The men who buy live stock, upon slaughtering it and finding bruised carcasses, are losers where they are unable to discount the losses by buying the stuff at a lower figure than prevails for sound animals free of bruises, which have been handled by men who have a LITTLE HUMANE CONSIDERATION FOR THEIR PROPERTY.

The club in a live stock handler's fist, swung in a fit of temper upon the back of an animal, acts as a boomerang in that it rebounds and hits the purse of the owner of the animal a hard blow.

The big packers keep a careful record of their live stock purchases. THEY KNOW THE ORIGIN OF A BRUISED ANIMAL and the seller is held to account for their loss. His punishment comes INDIRECTLY, but it is a PRICE PUNISHMENT, which should teach him that inconsiderate treatment of live stock IS NOT GOOD BUSINESS POLICY.

Exercise care in handling your live stock at home; insist upon careful handling in transit and at market.

Everybody hates a club swinger. He is a fellow whose mentality appears weak. There are on the statute books severe penalties for inhumane treatment of animals, but the severest penalty for a man who wields a club over the back of an animal ought to be the guilt of his conscience.

Let's throw away the club and handle live stock in a manner which will insure its delivery at the slaughter house in condition to command the highest price BY REASON OF ITS FREEDOM FROM BRUISES WHICH NEVER OUGHT TO BE FOUND ON THE CARCASS.

The Separator Helps.

The fine working parts of the cream separator will collect more dust, grease, etc., during the cold weather than in the summer, making it necessary to run some coal oil through it to clean and loosen it up.

The separator now supplies cream that is pure cream at all seasons. There was never a more opportune time for home butter making. If done in the proper manner it can easily compete with the creamery, for the latter has all classes of milk supplied.

Protein in Dairy Ration.

The farm-dairy ration without clover is short of protein, and without roots or ensilage it lacks succulence. Oil meal furnishes both in the cheapest form, as grain. In other words, protein in oil meal is cheaper at $30 a ton for the oil meal than in corn at 50 cents a bushel.

Bad Management.

If your hens do not produce eggs in winter, make up your mind that the management is at fault.

Catch Sea Cow on Coast.

Whether the skill shown by William Steamer, negro fisherman, in lassoing a large shark at the Breakers Hotel pier, caused the appearance there of a sea cow has stumped even the old time yarn spinning fishermen who pride themselves as solvers of acquatic riddles.

A score of persons were gathered on the pier watching several West Indians draw in their nets. Much to the surprise of the spectators and the negroes the sea cow was brought to the surface of the water. Fishermen well acquainted with these waters say that the sea cow is now extremely rare, so much so in fact that it is against the law to kill one. Consequently, after the negroes had hauled it close enough to the pier so that its cumbersome form could be seen the cow was released. In view of Steamer's feat and the later incident, the waters around the pier have been called the corrall.—Palm Beach (Fla.) Dispatch to New York Herald.

Uric Acid Is Slow Poison

Excess uric acid left in the blood by weak kidneys, causes more diseases than any other poison.

Among its effects are backache, headache, dizziness, irritability, nervousness, drowsiness, "blues," rheumatic attacks and urinary disorders. Later effects are dropsy, gravel or heart disease.

If you would avoid uric acid troubles, keep your kidneys healthy. To stimulate and strengthen weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills—the best recommended special kidney remedy.

An Alabama Case

Mrs. Emma Virginia Harms 6 St. Jefferson St., Mobile, Ala., says: "Kidney trouble caused me terrible suffering. My knees and joints swelled and my ankles were twice their normal size. For over a year I didn't leave the house and I gave up hope. I had awful pains through my back and was at death's door. After doctors' treatment and everything else had failed, Doan's Kidney Pills came to my aid and in a few weeks, they made me a well woman. I have never suffered since."

The prescription which Dr. R. V. Pierce uses most successfully—in diseases of women—which has stood the test of nearly half a century—is

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Take this in liquid or tablet form as a tonic and regulator!

Mrs. Kate D. Richardson, of Beazley, Essex Co., Va., says, "I esteem it a pleasure to testify to the wonderful curative qualities of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. For some years I suffered greatly with weakness peculiar to my sex. I was treated by several physicians but gradually grew worse. One of my friends told me of the good results of your 'Favorite Prescription.' I went to the drug store and got a bottle, and after taking it, with the 'Pleasant Pellets,' I commenced to get better. I never knew what happiness was, for I was always sick and complaining and made others as well as myself unhappy. So you see what a debt I owe you!"

AS TO ADVERTISEMENTS OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

In the Pittsburgh Gazette Times of recent date there appeared the following announcement on the first page, and, as the Times is one of the great metropolitan dailies, its utterances along the lines of temperances are significant and shows the pronounced and growing trend of public opinion:

"In order to make its business policy harmanize with its editorial utterances The Gazette Times will hereafter neither seek nor accept advertisements of intoxicating liquors. All existing liquor advertising contracts will be canceled, if possible; those that cannot be canceled will not be renewed upon their expiration."

In this connection it is in order to mention that The Republican, which was founded in March, 1877, has never sought nor has it published ONE LINE OF ADVERTISEMENTS OF INTOXICATING LIQUORS. More over, it has repeatedly turned down contracts calling for fabulous advertising rates for very limited space. Very often the money which could have been secured for this class of advertising was much needed to pay operating expenses of the office, but it was deemed that it were better to close up shop than to accept a line of advertising that would in the end drive other advertisers from our columns. This record is one of which very few papers can boast; none other in Garrett county has a clean record in this respect.

The Republican rejoices to see a newspaper of the size and influence of the Gazette Times take this stand. Such an example will have a far reaching effect.

Public sentiment once aroused cannot be denied. It is only a matter of time.

THE YANKEE IN ENGLAND.

We Americans will be as silly as those jealous local railway men who complain of the choice if we imagine that the appointment of Henry W. Thornton of Long Island to be General Manager of the Great Eastern Railway, England, is either concession or proof of the superiority of our men and methods in transportation.

An American is such a post has some advantage over a Briton of like ability and experience. He will probably get a freer hand. He will almost certainly be less obsequious toward titled directors. But his chief distinguishing qualifications is precisely that he comes from a distance, has profited by a different experience and should be quicker to notice where improvement can be made. That advantage a good English railway man would have in this country.

There is no tariff on talent; free trade in ideas benefits civilization. We lent the older hemisphere a Franklin and Paine to stimulate political thought, a Rumford for dawning science, a Hotchkiss and a Maxim to show how war may be made more deadly. Yerkes taught London how to make a subway, and Thornton may be as successful with a run-down commuting traffic. But we had to import a Slater to teach us to make cotton, a Hamilton and a Gallatin to steady the national finance, an Ericsson to build the Monitor. All the world's a school, and the scholars learn faster and acquire a wider mental horizon by swapping teachers now and then.

GOOD ROADS AND RURAL SCHOOLS

The rural population is more willing to support better schools today than at any previous time. It is being realized that all education activities or agencies must be more or less correlated, and, more than all else, that they must be made accessible to the children.

In many counties where bad roads prevail, most of the schools are of the antiquated one-room variety. They are usually located along bad roads which, during the winter, when the schools are usually in session, become so nearly impassable as to make it difficult for the children to reach them. This condition causes irregular attendance and restricts the educational opportunities of the child. Not only this, but it often impedes the economic consolidation of these smaller schools into larger, stronger graded schools, with high school courses, directed by a competent principal and corps of teachers, according to the office of Public Roads, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

On the other hand, in counties which have improved their roads, the schools are easily reached, the average attendance greater, the efficiency largely increased and economic consolidation made possible. Regular attendance at school means consistent and regular growth of both school and pupil, and consolidation of schools means a maximum of efficiency at a minimum of cost.

The consolidated school becomes a sort of community center to which all educational and social activities converge, and in order that it may properly perform that function all of the highways leading to it should be so improved as to render it readily accessible throughout the year.

CHANCE AND PERSEVERENCE-- THE DIFFERENCE

There is an old maxim which runs, "All things come to him who waits." A very pretty sentiment indeed but capable of unfortunate interpretation, for we know there are too many persons relying on chance to bring success. And success isn't attained as a result of chance.

Perseverence is a necessity. Nothing guarantees success like it. It is more effective than brilliancy.

Continuous, unflagging effort, persistence and determination are winning factors. Cyrus Field spent eleven years before he succeeded in designing and laying the Atlantic cable. But success didn't come to him because he waited for it but because he went out after it and stayed on the job.

Edison according to his own admission, made 1800 experiments before he discovered the proper substance for the incandescent light. He made some 6000 experiments before he solved the problem of preparing the products of the great iron mills for the blast furnace. Things came Edison's way because he made them come because he persevered.

Kepler solved the laws of the planetary system but it took him 17 years to do it. Noah Webster was 50 years producing the dictionary that bears his name. It took 20 years for Edward Gibbon to compose "The Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire," and so countless examples could be cited of how men labored and persevered in their labors in order to accomplish their aim.

Perseverance is simply the bending of all energies in one direction until the thing is accomplished.

Those who are found at the foot of the hill all seek for an easy ride. The man who succeeds, while others fail, must be willing to pay the price. There is not a business or profession but knows that luck is but a myth. Plod, push and perseverance win the game. It is what we make of what we have that counts and the process of making is entirely up to the individual.

MOUNTAIN LAKE PARK.

Mr. Jacob I. Echard has the thanks of the entire community for plowing paths through the snow.

The L. A. Clayton cottage will possibly soon be in the possession of Mr. Carl Frame, of Fairmont, W. Va.

The cottage occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Brison Gibson, which was destroyed by fire last week, was insured for $700.

Mrs. J. A. Enlow returned home Friday from a two week's visit to friends in Frostburg and Cumberland.

Mrs. Alderson White and Mrs. Chesston Browning, of Loch Lynn, were visiting relatives in Oakland yesterday.

Mr. Charles May was with his family here over Sunday and on Wednesday left with his daughter Helen for the the hospital at Martinsburg where she will receive treatment. Miss Floray May left on the same train for Fair Bluff, N. C., where she will be engaged in the millinery business.

The Epworth League social, under the direction of Miss Beatrice Hyward, Friday evening at the residence of Mr. J. A. Enlow, was a most enjoyable occasion and well attended considering the inclement weather. The exercises were intended to celebrate the anniversaries of Washington and Lincoln One of the enjoyable features of the program was the song "Mount Vernon Bells," by a quartet composed of the following members ot the M. E. church choir: Mrs. Winchell, Miss Gertrude Enlow and Messrs. H. V. Leighton and John Stevenson. Several appropriate songs and recitations were rendered and at the close of the program refreshments were served.

The deaths of Rev. N. L. Bumgardner, Charles W. Hopkins, Thomas Harris and Mrs. H. E. Friend, all occurring within a few days, makes many sorrowing families in this neighborhood.

The weather for the past ten days has been the most disagreeable, not only this winter, but for many years.

The special services in the Loch Lynn U. B. church, announced to begin last Sunday, was postponed until last evening on account of the disagreeable weather.

Mr. William Bumgardner, wife and daughter, of Illinois, and Miss May Bumgardner, of Elkins, W. Va., were attending the funeral of Rev. Bumgardner. Miss May was accompanied by her friend Miss Mary Scallon.

The death of Miss Ella M. Buckey, of Cumberland, which occurred at the Springfield (Md.) State Hospital, Friday last was announced to relatives here Monday.

Rev. Aaron Bumgardner, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., attended the funeral of his brother here Wednesday.

Three car loads of lime have been unloaded at this station this week by progressive farmers in this neighborhood.

Intelligence was received here Saturday of the death of Charles W. Hopkins, which occurred at Los Angeles, Cal., that day. Mr. Hopkins was a brother-in-law of Rev. L. A. Rudisill, and was Mr. Rudisill's assistant in the management of the Park for many years.

It was hoped last week that another crop of ice could be taken from the lake this week, but the heavy fall of snow continuing for several days prevented the ice from attaining the minimum thickness (8 inches) required by the railroad company.

SUGAR MAKING WILL SOON BEGIN

The Extract of Trees Made A la Garlett County, The Best.

Boiling maple sugar will soon begin in Garrett county, which event takes the place of everything else on a farm where sugar groves exist.

The weather has been of such nature this winter that the outlook for a good crop is promising, and as a result the market will be active. Already buyers are arriving at Grantsville and many sales have been made.

In the camps at night there are scenes of festivity around the blazing campfires, where the sap is being boiled, and already the shipment is being made of maple sugar to the Eastern cities.

Grantsville is the headquarters of maple sugar makers, and there are several big camps. The flow of sap this year is far above the average, and the farmers owing large maple groves look for an abundance of sugar.

Boiling the sap is one of the greatest events, and while entailing a great deal of hard work, furnishes lots of enjoyment for the young people all over the countryside.

Especially is this true in the gathering of the "spotza" from the boiling sugar. Spoonsful of the boiling sugar are dropped into cold water, which almost instantly converts it into a succulent sweet mass like taffy. A large spoonful of "spotza" can be chewed for an hour if the chewer can successfully keep it from sticking to his or her teeth.

It is expected that the run of maple sap will continue the entire week. Frost has a tendency to increase the flow.

In recent years the extensive sale of timber lands in the mountainous section of the maple tree country cut down the supply. The large maple trees that annually yielded barrles of sap, are cut down by woodmen, and cut up into lumber.

Maple wood is in great demand from the manufacturer of furniture and woodenware of all kinds. With the exception of the farmers who are refusing to sell the maple groves, it is believed in a few years the immense tracts of maple timber will be cut down and the boiling of maple syrup and the manufacture of maple sugar will disappear. There are trees in the Grantsville district that have yielded maple sap for over a hundred years.

THE DEATH RECORD

CHARLES W. HOPKINS.

Word reached Mountain Lake Park Monday to the effect that Charles W. Hopkins, a one-time resident of the Park, and brother of Mrs. L. A. Rudisill, had died a day or two previous at his home in Los Angeles, Cal. No particulars as to the cause of his death can be learned at this time.

DENNIS J. STEVANUS.

Dennis J. Stevanus, of Grantsville where he was engaged in the tinware and stove business, died in the Miner's Hospital, Frostburg, last Saturday as the result of an attack of typhoid fever, the deceased having been removed to that institution from his Grantsville home just a few days previous to his death. He was aged about forty years. Mr. Stevanus was a candidate before the Republican primaries last fall for nomination as a member of the House of Delegates and as such formed a large acquaintanceship throughout the county.

MRS. ELLA NEWMAN.

Mrs. Ella Newman, aged 57 years, widow of W. B. Newman, who was killed on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad about a year ago, died at the Allegany Hospital in Cumberland at 7 o'clock Thursday morning from a complications of diseases from which she had been suffering for over two years. She is survived by her son, Morris Newman, of Keyser, W. Va., and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Spangler. She was a member of the Presbyterian church and of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Order of Railroad Conductors. The body was prepared for burial and taken to Keyser, W. Va., thence to Terra Alta, W. Va., where interment took place on Saturday.

REV. N. L. BAUMGARDNER.

Rev. Nathan L. Baumgardner died at the Romney cottage, Mountain Lake Park, Md., February 16th, after an illness of several years. He was born in Fayette county, Pa., September 24, 1842, and was in his 72nd year. Before entering the ministay he taught school in his native county. He was 15 years in the ministry in the West Virginia Conference, six years as presiding elder of Oakland district.

Funeral services were held in the Oakland M. E. church Wednesday, Feb. 18th, 1914, conducted by Dr. W. D. Reed, district superintendent of Oakland district, assisted by Dr. J. W. Bedford, of Parsons, W. Va., who preached the sermon at the request of deceased, Dr. Archibald Moore, and Rev. J. L. Marquess. The pallbearers were Revs. McCamic, McCoy, Moore, Marquess, Bedford and Reed.

Deceased is survived by his wife and two children, William and May.

AARON TRENT.

Aaron Trent, an eccentric man who lived by himself near Lake Brown, died Tuesday morning at four o'clock as a result of diseases incident to advanced years. He was born on June 15th, 1829, and was nearly 85 years of age. His place of birth was at some point in Somerset county, Pa., but he spent almost his entire lifetime in Garrett county. He was never married; educated in a school in Ohio and was quite cultured in his language and demeanor. He was a brother of the late Mrs. Wright Thayer, Mrs. William Enlow, and Mrs. James Loughrey, whose death a few years ago closed a life of ninety five years' duration. He also had a brother who was engaged in the newspaper business in New York and died a wealthy man. Mr. Trent was a member of the Baptist church at Thayerville. His funeral will occur this morning at eleven o'clock.

MRS. SARAH E. FRIEND.

Mrs. Sarah E., wife of the Rev. Henry E. Friend, of Hoyes, died at the family homestead last Saturday evening just as she had retired, the cause of her death being due to heart disease with which she suffered more or less for a number of years. Mrs. Friend was born at New Creek (Keyser), Va., May 10th, 1842, and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Blackburn. In 1860 she was married to her now bereft husband, and to this union fourteen children were born, ten of whom survive, they being Messrs. L. E, of Morgantown, W. Va., G. B. M. and W. S, of near Oakland, Register of Wills Edwin E. Friend, of Mountain Lake Park; Ray C., of Richwood, W. Va.; Charles W, of New York City; Clifford H., of Pomeroy, Washington, James W., of Friendsville; Miss Sudie, who resides at home, and Mrs. J. Arthur DeWitt, of Hoyes. The deceased lady was a consistent member of the M. E. church for sixty years or more, having been converted at the age of 11 years and joined the church of her choice. Shortly after the couple were married Mr. Friend joined the Union Army and served three years, being attached to the Army of the Potomac. At the close of nostilities he removed to Altamont, Md., and more than forty years ago moved from that point to the farm near Hoyes which became the Friend homestead. Mrs. Friend was one of Garrett county's most excellent women. Her death is a loss not only to her immediate family but to the entire community in which she resided for so many years and in which she had endeared herself for the many acts of kindness shown her less fortunate neighbors. Her funeral will occur tomorrow from the Hoyes church, the funeral being delayed so that her children residing at such great distances from the home can be present at the services.

SHORT RUN.

We are having a touch of real winter weather at this writing. The mercury has lingered fondly near the zero mark for the past week.

Mr. Jesse White will soon begin operating his saw mill, which he has recently moved to this place. Mr. White has a new outnt out and out, and is prepared to do first class work.

The farmers are taking advantage of the snow, and are busy skidding logs.

Mr. Charles Bernard met with a very painful accident one day last week. While cutting timber for Mr. White, he was struck by a falling limb which cut a severe gash in his left temple. Dr. Miller dressed the wound, and Mr. Bernard is doing nicely.

Our school is progressing nicely, under the skillful management of Miss Lucy Markwood.

Mr. Tom Wilson spent last week visiting at the home of Mr. Wm. Hacker, at Jane Lew, W. Va.

We are glad to have Miss Elsie Paugh of Eagle Rock, in our neighborhood for a few weeks.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Claude Harvey, Saturday, Feb. 7, a daughter.

Born to Mr. and Mrs J. B. Moore, Monday, Feb. 9, a son.

Misses Lucy Markwood, Cassie and Cinda Wilson and Mr. Tom Wilson spent a few pleasant hours at the home of Mr. Dan'l Wilson last Sunday.

Rev. J. E. Scott preached a very interesting sermon in the M. E. church at this place Sunday.

BITTINGER.

Last Friday and Saturday were the coldest and most disagreeable days of the winter, and as a result of the heavy snow fall the roads are almost entirely blockaded by snow drifts.

Charles Wiley and sister Miss Myrtle returned on Friday from a week's visit in Cumberland, Westernport, Meyersdale and Salisbury.

Messrs. Henry Wiley and Melchor Hetrick recently unloaded a car of lime which will be used in improving their farms.

Dennis Brenneman is re-opening the coal mine on the Joe Brenneman farm, and expects soon to be getting out first class coal.

A falling limb struck Charles Buckle on the left shoulder and side, a few days ago, while employed in cutting timber for Jennings Bros. The injuries resulting to Mr. Buckle were not serious and his escape from death is considered miraculous.

Joe Hetrick, of Negro Mountain, was an agreeable visitor to this village last week.

Oliver Beachy made a flying visit to Salisbury, Pa., recently.

The public attention is on the situation at Annapolis, and many are the speculations as to the result of the fight over the local option bill for Garrett county.

William Wynn, of Lonaconing passed through this neighborhood last week on a "hoss swapping" expedition.

Mr. C. S. Davis Vice President.

At the hardware dealer's association meeting held on Thursday in Philadelphia, Mr. C. S. Davis of Oakland, a member of the firm of J. M. Davis & Sons, was elected one of the vice presidents of the association, which is composed of retail hardware dealers of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and Delaware. Mr. Davis returned to Oakland yesterday after having visited a number of eastern points on business.

Order of Publication.

Sarah Abernathy, (widow), Wm. Abernathy, Sylvia L. Abernathy, Sarah E. Bosely, Martin Abernathy and Eva G. Abernathy, Plaintiffs, vs. Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodore Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John A. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy, Defendants,

No. 1915 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree for the sale of certain real estate, lying and being in Garrett county, Maryland, containing about 190 acres, of which Ezekiel H. Abernathy died seized and possessed, and for a distribution of the proceeds amongst the parties entitled to receive the same.

The bill states that the said Ezekiel H. Abernathy was in his lifetime possessed of a tract of land containing 190 acres, being a part of "Hineches Discovery," and which is located in Garrett county.

That helm so seized he departed this life several years ago and left surviving him a widow, Sarah Abernathy, and the following children: Susan, a daughter, intermarried with Louis Grant; Rosetta, a daughter, who intermarried with Thomas L. Wildman; Sarah E., a daughter, who intermarried with Thornton C. Bosely, the said Bosely now being dead; Martin Abernathy, a son, whose wife's name is Eva G.; Theodora, a son, whose wife's name is Laura E.; William, a son, whose wife's name is Sylvia L.; John S., a son, whose wife's name is Elizabeth.

The Bill further states that the said Susan Grant, Louis Grant, Rosetta Wildman, Thomas L. Wildman, Theodora Abernathy, Laura E. Abernathy, John S. Abernathy and Elizabeth Abernathy are non residents of the State of Maryland; that said land is running down and depreciating in value; that the same is not susceptible of partition without loss and injury, and that in order to make division of the same it will be necessary that said land be sold and the proceeds divided amongst those interested.

The Bill prays for a decree for the sale of said property; that the proceeds be distributed amongst the parties entitled to receive the same, and for general relief.

It is therefore, this 16th day of January, in the year 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett county, in Equity, that the plaintiffs, by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks before the 10th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said absent defendants of the object and substance of this Bill, warning them to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 9th day of March, next, to show cause, if any they have why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

Irene Hayes, vs. Elza L. Hayes.

No. 1913 Equity. In the Circuit Court for Garrett County, Maryland.

The object of this suit is to procure a decree divorcing the plaintiff, Irene Hayes, a vinculo matrimonii, from the defendant Elza L. Hayes.

The Bill states that the plaintiff and defendant were married on the 25th day of December, 1901, and resided together as man and wife until October, 1907.

That the defendant without any just cause or reason abandoned and deserted the plaintiff, and that such abandonment has continued uninterruptedly for more than six years, and is deliberate and final.

That one son was born as a result of said marriage, to wit: Emmerson Hayes, on the 15th day of October, 1902.

That the defendant has failed, neglected and refused to contribute any thing toward the support of the plaintiff ever since said separation.

The Bill further states that the defendant has been guilty of the crime of adultery since said marriage.

And further states that the plaintiff is a resident of Garrett county, and avers that the defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland.

It is thereupon, this 12th day of January 1914, ordered by the Circuit Court of Garrett County, in equity, that the plaintiff by causing a copy of this order to be inserted in some newspaper, published in said Garrett county, once in each of four successive weeks, before the 12th day of February, 1914, give notice to the said defendant of the object and substance of the Bill, warning him to appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 2nd day of March next, to show cause, if any he has why a decree ought not to be passed as prayed.

C. A. Bolden is visiting his brother, G. A. Bolden, and son C. A. Bolden, at Charleston, W. Va., this week. Ere his return home he will stop off a few days at Oakland, Md., his former home, to visit with relatives and friends.—Meyersdale Republican.

The mail wagon that carries the Grantsville mail from Frostburg got stuck in a huge snow drift on top of the little Savage Mountain Monday and had to return without delivering the mail. This is only the second time in ten years that the daily delivery of the Grantsville mail has been interrupted.

William Winterberg, a Grantsville undertaker, went to Frostburg Sunday evening for the body of D. J. Stevanus, who died in the Miners' Hospital Sunday and left early Monday morning in a sled but could get no further than Little Savage Mountain. He even found it difficult to get back to Frostburg, owing to the drifts built between the Savages by the high winds of the morning.

Stewart Simpkins one day last week attended the Augustine sale in Garrett county, Maryland. During the progress of the sale he bid on a horse and the animal was knocked down to him. Without the formalty of arranging for settlement, either by cash or note, as is customary at sales, Simpkins departed with the animal and succeeded in crossing over into Pennsylvania before the authorities succeeded in overtaking him, and now Mr. Augustine is setting the wheels of the law in motion to recover either the horse or its equivalent in cash.—Meyersdale Republican.

Charles, the infant son of Prof. and Mrs. J. C. Beahm, who is less than one year of age, was painfully, though not seriously, scalded by overturning a cup of hot coffee upon himself while the family were partaking of the noonday meal last Sunday. Some of the boiling fluid was thrown into the child's face while a portion of it ran down his arm Proper remedies were at once applied, which almost immediately allayed the pain. The burns, with the exception of the one on the arm at the elbow point, are not serious, and will soon heal, leaving no scars.—Meyersdale Republican.

Mrs. Henry W. McComas was summoned to Baltimore last Saturday night owing to the serious illness of her son, Mr. Joseph McComas, who was sent to that city from school suffering with an attack of appendicitis. Sunday the patient was to be operated upon at Johns Hopkins Hospital. Reports are to the effect that he is doing extremely well

Mr. O. D. Eastman, of Chicago, Ill., president of the Waitman Coal Company operating at Steyer, this county, which company recently succeeded the operations carried on by Messrs. Leonard & Brady, was in Oakland yesterday on his way home from Steyer where he had spent a week or more looking after his interests. The new company headed by Mr. Eastman has bright prospects for its future success. Several cars of coal have already been marketed with orders ahead for the entire out put of the mine.

County Superintendent Rathbun returned to Oakland last Friday from a trip to the vicinity of Pittsburgh At Verona, Pa., Mr. Rathbun was the guest of former County Superintendent U. G. Palmer of Garrett county, where the latter is now engaged as group superintendent of schools at a very lucrative salary. The visit of the Garrett county superintendent to our neighboring state was for the prime purpose of observing at first hand the Pennsylvania method of conducting schools, the routine of work followed and a general survey under actual working conditions. Mr. Rathbun speaks highly of the courtesy with which he was received by the school authorities where he visited and of the methods in vogue in the Keystone state.

ROADS CLOSED BY DRIFTS

An Effectual Cessation of Business Is The Result.

What has been deemed the most extensive and hardest storm in years past, held all this section of the country in its grasp from Friday until Tuesday, when the weather moderated and gave those who had been effectually snowed in an opportunity to get out and shovel the roads open so that mail carriers were enabled to make their daily rounds and allow those residing in the country to get to town and transact business.

The storm began Thursday night when the thermometer took a sudden drop to the zero reading With the cold came a windstorm accompanied by snow which drifted heavily in cuts but did not close the roads to traffic until Sunday when the storm was at its worst.

Monday morning, and indeed all day Monday, the mercury stood at eight and ten above zero, with a biting wind blowing carrying with it snow and crystals of ice that cut into the faces of those having business outdoors.

An attempt was made by the star and rural route carriers to make their daily trips but after an effort on the part of these faithful public servants they gave up and returned to the local office with the mails undelivered. Tuesday however, the conditions were improved and the usual trips were made, but not upon schedule time.

More Timber for the Jennings.

The Jennings Bros. have purchased another valuable tract of timber which they intend to cut before removing their mill from its present site. Their latest acquisition is known as the Dimeling and Bloom tract, located a short distance south of the "Stone Horse" property, and contains 1300 acres. It is said that the work of removing the timber will be started just as soon as the necessary tram-roads can be built into it.

MARYLAND LEGISLATURE

To Control Roads and Bridges.

Senator Holmead proposes creating a board of highway commissioners for Prince George's county which is to have general control of the roads and bridges in the county. The board is made up of the county commissioners, and until December 1, 1915, are assigned as follows: George A. Gude, First district J. Jackson Suit, Second; John M Bowie, Third; Harry M Bowen, Fourth, and William H. Shuler, Fifth. The commissioners are authorized to name five road directors after January 1, 1916, until which time the following are to serve: First district, John D. Smith; Second, William Brady; Third, Benjamin E. Randall; Fourth, Richard H. Edelen; Fifth, Herbert E. Hardy.

$159,000 For Charity Work.

Individuals and delegations representing the various charitable institutions and reformatories in and near Baltimore appeared before the Senate Finance and the House Ways and Means Committees and asked for, in some instances, a continuance of the aid they have been receiving from the State and in other instances for increases. The applications heard asked for appropriations totaling $159,000. Other institutions remain to be considered. Most of the asylums, hospitals and charity schools announced their intention of increasing their capacities and in that way explained their reasons for asking more than they are now receiving.

$10,000 To Guarantee Good Faith.

Dr. Wirt A. Duvall brought down a bill, which was later introduced by Senator Maloy, to standardize and equalize insurance conditions in the State. It provides that insurance companies operated on a co-operative plan, a number of which have been licensed by the State Insurance Commission, shall be compelled to deposit with the Commissioner $10,000 worth of securities, as a guarantee of good faith, just as the big companies must deposit $50,000 each for the same purpose. They are also to pay a license fee of $25 a year

For Election Officials.

Senator Zihlman introduced a bill providing that the judges and clerks of election for Allegany county shall not be required to appear before the Board of Supervisors of Election for the purpose of examination nor to be sworn in, and that they may appear before a justice of the peace or notary public of the county and shall file with the Board of Supervisors a certificate of qualification. This provision already applies to Garrett, Queen Anne's, Dorchester, Howard, Frederick, Washington, Carroll, Charles, St. Mary's and Prince George's counties.

Harrison Sworn In.

Orlando Harrison was sworn in after the Senate convened at 11 o'clock Thursday. He was escorted to the platform by Senators Hammond and Mitchell of Tahoma, and the oath administered by President Price. The ceremony was witnessed by the many friends of the Senator, who crowded the Senate chamber and filled the galleries. Immediately after qualifying Senator Harrison took the seat previously occupied by Senator Ashburn and took part in the proceedings.

Bonus For Spanish War Soldiers.

Any Maryland soldier and sailor who took part in the war with Spain will proudly wear a medal commemorating that service, if a bill introduced in the House by Mr. Gatch, of Prince George county, becomes a law. The medals are to be furnished by the State. An appropriation of $6,000 is provided, with which the Governor is to purchase the medals. He is authorized to select the design.

To Exempt City Stock.

A point was gained for Baltimore when the Ways and Means Committee decided to report favorably the bill to exempt Baltimore city stock from taxation. If this bill becomes a law more will save over $100,000 annually, this being the sum levied by the State to pay the tax. The repeal of the taxing law was urged by State Treasurer Harrington in his last report.

To Take a Census Of Children.

A special census of children of Baltimore, between the ages of 6 and 14, is provided in a bill introduced in the House by Mr. Frick. It is to be taken by the police at the time the list of voters is taken. Information regarding school attendance and employment of children is to be given.

To Change Election Or Treasurer.

Senator Mr. Waters, of Montgomery, introduced a bill to change the Constitution in order that the Treasury may be elected by the people instead of by the General Assembly as at present.

Against Bible Legislation.

The Committee on Judiciary reported unfavorably the bill which was introduced by request requiring reading of the Bible in public schools daily. The unfavorable report was adopted.

SENATOR BACON'S DEATH A SHOCK

To His Colleagues by the Unexpected News.

GREAT LOSS TO PRESIDENT.

As Chairman Of the Foreign Affairs Committee He Represented the President In Important Matters Now Pending.

Washington, D. C.—Augustus Octavius Bacon, United States senator from Georgia for nearly 19 years and chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee since the ascendancy of the Democratic party March 4, 1913, died in a hospital here after an illness of ten days. He was the first United States senator elected by direct vote of the people under the Seventeenth Constitutional Amendment.

Though Senator Bacon had been seriously ill with kidney trouble and complications developing from a broken rib, his death was unexpected.

The immediate cause of the Senator's death was diagnosed as a blood clot in the heart.

In the absence of Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, Senator Overman was notified and procedings in the Senate were abruptly halted when the North Carolina Senator announced the death. A brief resolution of respect was adopted and the Senate adjourned.

The death of no member of either branch of Congress in years is more widely deplored than that of the senior Senator from Georgia. His long service, his loyalty to the Democratic party and his usefulness as the chairman of one of the most powerful committees of the Senate made his passing felt with a keen sense of personal loss at the White House, at the Capitol and elsewhere throughout the city.

For 15 years the Georgian had been a member of the Foreign Relations Committee. He had studied the problems of that period as closely perhaps as any man who sat in the Senate in his time. And in his debates on the floor he showed his clear insight into the complications between the United States and other governments.

It is for this reason, among others that the Administration feels bereaved. The Senate itself also is conscious of a distinct loss. That body had no more consistent defender of its dignity, its prerogatives, its functions than Senator Bacon. One of his last controversies revolved around that very matter. He demanded that Senators be given precedence over members of the Cabinet on all official occasions, on the theory that Senators are created by the Constitution, whereas Cabinet officials are mere creatures of Congress.

President Wilson's Tribute.

Washington, D. C.—When President Wilson heard of Senator Bacon's death he was sitting at his typewriter. He wrote the following statement on his machine and issued it to the press:

"All who knew Senator Bacon will sincerely deplore his death. It deprives the Senate of one of its oldest and most experienced members, a man who held with something like reverence to the traditions of the great body of which he was so long a part and who sought in all that he did to maintain its standards of statesmanship and service. The great State of Georgia will greatly miss her distinguished son and servant. My own association with him had been of the most cordial and, to me, helpful sort. I particularly profited by his experience in foreign affairs."

DR. ANNA SHAW BADLY INJURED.

Her Leg Broken In Alighting From Railway Train.

New York.—The Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman's Suffrage Association and one of the foremost workers for votes for women in this country, was badly injured when she fell while alighting from a train in Jersey City. She slipped under a car after the train had come to a stop and broke her right leg. An X-ray examination showed that the large bone was fractured and the other bone very badly splintered.

WILSON TAKES UP FILIPINOS.

Confers With Chairman Jones On Extending Liberties.

Washington.—The question how to further liberalize the government of the Philippines occupied President Wilson in an hour's conference with Chairman Jones, of the House insular Committee. The President has gone as far as he can under the law in giving the Filipinos self-government. According to Representative Jones, new legislation may prescribe perhaps a territorial form of government.

WORLD TOLD TO KEEP OUT

Mexico Must Settle Her Own Difficulties. Says Bryan.

REICHSTAG IS INFORMED

State Department For the Present Declines To Enter Into Question Of Liability For Losses.

Washington.—While admitting its accuracy Secretary Bryan declined to discuss further the statement by the German Under Secretary of State to the Imperial Parliament that Germany had been notified by the United States that nobody outside of Mexico could enforce a settlement of that country's present difficulties.

The view that the Mexican factions should be allowed to adjust their differences free from outside interference was expressed when the American Government gave notice to the world powers that its embargo against the exportation of arms to Mexico had been raised.

Officials pointed out that similar expressions had been communicated repeatedly to other powers when their diplomatic representatives asked what the United States intended to do in regard to Mexico.

The question of Mexican responsibility for losses sustained by foreigners resident in Mexico as a result of the revolutionary disturbances is one which at present the State Department declines to enter upon. It was suggested that the German Under Secretary expressed only the German view when he said assurances had been given that all losses would be indemnified. The history of past revolutionary movement in the Western Hemisphere presents some contradictions of doctrine in this regard and the disposition of the officials is to leave such matters to be adjusted after the present revolution is ended.

Comes Up On Interpellation.

Berlin.—The matter of other powers being indirectly requested to keep out of Mexico came up in the Reichstag on an interpellation by two of the National Liberal leaders as to "whether Provisional President Huerta had made representations to Germany in regard to the raising of the embargo on arms by the United States."

The interpellation was replied to by Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who said the United States Government, when it informed Germany of the raising of the embargo, had expressed the conviction that nobody outside of Mexico could effect a settlement of that country's difficulties.

The restoration of peace in Mexico, Dr. Zimmermann said, could be hoped for only if the Mexican parties were allowed to fight out their quarrels without interference, and the raising of the embargo merely gave American citizens the same right of selling arms as was enjoyed by other nations.

The Under Secretary informed the House that measures had been taken to protect Germans in Mexico and declared that Mexico would be held fully responsible for all their property losses.

Says Britain Will Not Take Part In 'Frisco Fair.

London.—Premier Asquith again refused British official participation in the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco. When asked in the House of Commons by Waldorf Astor to reconsider the matter, Mr. Asquith said: "The British Government recently reconsidered the question of participation in the exposition at San Francisco, but regrets that it does not feel able to modify its previous decision."

GRODNO BROKEN ON LINCOLN DAY

$2,000,000 Memorial to the Emancipator is Begun.

STARTED BY A SOUTHERNER.

Prominent Men From North and South Join In Exercise—Honored In Senate and House.

Washington.—While freezing winds swept across the Potomac from the sloping Virginia hills where stands the Lee Mansion at Arlington, a bareheaded Southern officer of the Civil War opened the simple exercises that marked the breaking of the ground for the construction of the great white marble memorial the nation is about to erect to Abraham Lincoln. This day, the one hundred and fifth anniversary of Lincoln's birth, was chosen for the breaking of the ground for the $2,000,000 structure, which will rise as rapidly as the contractors can push the work.

Only a small group gathered to witness the significant event. Joseph C. S. Blackburn, former senator from Kentucky, was the first to sink a spade into the ground and then with uncovered head he spoke in high praise of the memory of the President against whom he fought half a century ago.

"His memorial will show that Lincoln is now regarded as the greatest of all Americans," said Senator Blackburn, "and that he is so held by the South, as well as the North. Today we let the country know that this great work has been begun and will be carried on steadily until its completion."

M. F. Comer, of Toledo, O.; Colonel W. W. Harts, Lieutenant J. A. O'Connor, U. S. A.; H. A. Vaile, John F. Bethune and Henry Bacon sought turns with the spade for the honor of aiding in starting the building of the memorial.

In the Senate it was a Southerner who made the motion to adourn out of respect to the memory of Lincoln. The motion was made without pre-arrangement by Senator Overman, of North Carolina, following the reading of the former President's Gettysburg address by Senator Bradley, of Kentucky. It was Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, who had suggested that the Senate might well pause a moment to observe the birth day anniversary. The House, too, paused in its deliberations to pay its respect to the memory of the great emancipator.

MORSE GOES ABROAD AGAIN.

Former Banker Sails For Germany To Take Baths.

New York.—Charles W. Morse, the former banker, sailed on the steamship Kaiserin Auguste Victoria for Germany. He expected to be gone a month to take the baths, his son, Harry Morse, explained. Morse's plans have been the topic of speculation in the financial district for weeks, particularly since it became known that he was still active in trying to force Congress to investigate the circumstances of his conviction following the failure of the Bank of North America.

SIX YEARS TO MAKE VALUATION.

Commissioner Prouty Says It Will Cost $12,000,000—Tells Of Purpose.

Washington.—C. A. Prouty, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, told the Chamber of Commerce of the United States that the so-called physical valuation of the common carriers of the United States, ordered March 1, 1913, will not be completed, so far as the railroads are concerned, until 1918 or 1920. He estimated the cost of valuation at $12,000,000.

BRITISH GUNS LANDED.

Supposed To Be Intended For Defending the Legation At Mexico City.

Vera Cruz.—A party of British bluejackets landed two machine guns from the British flagship Suffolk and placed them on board a car on the Mexican railway, consigned to the British Legation in Mexico City. With the guns was sent a great quantity of ammunition. It is assumed here that the guns and ammunition are intended for the defense of the British Legation in case of an uprising in the Federal capital.

HANS SCHMIDT TO DIE NEXT MONTH

Will Be Electrocuted During the Week of March 23.

"LAST WORDS" A VERSE.

Takes Sentence Without Sign Of Emotion—Holds Out Hands For Steel Cuffs—Wore Fur Overcoat.

New York.—Hans Schmidt, convicted of murdering Anna Aumueller, a domestic at St. Boniface's parsonage, was sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing some time during the week beginning March 23.

Justice Vernon M. Davis, in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court, pronounced sentence after Schmidt, through his counsel, T. J. McManus, announced he had nothing to say.

Just before Schmidt was called into court the newspapermen sent him a message asking him if he wished to make a statement. He sent back a carefully penned note, as follows:

Beyond this vale of tears there is a life above,
Unmeasured by the flight of years,
And all that life is love.

No Sign Of Emotion.

Schmidt took his sentence with absolutely no show of emotion. He stood erect before Justice Davis and looked straight at him, taking no notice whatever of anyone else around him. When Justice Davis put the question: "Have you anything to say before sentence is passed upon you?" he merely leaned slightly forward. There was a pause and Attorney McManus moved for a new trial and a stay of sentence. Both motions were denied.

Immediately after sentence was pronounced Deputy Sheriff Bowers stepped to the man's side with a pair of handcuffs. Schmidt turned to Bowers and coolly held out his hands.

The prisoner wore a fur overcoat, with a clean white muffler about his neck. His beard, grown since he was arrested, was tucked into the collar of the overcoat. His whole appearance was vastly improved since he was last in court.

Schmidt was taken to Sing Sing immediately.

THE MINERS TURNED DOWN.

Operators Refuse Increase In Pay and Better Working Conditions.

Philadelphia.—The deadlock expected between the bituminous coal mine operators of Western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana and the United Mine Workers over the latter's demands for an increase in wages and other benefits materialized when the operators refused to grant the men's demands. They said the increased pay would be ruinous to the trade and offered the present agreement as the best they could make.

ADAMS EXPRESS DIVIDEND CUT.

Quarterly Distribution Reduced From $3 To $1.50 a Share.

New York.—The Adams Express Company reduced its quarterly dividend from $3 to $1.50 a share. The company has been paying dividends at the rate of $12 a year since 1909. The company announced that the distribution was to be paid out of its "accumulated revenue from investments." It was assumed in the financial district that decreased earnings, due to the establishment of the parcel post, was chiefly responsible for the reduction.

THEY GET A CLEAN BILL.

Colonel Goethals Exonerates Colonel Wilson and Clerk Shipley.

Washington.—Col. George Goethals in a telegram to the Isthmian Canal Commission offices here completely exonerated Lieutenant Colonel Eugene T. Wilson from any connection with the alleged transactions which led to the suspension of John Burke, manager of the commissary department. Colonel Goethals likewise declared that W. F. Shipley, chief clerk of the subsistence department, was "not involved" in the Burke suspension.

TRAIN KILLS TICKET AGENT.

W. L. Bishop Dies Shortly After Accident In Richmond.

Charlottesville, Va.—W. L. Bishop, ticket agent at Union Station and father of Howard L. Bishop, of Richmond, division passenger agent of the Southern Railway, died in a hospital here from injuries received by being struck by a Southern Railway passenger train while walking along the edge of a platform. He either misjudged the speed of the train or slipped in the snow, the pilot of the engine striking him.

$1,800,000 FOR C. & D. CANAL.

Curtis Bay Is Given $123,700 In House Bill.

Washington.—The sum of $1,800,000 will be carried in the House Rivers and Harbors bill for the purchase of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, according to semi-official information. The Covington bill carried $2,500,000. The $1,800,000 is recommended to be made available at once.

POULTRYMEN ARE BAILED.

Alleged Members Of Trust Will Probably Appeal.

New York.—The 11 members of the so-called Poultry Trust, committed to prison to serve a three months' sentence for violation of the State Anti-Monopoly act, were released under $5,000 bail each. An application for a certificate of reasonable doubt, granted by the Supreme Court at Albany and presented here, gave them their freedom. The certificate opens the way for an appeal.

Weekly Review of Trade and Market Reports.

Dun's Review says:

"Distribution of seasonable merchandise has been stimulated by zero temperatures, which have accelerated the movement of heavyweight apparel and fuel. Recent stormy weather also broadened the demand for footwear, and the general business situation reflects gradual betterment.

"In the matter of prices the general tendency is upward, with producers reluctant to contract for future business except at advances over former quotations.

"Failures this week numbered 403 in the United States, against 320 last year, and 51 in Canada compared with 33 a year ago."

Bradstreet's says:

"There has been a shifting of activities in trade and industry, but no apparent abatement of the sanguine sentiment hitherto in evidence. Activity has been chiefly noticeable in the large primary markets where good reports as to past business have been and are being confirmed, and in the ranks of final distributers, who have felt the beneficial effects of a full week of cold weather upon retail trade in heavy wearing apparel."

BOYHOOD MUCH LIKE OTHER LADS

Fondness for Outdoor Life Marked Characteristic of Washington in His Youth.

By LOUISE S. DUN.

ACCORDING to the old entry in the family Bible George Washington's birth is recorded as follows:

"A son to Augustine Washington and Mary, his wife, was born ye 11th of February, 1731, about ten in the morning."

As everyone knows by the parliamentary change in the calendar of 1732, the eleventh of the month became the twenty-second, while the settling of the doubt whether the year began on the first of January or the twenty-fifth of March, made the year in which Washington was born 1732 instead of 1731. And this important event took place near Fredericksburg, Va., on the Rappahannock.

Fox Hunting Was Washington's Favorite Sport.

From all the "Lives" and "Letters" extant we glean the fact that the lad who was destined to become "the greatest American of them all" spent his boyhood much like other lads of his age and position, perpetrating many pranks and receiving many whippings in consequence. On more than one occasion did he and his man Peter roast ears of corn in forbidden cabins of the field slaves or go on surreptitious coon hunts at night when all the house was asleep. In other words, young "Massa" did as he pleased when with Peter, to whose care he was entrusted more than ever after the elder Washington died in 1743, when George was a lad of eleven.

As a youngster Washington had a remarkable bump of curiosity which his father encouraged, but which to the contrary his mother disliked. As to the latter, we all know how foolishly fond she was of her children, allowing her love to interfere with her good judgment, many times, making herself miserable in their behalf. Yet there is no doubt that Washington's mother, as has been the case with all great men, had a potent influence over his life, and her strong character was afterwards reflected in the remarkable balance shown by her son in whatever situation he was placed. And to his mother Washington was always a most devoted and obedient son.

After his father's death he was soon made to understand that he must do something for a living. By the provision of his father's will, Mount Vernon was inherited by his brother, Lawrence, while the few acres on the Rappahannock were to be given George upon his becoming of age, though as a matter of fact he never claimed them. His sensible brother, Lawrence, and his half-brother, Augustine, disapproved of the easy life of the sons of planters and many animated discussions were held as to the future of their young brother.

Meantime, George was living with his half-brother, Augustine, though later he spent much time at Mount Martha Washington.

Vernon with Lawrence. It was while there that a family council resulted in the decision that George was to follow the sea. When the news reached Mrs. Washington, however, she was so upset that she hurried to Mount Vernon and begged her son to give up the idea of becoming a midshipman. Accordingly, the small chest of George, which had already been placed aboard a British vessel, was brought ashore.

It was many a day before the lad overcame his disappointment. His brother Lawrence comforted him with the assurance, "There are many roads in life; only one is barred to you." With characteristic bravary George never spoke of the matter to any one again, for as was his custom to the day of his death, Washington never recurred to a thing when once concluded.

It was [illegible]ar this disappointment that he turned his attention more definitely to surveying. In fact, he was greatly interested in exactness, and the educational value of surveying suited his taste. Even in his boyhood, from this period on he never found happiness in intercourse with his fellowmen or in reading; but it was in the active outdoor life that he was at his best. He was pronounced "a sober little prig" by no lesser personage than Lord Fairfax, when at fifteen he again took up his residence at Mount Vernon with Lawrence. On better acquaintance, Lord Fairfax changed his opinion, realizing that the lad was not cold and unresponsive by nature but as shy as a girl. In due time a friendship sprang up between the two—the young lad and the older man—which had a tremendous influence on the after-life of George Washington.

It was during these years that Washington developed great personal strength and endurance, and because of these physical qualities it was frequently a temptation on land or water to put his powers to the test. In fact, his greatest pleasure seemed to be in encountering danger which apparently lifted him in body and mind above his common level. During this time also his powers of decisiveness and swift judgment developed greatly. Riding was one of his greatest joys, and he early prepared for the years when he was to be so much in the saddle.

SHOWS WASHINGTON AS A YOUNG MAN

Remarkable Bust That Is Now the Properly of an English Curio Dealer.

COLLECTORS will be interested in the recent discovery in London of a remarkable bust of George Washington. It is very doubtful if there exists a similar work, taken at the same time of life. Experts consider the "find" as throwing a new light on an interesting period of the career of the "Father of His Country."

Most of the statues made of Washington show him at an advanced age when fame had crowned him with military and civic glory, but this new work depicts him in the "formative" stage of life—a young man just entering on his career.

This bust was put up for sale at Sotheby's auction rooms and sold for $50. American buyers did not attend the sale in large numbers, as they were more interested, apparently, in the sale of Lord Amherst's great library. The consequence was that an English dealer—Rochelle Thomas—acquired a treasure which should have been bought by Americans who go in for collecting Washington relics. Mr. Thomas considers the bust a very fine specimen of French bronze work, the artist's name being Fournier. It seems quite probable that the work was done in America, though how it came to Europe is not, at present, known. Washington is shown in the uniform of a general, and the work represents him at a period corresponding with the second year of his leadership of the American army. The uniform is so modeled as to indicate active wear; while the top button of his single-breasted vest is characteristically open. The expression on the face is one of calm mastery. One of the curious features connected with this work is that Washington is shown wearing a "pigtail"—that is, the braided wig of the period.

Quite a number of relics of Washington, Franklin, William Penn and other American history makers recently have found their way to English auction rooms. These doubtless have come from old members of the respective families who have died and whose estates have been disposed of.

The ancestors of Washington and Franklin lived near the little village of Sulgrave, in the Midlands of England. The earliest branch of the Washington family lived in Durham, about 1183. It is a little known fact that the Washingtons first went under the name of "Hertburn,' but William de Hertburn exchanged his village of Hertburn for the manor and village of Wessynton, and the family took the name of the estate from that time onward, calling themselves at first De Wessynton, which ultimately became changed into Washington. All through the midland district of England one comes upon relics of the Washington family, who were among the largest landowners of the district. Scattered throughout this country are hundreds of other relics similar to the recently discovered bust and it might pay an American antiquarian to make a pilgrimage to some of these American shrines in England.

TOWN WASHINGTON LOVED

WOMEN have done much at Alexandria, Va., to preserve the relics of the days of George Washington. It is not the capital of the nation, despite its name, that is richest in intimate associations with the life of the first president, but Alexandria, which stands midway between Mount Vernon and the city of Washington.

Alexandria played no small part in the formative years of Washington's youth and early manhood. A representative Virginia town, it stood then and for generations later for all that was best of colonial standards. Its people had much to do with the molding of Washington's character, and Washington richly repaid Alexandria, or Belle Haven as it was first called, by his never failing concern for its welfare and advancement.

Probably no surviving structure in Alexandria harbored Washington within its hospitable walls more frequently than the old Carlyle house, and certainly none was more directly associated with the foundation of the military side of his life. Strange as it may seem, for many years this historical landmark has been hidden away behind the battered front of Alexandria's once noted hotel, the Braddock house, occupying one corner of the inner courtyard, shut away from the public gaze and denied the outlook of the broad approach which it once enjoyed in the days of its well nigh baronial importance. Until a few years ago the Carlyle house was largely used as a storage place by a local dealer in colonial antiques, but a few patriotic Virginia women saved the building from further indignity, though not entirely from danger, as the old furniture found a new abiding place within the still more inflammable Braddock house, adjoining.

In 1732 John S. Carlyle imported from the isle of Wight the stone of which the house is built, and he absorbed for part of the foundation a portion of an old fort which had been built many years before for the protection of the English traders at Hunting Creek, as the place was then known, against the Indians. The barracks of that ancient defense became the cellar of the Carlyle house, and in those cool, dark, dry retreats were stored in Washington's day the bulging casks, cob-webbed bottles, and delicious old hams for which Virginia has long been noted.

Another part of the old fort forms the plaza at the rear of the house upon which the broad central hallway opens. It was upon this plaza, in the far away days, that the Carlyles and their guests gathered on summer evenings to discuss the questions of the time or to pass the hours chatting over a heartsome glass amid the soothing smoke of the fragrant Orononko. It was there the young people watched the moon rise over the river and took their pleasures in the decorous manner of those days.

Then, the gardens ran down to the river's bank and overlooked the docks at which the trading craft were moored—trading craft that came from over the seas to barter the silks and riches of the east and the tropic abundance of the West Indies in return for the famous tobacco with which Alexandria's one big warehouse was filled. That was a period of bounteous hospitality and courtly grace.

On the right of the broad hallway is the large drawing room. In Washington's day it was finished in gold and white, and there on many occasions he took an active part in ball and festivity and led many a fair Virginian through the stately steps of the minuet and the less exacting reel. The hallway itself, if tradition be correct, is not without its sentimental interest, for it was at the foot of the beautiful staircase of solid mahogany that Washington awaited the coming of the lovely Sally Fairfax upon a particular evening and while escorting her into the ballroom offered her his heart, which she rejected.

On the opposite side of this same hall is the blue and white room, which was John Carlyle's particular retreat. Within that room Washington received his commission as a member of General Braddock's staff in 1755. What that meant to Washington we can only partly divine, but there is no doubt of its significance to us as a nation because of what it taught him of the fighting ways of the British soldier.

From the broad portico of Mount Vernon Washington saw Braddock arrive with his transports and his regiments of red coated soldiery and pass onward to Alexandria, nine miles above, coming with the splendid traditions of the king's troops and with all the martial fanfare of regulars. As a leader of the local provincial troops Washington had won for himself a creditable renown, but here were soldiers supposedly of sterner stuff and higher military capabilities.

General Braddock promptly accepted the hospitable invitation of John Carlyle and established his headquarters under the roof of that gracious host, the little blue and white room becoming the council chamber in which were planned the preparations for that memorable but ill fated campaign against the Indians. Washington's previous experience as a leader of local troops against the savages made him welcome at those conferences and his keen judgment and practical advice earned for him Braddock's admiration and the invitation to serve upon the British general's staff. It is enough to add that in the trying work that followed the British records testify that "the Virginia officers and troops behaved like men and died like soldiers," and Washington came out of the strife unscathed and riper for the far more serious task that lay ahead of him.

The architectural student will find much to interest him and to warrant study in the Carlyle house. The old windows, the doorways, the primitive cupboards, chairboards, doorsteps, cornices, molding, etc., are exquisite in taste and rich in quaintness and elegance of detail. There they are as they were in Washington's time, and in common with the rest of the mansion are regarded as among the best specimens of the so-called colonial style.

In February, 1752, a market was instituted in Alexandria and the citizens were justly proud of their enterprise. The market place then lay directly in front of the approach to the Carlyle house and that same mart of country produce was intimately identified with Washington's domestic life at Mount Vernon and was one other means of displaying his common sense. We of today know but little of the hardships of that colonial period, and feasting was not always as abundant as the story book would have it. Rev. Mr. Weems, that chatty chronicler of the times, tells us that Alexandria then boasted more rightly of its beauty than its means of charming the palate.

"The neighborhood of Belle Haven was not a desert; on the contrary it was in many places a garden spot, abounding with luxuries. But its inhabitants, the wealthy, were not wise. By the successful culture of tobacco they had money. And having filled their coach houses with gilt carriages and their dining rooms with gilt glasses they began to look down upon the poorer sort and to talk about families.

"Of course it would never do for such great people to run market carts! Hence the poor Belle Havenites, though embosomed in plenty, were often in danger of gnawing their nails. And unless they could cater a lamb from some good natured 'cracker' or a leash of chickens from the Sunday negroes were obliged to sit down with long faces to a half graced dinner of salt meat and journey cake.

"This was the order of the day, A. D. '59, when Washington, just married to the wealthy young widow Custis, had settled at Mount Vernon, nine miles below Belle Haven. The unpleasant situation of the families at that place soon reached his ears. To a man of his character, with too much spirit to follow a bad example when he had the power to set a good one and too much wit to look for happiness anywhere but in his own bosom, it could not long be questionable what part he had to act.

"A market cart was instantly constructed, and regularly three times a week sent off to Belle Haven filled with nice roasters, kidney covered lamb and veal, green geese, fat ducks and gobblers, chickens by the basket, fresh butter, new laid eggs, vegetables and fruits of all sorts. Country gentlemen dining with their friends in town very soon remarked the welcome change in diet. 'Bless us all,' exclaimed they, 'what's the meaning of this? You invited us to family fare, and here you have given us a lord mayor's feast.' 'Yes,' replied the others, 'thank God for sending a Colonel Washington into our neighborhood.'"

Cut Off.

The world is well aware that a stern kaiser has forbidden his officers to dance the tango or to go to tango parties. They say that a young lieutenant met a friend in the streets of Berlin the other day and embraced him with fervor.

"I'm dying of loneliness!" said the lieutenant.

"What!" said the friend, "lonely in Berlin!"

"Just that," returned the other. "You can't go to anybody's house any more. They all dance the tango."—New York Evening Post.

BICYCLE NURSE IS LATEST

So Well Drilled Is This Berlin Corps They Often Beat the Hospital Ambulance.

The bicycle nurse is the most recent addition to the city hospital corps in Germany. The idea originated in Berlin.

In that city women nurses are given bicycles, and now a corps of these highly trained and drilled women is sent to the scene of any accident at a moment's notice. With such speed do they get ready to start that often they arrive on the scene before the hospital ambulance.

Many lives have been saved by this almost instantaneous response to a hurried call for help. There is much that the nurse can do before the ambulance comes, and not infrequently these few momenta mean the saving of life.

Each nurse wears a plain dark costume. There is a short skirt, a simple blouse, with white turnover linen collar, and a dark peaked cap with a triangle of stiff white linen in front. The nurse carries her small outfit strapped under the saddle of her bicycle.

The KITCHEN CABINET

ECONOMY is of priceless value. The loss of the top hoop means the loss of the barrel. Pick up a grain a day and add to your heap. You will soon learn by happy experience the power of littles as applied to intellectual processes and gains. J. S. Hart.

TRY THESE.

Cut into very small bits a cupful of stoned dates and add to them a cupful of hot water and a teaspoonful of baking soda. Set aside to cool while creaming a cup of sugar with a teaspoonful of melted butter and one beaten egg. Mix all these ingredients together, stir in the drained dates and add one and a quarter cupfuls of flour mixed with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven for 45 minutes. When taken from the oven sprinkle with powdered sugar and serve at once.

Cherry Pudding.—Cream three tablespoonfuls of butter add one and a third cupfuls of sugar, one egg separated and well beaten, one cup of milk, two cups of flour and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix all together and give a good beating. Pour this batter over a can of partly drained cherries and steam for half an hour. Make a sauce of the juice thickened with a little flour and made rich with butter.

Corn Meal Muffins.—Sift together three times one and a half cupfuls of pastry flour, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one and a fourth tablespoonfuls of cornmeal, half a teaspoonful of salt and three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; add three-fourths of a cup of milk, two well beaten eggs and three tablespoonfuls of melted butter. Stir to a smooth batter and bake in well greased pans 20 minutes.

Oranges and dates with a little chopped or finely cut apple and French dressing makes a good salad.

Cocoanut Indian Pudding.—Mix together one tablespoonful of fresh chopped cocoanut, two tablespoonfuls of indian meal, one tablespoonful of minute tapioca, one-half cup of molasses, one-fourth cup of sugar, one tablespoonful of butter, one quart of milk, and salt to taste. Pour into a buttered dish and bake two hours. Serve hot with cream.

A delicious doughnut made from raised bread dough is rolled thin and cut with a biscuit cutter. A spoonful of preserves, jelly or marmalade is placed in the center, the edges are wet and another thin biscuit is placed on top and pressed together then put to rise. Fry in deep fat until brown and roll in powdered sugar before serving.

Failure is, in a sense, the highway to success, inasmuch as every discovery of what is false leads us to seek earnestly after what is true, and ever fresh experience points out some form of error which we shall afterward carefully avoid.

DISHES WORTH TRYING.

A new way of stuffing potatoes is the following. Bake well shaped potatoes until soft, cut off a slice from the top, remove the potato and let stand in a hot bowl. While the potatoes are baking, cook together a quarter of a cupful each of carrot, celery and onion. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan and add the vegetables; add a spoonful of chopped parsley, beat an egg, add salt and mix together with the potato. Fill the cases with the vegetable, heaping them well; dot with a bit of butter and put into the oven to brown.

A nice sauce to serve as a gravy with these potatoes is prepared from the water in which the carrots and other vegetables were cooked. To a tablespoonful of butter in a sauce pan add a tablespoonful of flour, then add a half cup of the liquor in which the vegetables were cooked and a half cup of rich milk. Season well and serve in a sauceboat.

Cheese Eclairs. Make a souffle of three tablespoonfuls of melted butter and three of flour cooked together; add a half a teaspoonful of salt and the same of paprika; stir in a cupful and a fourth of milk, cook until smooth, add two well beaten yolks and a half cup of grated cheese. Stir until the cheese is melted, then fold in the beaten whites. Add a half cup of whipped cream and use this to fill eclairs made from the following recipe: Add half a cup of butter to one cupful of boiling water, sift in one cupful of pastry flour, a dash of paprika and a little salt. Stir and cook until the mixture leaves the sides of the pan, then add three unbeaten eggs, one at a time, beating well between each egg; add a little grated cheese and place in strips three inches long on a baking sheet. Bake in a quick oven. Cut a slit in the side and remove the doughy center and fill with the cheese mixture.

FOODS FOR TODAY.

Some ways of serving the common things in an uncommon way:

Hominy Crescents.—Soak half a cup of hominy in half a cup of water 15 minutes and put to cook in a double boiler with a cup and a half of milk; when done, add a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoon of paprika, a grating of nutmeg and the yolks of two eggs; spread in a shallow pan a half an inch deep. When cool cut in crescents, crumb, egg and crumb, then fry in deep fat.

Baked Ham.—Soak the ham over night; in the morning put in the kettle one onion, one carrot, six cloves six peppercorns, one bay leaf and water to cover. Simmer for two hours. Remove the skin, place on a rack in the baking pan, baste often with a cupful of cider and cup of water in which the ham was boiled. Bake for two or three hours. When done, stir one tablespoonful of brown sugar in two of cider, rub over the ham and brown. Serve hot with the liquor from the pan, strained and skimmed.

Fill cream puffs made the size of a walnut with seasoned cream cheese which is made rich with whipped cream. Serve with the salad.

Frozen Cheese With Figs.—Wash two good sized cream cheeses and beat with them a half cup of stiffly beaten cream, sweeten to taste and bury in ice and salt. When ready to serve, cut in slices and with a small biscuit cutter cut into rounds; make a small depression in the center and fill with a rich preserved fig. Steam end up.

Beets and Turnips.—Cook until tender even sized turnips and beets; scoop out the centers and fill one with canned peas, the other with small string beans. Season well and arrange alternately on the serving dish and garnish with parsley.

Tomatoes and Corn.—Stew down half a can of tomatoes with onion and parsley, strain them and put in layers with well seasoned corn, with crumbs and butter on top. Bake brown.

Cold fish served with chopped pickles and salad dressing makes a good salad.

If this whole world followed you—
Followed to the letter—
Would it be a nobler world,
All deceit and falsehood hurled
From it altogether;
Malice, [illegible]hness and lust
Banished from beneath the crust
Covering human hearts from view
Tell me, if it followed you,
Would the world be better?

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

A change is always welcome for paring any of the common dishes the unusual combination is sure to find favor.

Knowledge in an uncommon degree is what the world calls wisdom. It might add that food combinations which are startling, unusual and appetizing are always the product of the artist genius. The following is a dish which has been originated by one of these same artists:

Round Steak.—Cut strips of round steak, flatten until quite thin; put upon each a slice of bacon, a slice of pickle and a slice of onion. Roll up and tie with a string. Dust each with flour, season well and add a little broth or water after the rolls have been well browned in a little hot fat. Simmer until very tender, never allowing the meat to boil. Serve the gravy poured around the rolls after removing the string.

Fudge Cookies.—Cream a half cupful of butter, add one cup of brown sugar, one-half cup of sour milk, a teaspoonful of soda, two squares of chocolate melted, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of cocoa, one-half cupful of nut meats when chopped. Mix well and drop by teaspoonfuls on a buttered sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

Cream Prune Pie.—Put through a sieve a cupful of stewed prunes, one cup of milk, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, a third of a cup of sugar, yolks of two eggs well beaten, put all together and pour into a pie plate lined with crust. Add the well beaten whites and bake until firm. The whites may be stirred in with the baked together or the custard may be baked and the meringue put on when browned afterward.

Nellie Maxwell

That Oak Park Idea.

Some Chicago ladies have been criticising the "ragtime novelists." They complain because novels nowadays are not "slices of life," but rather "a ragged hole in life into which the authors have poked and experimented." This is complicated, but when Mrs. Johnson of Oak Park comes down to tacks we understand.

"A good criterion upon which to judge a book, to my notion, is to ask yourself whether you would tolerate the hero or heroine in real life. The situation in American literature is such that we would not tolerate acquaintance of the characters in novelists."

On that principle what about old favorites? Would you shake hands with Bill Sykes? Crawley is no gentleman in a his title; the marquis of Steyne wouldn't be safe even to meet, you tolerate Iago and Lady Macbeth it would never do to invite either of these persons to tea in Oak Park.—Harper's Weekly.

Sky's Dark Region.

The dark regions in the sky, suggesting an obstruction of light by unseen solid bodies, are discussed in the Astrophysical Journal by Dr. E. E. Barnard. The so-called "black holes" in the Milky Way have long been suspected by Doctor Barnard of containing not vacancies, but some kind of obscuring body lying between us and the white sprinkling of stars which cuts off their light. Working with a 40-inch telescope, he photographed one of the holes or spots on July 27 last, from this view, secured on a night "one would not question moment that a real object—a looking, but very feebly brighter than the sky—occupies the place of spot."

The One Objection.

"How do you like your new razor?"

"It's too thorough. Not only shave, but it removes moles and anything else that gets in the way."

Samuel A. Gentry Praises Bears Emulsion.

Best Thing to Build up Randown System, Cure Long Standing Coughs and Weak Lungs.

Dear Sir:

Every winter I have been getting a dry hacking cough that lasted me through the whole winter; and at times I had such pains in my lungs that I could hardly stand it. After using a great many different things I purchased a bottle of Bear's Emulsion. The cough and soreness left me in a couple days and I can honestly say I don't beleive there is any preparation that will releive a cough, heal the lungs and tone up the system, after being rundown from a cough, with as much satisfaction as this preparation does. I have also used it with great success with my little two-year-old boy.

OPTOMETRIST

IS Your Child Handicapped in his or her physical and mental development by defective vision? Out of 100,000 school children examined in New York city, nearly 30 per cent. were found to be in need of glasses. In Boston the percentage was found to be slightly over 20 per cent., and most of these children were down on the books as "stupid," "stubborn" or unruly. In Philadelphia 354 children were discovered who could not read ordinary writing on a blackboard at a distance of twenty feet. You should make sure by a thorough examination at the hands of a competent optometrist. That your child is not among this vast army of little citizens who suffer from defective eyesight, delays often result seriously. My examinations are made by the most scientific accurate methods. If it is found that glasses are not required you will be told so frankly and no charge made for the examination.

HUDSON Six-40

$1750

(f.o.b. Detroit)

The Most Talked-About Car in the Country

See This Innovation

A few days ago the first Six-40 was shipped from the HUDSON factory. Before this time the first month's output had been ordered by users who had not seen the car.

They were sold on these startling facts:

That the streamline body, the equipment, the new features were like the latest HUDSON Six-54, the handsomest car of the season.

That the weight would be under 3,000 pounds—under any comparable Four.

That the operative cost would be less than any equal-powered Four.

That the price would be $1750, f. o. b. Detroit—way below the price of Fours of equal power and size and class.

Think What This Means

Sixes have been high-priced, heavy, costly to operate. For that reason many have been forced to buy Fours.

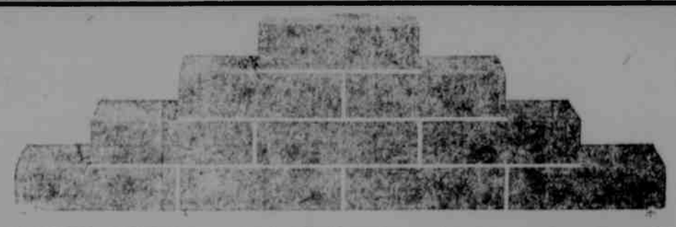
Now comes this Six-40. It weighs 500 pounds less than last year's HUDSON "37"—a Four. It costs one-fourth less to operate. And it far underseils any Four in its class.

You legions of men who seek lightness and economy find them now in this Six-40—beyond any Four you know.

A Distinguished Car

In addition, here is the new streamline body. Here are all the new features which characterize the new HUDSON Six-54.

Disappearing tonneau seats. Gasoline tank in cowl dash. Left side drive. Extra tires ahead of the front door.



Up to six months ago, no car at any price offered so many attractions.

And a car designed by Howard E. Coffin, the great HUDSON engineer. A car that embodies all the best HUDSON standards.

Our first Six-40 has just arrived. It is now on exhibition. Come, see it and ride in it while it is new. The car marks a new era in motor-car history, and all of you should know it.

THE REPUBLICAN.

VOLUME 38 — OAKLAND, MARYLAND, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1914. — NUMBER 52.

GABRETT REPRESENTATIVES IN THE HBOSE OFOELEGATES

Commending Mr. Wm. W. Savage for His Faithful Service.

State House
Annapolis, Md., Feb. 23, 1914.

Editor of The Republican:-

For a new member it is doubtful if another county in the State can boast so efficient, popular and successful Delegate in the entire House as Hon. William W. Savage, of Garrett county, has demonstrated himself to be. Mr. Savage came to Annapolis less than 50 days ago, a complete stranger to every one (excepting his immediate colleagues, of course), and everyone a stranger to him. He was a novice in politics and the working of the Legislature and knew practically nothing of "the game" as it is played here. He was a member of the minority party, and the smallest minority, numerically, that has been in the Maryland General Assembly for many years—so small, as a matter-of-fact, that he could expect nothing from his Republican brethren by way of deals or combinations.

Today, notwithstanding this combination of handicaps, Mr. Savage is one of the foremost men in the House of Delegates, and will leave behind him when he departs at the end of the 1914 session a lasting impress of splendid representative ability, legislative achievement, and pleasant social and personal memories.

Mr. Savage began by paying strict attention to the business of the House, studying the procedure, and becoming acquainted with his legislative associates. His inherent ability and pleasant personality did the rest. Everyone whom he met for the first time became his friend at once; he immediately commanded their respect and invited their sincere regard. The other new members saw in him a forceful ally, and the "old stagers" recognized in him a conservative, broad-minded, and conscientious co-worker of high ideals and strong principles. And so he just naturally developed into a potent, forceful and conspicuous legislator, an energetic, painstaking and resourceful representative of the people--into one who "does things."

One of the more recent, and perhaps the most notable, of Mr. Savage's achievements--a result which was due largely to his tactful efforts and diplomatic handling--was the successful steering of the "Garrett county Local Option Bill,' which originated in the Senate with that other talented and aggressive representative from Garrett county—Senator Harvey J. Speicher—is author. When this bill went to House after passing tranquilly gh the Senate, it was met by one most formidable "lobbies" that ever opposed a local measure. that was arrayed against he Speicher Local Option Bill can never fully appreciated by those who were actually in the ground and knew the whole of its inside workings and powerful manipulations. Every influence that could be enlisted, every pressure that could be put on, every wire that could be pulled, every screw that could be turned was set in motion, in harmonious unison, with the one and only one purpose in view—to kill the Speicher Local Option Bill.

But Delegate Savage never faltered. If he at times seemed to hesitate, it was only to consider carefully the stupendous task before him, and then to go about that task with studied design and well planned purpose. If he became discouraged, no one ever knew of it; if he failed in one direction, he redoubled his zeal in another; if his plans were upset one day, he strengthened his lines the next and so on throughout the entire struggle. But through it all, he was always the same—pleasant, smiling, genial, companionable. He went among the other hundred members of the House and laid his case before them He was sincere, earnest, frank--and above all, truthful. He had promised his people before he was elected that if they sent him to the Maryland Legislature he would give them this Bill if it were possible for him to do so--he would pass the Speicher Bill through the House when it came from the Senate. He had said to the voters of Garrett county, "If you expect me to vote for liquor, do not vote for me." He had given his word and he wanted to make that word good—as he had always done in everything he had undertaken, throughout his whole life. Because of the respect the other members have for Mr. Savage, they listened to him; because of their confidence in him they believed him, and because of their friendship for him they promised him their support. Thus he lined up enough members to put the bill through even though the Temperance Committee should be ruled by the bill's opponents. And it was undoubtedly because of this situation that the Maryland State Liquor Dealer's Association and the hostile forces nearer home at least gave up the fight, completely defeated and thoroughly routed, and the bill was put through triumphantly, first with a favorable report by the Committee, and then advancing to the third-reading calendar without an opposing voice or vote.

True Mr. Savage had the cooperation and assistance of the Senator from Garrett and his trustworthy colleague, the Hon. Elliott C. Harvey, but it is but simple justice to say for Mr. Savage that he was always in the thick of the fight, leading the way toward that success which many another man under similar circumstances and conditions would have found too formidable and would have gracefully surrendered.

Delegate Savage has throughout the session reflected credit upon his county and the people who sent him here. His usefulness is not yet at an end, however; his services will be more valuable and fruitful as time goes on. Delegate Savage will be heard from many times more before the Legislature adjourns.

His people in Garrett county—his neighbors and friends—should be proud of him, as everybody who knows him and has watched him here in Annapolis are proud of mm.

There are too few Delegates like him in the Maryland General Assembly—too few.

SPEICHER COUNTY WIDE LOCAL OPTION BILL PASSED

The House of Delegates Yesterday Afternoon By A Vote of 81 to 3.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 25.

Seldom has there been more excitement over a piece of local legislation than over the Speicher Local Option Bill for Garrett county, which passed the House late this afternoon. The bill is now on its way to the Governor and will shortly be enacted into law.

By this measure Senator Speicher has fulfilled to the letter the pledge he made last year to the voters of Garrett that he would put through a bill permitting a vote on the liquor question if he was returned to the Senate. And the bill received third and final reading and passage by the House with a vote of 81 to 3. Those who opposed the bill were Delegates John A. House of Baltimore city, Brust of Frederick, and Gunnett of Allegany. Each of them voted no for purely personal reasons.

The passage of the bill was pulled off in the face of odds for not until the roll call was begun did its opponents lose hope. G. Semmes Hamill of Oakland, and William Miller of Accident, were on the floor of the House to the last minute and both were reported to be straining every energy to have the bill either held back or brought out and recommitteed to the Temperance Committee. Senator Speicher was also on the job and wherever a break appeared in the lineup he was galvanized into action and made appeals to the proper sources which resulted in a straightening of the tangle.

During the present week it was reported that some of the Garrett delegation might ultimately be won over to fight the bill. There was no absolute proof that these reports were true but nevertheless there seemed a lack of agressiveness on the part of some of the county people to get the measure up for its final reading. Speicher when he learned of this condition made the direct request that the bill be brought up in its proper place and this was done.

Opponents of the bill had looked to Baltimore city for support, but their appeals fell on deaf ears. The city took the position that the Garrett delegation had been sent here pledged to pass the bill, which was a demonstration that the people of the county wanted the measure. Consequently, they said, the only just course was to support the bill.

While some of the city legislators were perhaps not in this exact personal frame of mind they took that position after hearing from the city leaders who turned down flat a proposition to fight the bill. On Tuesday night the measure was really ready for its final reading but some of the Baltimore people were excused from the evening session and it was deemed best to hold the bill back until the full representation was present. This afternoon before the Senate third reading file was reached a motion to adjourn the House was made at the conclusion of a long debate and fight on child labor legislation. Speaker Trippe was as good as his word, however, and he asked that the adjournment motion be withdrawn to permit the reading file to be cleared. The first bill up was the Speicher measure and it went through the house like a piece of greased lightning. At the conclusion of the roll call the Senator was overwhelmed with congratulations. "I feel like I've got a burden of many tons off my shoulders," he exclaimed and this was perhaps true for the legislator had done little else during the past fortnight than plug for his bill. The fact is generally acknowledged that hardly another Republidan legislator could have pulled the trick in the face of a heavy Democratic majority.

A futile attempt was even made last week to mix the bill up in the oyster fight, which is the main issue here at present. The threat was made that if the Garrett House members refuse to support the oystermen the local option bill would be killed. Again Speicher took hold of the situation and after his appeal for fair play "Cy" Cummings of Montgomery, leader of the repeal forces, pledged himself to see that the county bill was decided on its merits and without bias on account of the position on oyster or other legislation that some of its backers might take. And Cummings kept his promise, being on hand today when the bill came out to hold the oystermen in line in the event any trick was tried by the opposition. Sponsors of other local option and anti-liquor shipping measures have taken heart at the manner the Speicher bill was passed and have anticipated that their measure likewise might be sent over. They are doomed to disappointment, however, for several Democratic leaders have made plain that passage of the Speicher bill was permitted largely on the personal account of its author and framer, who has perhaps a larger circle of friends among both Democrats and Republicans here than any other minority member.

The attempts to repeal oyster planting legislation is about the only topic of interest here at this time. Willy nilly the law makers from inland counties have been drawn into the fight and though much against the consent of many of them, they are being forced to drop all other legislation in the interest of king bivalve. The chance of the oyster culture statues being repealed is promblematical. Both sides are confident that they will ultimately win out and it is pure guess work when any one attempts to predict what the ultimate result will be. Certain it is that the vote either way will be extremely close. The members from tidewater counties are in deadly earnest about their plans to repeal the planting laws and no compromise will be considered until the repealing forces are absolutely licked.

In connection with the oyster squabble the Senate and House came near engaging in a deadly verbal combat during last and this week. Senator Mudd of Charles was reprimanded by Speaker Trippe for lobbying among the Garrett House delegation on February 18 in favor of the repeal bill. Mudd resented the Speaker's action and after speaking in the Senate on a point of personal privilege the Democratic Senators framed and had Senator Zihlman offer a resolution condemning the Speaker's action. Consideration of the resolution was held off until last Tuesday to give Mr. Trippe an opportunity to apologize but instead the Speaker stuck by his guns and the House indorsed his position. Then the Democratic Senators for some apparent reason grew chilly toward the reprimanding proposition and open appeals were made within the Senate chamber yesterday to young Mudd to have the resolution withdrawn. The Charles county man saved his Democratic colleagues a bit of embarassment by complying and the incident was closed.

The Democrats here propose to make road legislation a straight party measure and the indications now are that the final road loan appropriation will not total over $3,000,000 if it reaches that amount.

Governor Goldsborough sent his last batch of appointments to the Senate today. For the most part the incumbent officials were reappointed. The bulk of the nominations will soon be confirmed by the Senate.

THE DEATH RECORD

MRS. EDWARD WARNICK

Following an operation for appendicitis, in the Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland, Mrs. Edward Warnick, aged 40 years, of Bloomington, this county, died on last Friday night. Mrs. Warnick was taken to the Cumberland institution earlier in the week. She is survived by her husband and two children.

NORMAN ENGLE.

The severe snowstorm which raged last Monday and Tuesday cost one human life in the vicinity of Meyersdale, the victim being Norman Engle, an aged citizen of Salisbury, who undertook to walk from Meyersdale to his home Monday evening, was overcome by the storm and took refuge in Howard Miller's sugar camp where he was found 34 hours later, fatally frozen.

Norman Engle, who would have been 70 years old had he lived until March 12th, was the son of David Engle, who died some time ago at the age of 81 years and was buried at New Germany, Md. He was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Beveridge, of Barton, Md., who with five sons and one daughter survives, as follows: Rev. C. S. Engle, Greenville, Pa., George Engle, Greensburg, Pa., David, Norman and Jesse Engle, and Miss Bertha Engle, all of whom are at home. He is also survived by one brother and three sisters—Patrick Engle, Bittinger, Md.; Mrs. Jane Dodds, Mrs. Barbara Bittinger and Mrs. Lizzie Bittinger, all of Terra Alta, W. Va.

During the Civil War Mr Engle served as a private along with his father and two brothers in Co. D, Third Maryland Volunteers. He was a member of M. C. Lowry Post, No. 217, Grand Army of the Republic of Salisbury, and an earnest, consistent member of the Evangelical church of Salisbury. His pastor, Rev. O. C. Fry, had charge of the funeral services.

The Man Who Has Made His Promise Good

STATE SENATOR HARVEY J. SPEICHER

"In reference to one of the most important questions that affects the people of our county and State, I want to state that if again elected I will pass a bill at the next Legislature giving the right to the voters of Garrett county to say whether or not liquor shall be sold within its borders.

—Extract from Senator Speicher's Platform.

Upon this platform Senator Speicher made his campaign during both the primary and general elections. He was nominated in the face of determined opposition and after a tremendous effort he was elected, although by a small majority.

He went to Annapolis fully determined to carry out his pledge to the people and he has done it in the face of bitter opposition. Probably no other man in the Senate could have accomplished what Senator Speicher has done. He has made 'good, as his friends knew he would, by putting through the Legislature and seeing enacted into law that which he had pledged himself to do.

FIRST BILL FOR GARRETT THROUGH

Road Measure As "Amended" Now In Governor's Hands

The first Garrett county bill to pass both branches of the Legislature was Delegate Shartzer's road bill, No. 1, which was amended in the Senate by striking out all after the words "A Bill," and inserting entirely new matter, Mr. Shartzer approving the Senate bill. It will be seen that all that was left of Mr. Shartzer's original bill was the two words of five letters, "A Bill." The bill as adopted is as follows: By the committee:

Strike out all after the words "A Bill," and insert in lieu thereof the following:

An act to add a new section to Article 12 of the Code of Public Local Laws of Maryland, title "Garrett County," subtitle "Roads," to follow immediately after Section No. 206, and to be known and numbered as Section 206 A.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of Maryland, that a new section be added to Article 12 of the Code of Public Local Laws of Maryland, title "Garrett County," subtitle "Roads," to follow immediately after Section No. 206, and to be known and numbered as Section 206 A, and to read as follows:

Section 206 A. Any person or persons, firm or corporation, who shall put, place or pile any lumber, logs, props, cross ties or any other obstruction upon the limits of any highways in Garrett county over which the County Commissioners thereof have control or supervison, or who shall negligently permit or allow any of said obstructions, or any wagon, cart, sled, traction engine, automobile or any other vehicle to stand or remain on the limits of any said highways for more than twelve hours in any one place, and without the written consent of the County Commissioners of said Garrett county, or who shall drag or snake any log, props, cross ties, poles, lumber or any commodity of any kind on or over any of said highways (other than by being hauled on some vehicle) or who shall dig or otherwise tear up or disturb any of said highways, except by the authority and under the direction of the road supervisor or other official having control of said particular highway and engaged in working and repairing the same, shall be guilty ot a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof before any Justice of the Peace of said county, or by presentment and indictment in the Circuit Court of said county, shall be fined not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each offense, together with the costs of prosecution, and upon failure to pay said fine and costs, said offender shall be committed to jail until the same is paid or until released by due process of law.

Section 2. All fines imposed and collected under the provisions of this Act shall be immediately paid over to the County Commissioners of said Garrett county, to be expended by them in the maintenance and repair of the county roads in said county.

Section 3. And be it further enacted, That this Act shall take effect from the date of its passage.

MERCURY STRUCK LOW MARK

Thermometer Registered 27½ Degrees Below Zero Yesterday Morning.

Cold weather records in Garrett county for the present winter were broken yesterday morning when the mercury stood at 27½ degrees below zero at the Weber green houses and 25 degrees by accredited Government thermometers located at different points within the town limits.

The nearest approach to this record was two years ago when 40 degrees below zero was registered.

As a result of the extreme cold many water pipes were frozen which caused some damage to properties.

Dr. Hare To Preach.

Dr. T. M. Hare, Superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon League will preach in St. Paul's M. E. church on next Sunday morning at 10:30 and at Mountain Lake Park in the evening. All are cordially invited. Dr. Hare has taken the place of Wm. H. Anderson, former Superintendent, and comes to us from West Virginia, where he had great success.

Married.

WHITE—DAWSON—Two very popular young people, the groom, Mr. Robert Burns White, of Oakland, and the bride, Miss Catherine Phoebus Dawson, of Mountain Lake Park, surprised their friends and relatives Monday by hieing themselves off to Cumberland where they were joined in wedlock by the Rev. Mr. Dawson of that city. The couple returned to the Park the same evening. This paper extends its best wishes.

Mr. George Falkenstein, of Terra Alta, spent yesterday in Oakland on a visit to his brother, Mr. J. M. Falkenstein.

W. A. SMITH BEAPPOINTED FISH COMMISSIONER

Garrett Countain Will Retain Present Position for Another Two Years.

Governor Goldsborough last Thursday night sent the name of Mr. William A. Smith, of Hoyes, to the Senate for confirmation as Fish Commissioner for the Western shore of Maryland.

Mr. Smith was appointed two years ago to this position and he has been a painstaking public official performing his duties to the best of his ability and giving entire satisfaction.

Band Meeting Tonight.

All who are interested in the reorganization of the Oakland band are requested to meet at the City Council chamber this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Members of the old band are especially requested to be present as well as those who anticipate joining the new organization.

Orphans' Court Proceeding.

Tuesday the regular semi-monthly session of the Orphan's Court for Garrett county was held. On account of the blizzard then prevailing Chief Judge Kamp could not reach Oakland and Court was conducted by his Associates, Judges Moon and Harvey.

Agnes Burdock qualified as executor of the estate of George Burdock, late of Garrett county.

Mr. G. Arthur Fraley was appointed administrator of the estate of the late Peter P. Lohr.

Mr. J. M. Falkenstein left Oakland this morning for a week's visit to Roanoke, Va.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

The good old Virginia corn bread and griddle cakes are a treat when made as they were originally.

Virginia Corn Cakes.—Scald a pint of cornmeal with three-fourths of a pint of boiling water, cover and let stand while you separate and beat two eggs. Add a cup of sour milk, a teaspoonful of soda to the yolks and a teaspoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of sugar to the meal. Beat the ingredients all together and fold in the whites of the eggs the very last. Have the griddle well heated, and bake a rich brown before turning.

Mock Venison.—Lay a leg of mutton in a dish with diluted vinegar, a fifth vinegar and four-fifths water; add two small sliced onions, six pepper corns, six cloves, a dozen allspice, four bay leaves and one tablespoonful of crushed juniper berries. Roast the mutton after it has laid in this vinegar solution four days. Use the vinegar to baste with when roasting.

Hominy Pudding.—Scald two cups of milk in a double boiler, add a tablespoonful of cornstarch diluted with a little cold milk, cook for ten minutes. Reheat two cups of cooked hominy, add the thickened milk, one cupful of sugar, a fourth of a teaspoon of salt, one square of chocolate melted, two eggs well beaten and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Pour into a buttered baking dish and bake until firm in the center. A few raisins may be added, if desired.

Raised Doughnuts.—Take a cup of butter, a cup of sugar, a teaspoon of cinnamon or nutmeg, and two eggs well beaten. Work this mixture into tow cupfuls of bread dough ready for its second rising, and let it rise an hour or so. When light, add a few chopped raisins, citron and currants. Roll thin, cut out and fry in deep fat. Roll in powdered sugar before serving.

Prune Souffle.—Remove the stones from half a pound of stewed prunes, press through a sieve, add the yolks of three eggs slightly beaten and four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Fold in the whites of four eggs, turn into a buttered baking dish and bake until firm. Serve at once with whipped cream and sugar.

O trust ye aye in Providence,
For Providence is kind,
And bear ye a' life's changes
Wi' a calm and tranquil mind.
Though pressed and hemmed
On every side,
Ha' faith and ye'll win through
For like blade of grass
Has its ain drop o' dew.

One of the chief recommendations for the casserole is that it is a fine help in using up left-over meats. Take two cupfuls of boiled rice, two cupfuls of chopped or sliced meat that has been left from dinner, a cup of brown or cream sauce, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, one of parsley, a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of red pepper. Line the casserole a half inch deep with the boiled rice. In another dish melt a tablespoonful of butter, add a tablespoonful of flour and stir until smooth, then add the seasonings, the brown or white sauce, the meat, and finish the top with another layer of rice. Steam in a pan of hot water for 45 minutes, then serve with tomato sauce. This may be made in a granite dish, unmolded on a platter, and the tomato sauce poured around it.

Beef Steak Pie.—This is a dish that may be most palatable if nicely made. Line a baking dish with a good plain paste. Parboil four potatoes for ten minutes, and drain. Take four cups of cold cooked steak, cut in dice, fill the dish by adding a layer of meat and a layer of sliced potatoes, a few mushrooms. Season each layer until all the meat and vegetables are used. Roll out some paste, and cover, leaving a hole in the top in which a funnel is inserted. After it is well baked pour into the funnel two cupfuls of brown sauce. Bake about 45 minutes.

Stuffed Peppers.—This is a dish which is growing in popularity. Take two cupfuls of chopped cooked meat, and mix with a cup of sausage; add a half cup of boiled rice, a seasoning of paprika, one egg, and mix well. Fill the peppers, after parboiling them five minutes, and bake until tender. Or the peppers may be cooked in tomato and the meat in balls cooked until tender and served with the sauce poured around the peppers and balls.

Cold cooked fish makes most appetizing salads.

"There is no 'age limit.' Many people do not learn how to live until they have passed fifty. Gladstone at eight-six was brilliant. Goethe at eight-four, found life full of interest. You are never old until you think you are."

VALUE OF VEGETABLES IN OUR DIET.

The green, succulent vegetables are valuable chiefly for the mineral salts they contain and the flavor and variety they give to the menu. They contain but little starch and less protein. However, they add bulk to the food and are of great value in keeping up the peristaltic action of the intestines. For this reason alone, if for no other, they should be served once a day on our tables the year round.

The object in cooking vegetables is to soften the fiber and make it more easily digested.

The cooking of vegetables, the serving and seasoning, is an art and a science which is yet but touched upon by the average cook.

We must realize the importance of vegetable food before we are willing to put study upon the manner of cooking and serving.

It is well to remember that all of the odoriferous vegetables are much more wholesome if cooked in boiling salted water in an uncovered dish. When cooked in a tight kettle it not only spoils the food but makes the house uninhabitable.

All green vegetables should be cooked in an uncovered dish, which insures the keeping of the green color.

Spinach should be cooked without the addition of any water. After it is well washed there is enough moisture left on the leaves to cook so succulent a vegetable. As soon as a green vegetable loses its color in cooking, it loses also its food value.

Throw spinach into a hot kettle, tossing it up frequently to keep it from catching on the kettle; after 15 minutes' cooking, remove it from the fire and chop fine, season well, return to the saucepan and let stand until ready to serve. Garnish with hard cooked eggs, cut in slices.

It is well to scrutinize your own short comings before calling attention to those of your neighbors. "You have a hole in your tail," said the sieve to the needle.

We awaken in others the same attitude of mind we hold toward them.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS.

Sour cream added to a boiled dressing will add richness and is just as good as sweet cream, and it will whip as well.

A delicious jelly may be made of any chopped left-over meat mixed with gelatine. Serve on lettuce with a salad dressing.

Salads may be made of any chopped left-over meats, such as veal, lamb or fowl, and adding to any cold cooked vegetable left from a previous meal.

A few tablespoonfuls of canned corn and tomato may be mixed together with a cupful of bread crumbs; makes a nice dish and you will have the satisfaction of having saved something.

When a few lima beans are left, mash them, thicken a little milk with flour and butter, add the bean puree, a bit of onion juice, and serve a nice cream soup.

Dry cake crumbs make excellent puddings when baked with a custard poured over them.

To clean a piano case: Take a perfectly clean piece of canton flannel, wring it out in hot water as dry as possible and drop on it a few drops of olive oil. Rub a small section of the case with the damp flannel, and immediately rub dry with a dry flannel. Then polish with a piece of chamois skin. Rub with the grain of the wood, and do not stop at a dozen rubs. If the oil is not all rubbed off, breathe on the wood and rub again until it shines.

To clean piano keys, dampen a piece of flannel with alcohol and wipe them carefully, drying well. Do not touch the wood with the alcohol.

When there are two or three kinds of canned sauce left, and not enough to serve, mix them; put them through a sieve, add water, thickening, butter, and serve with a cottage pudding.

Silk stockings, if carefully run at the heel and toe before wearing and then washed out in cold water each time, will wear very much longer than if not so treated.

Ancient and Modern Bread.

There is no city in the world where so much bread is consumed as in Paris. It is estimated that every inhabitant eats one pound a day on the average. Even in past centuries the French, especially Parisians, had a horror of stale bread. And as in those days people manufactured their own bread they had a curious way of making it palatable. Strange as it may seem, the bread prepared, huge round or square slabs, was used as a dish on which the meat was carved and bore the name of "tranchoirs," or "tailloirs." The juice of the meat having penetrated into the bread imparted a pleasant taste and prevented it from becoming dry.—Bakers' Weekly.
